SIR RICHARD SCROPE, 1st Baron Scrope of Bolton, b. in 1327. This gallant soldier was knighted by EDWARD III. at the battle of Durham, where the Scotch were defeated in 1346, and was present at the siege of Calais in the same year. Without attempting to follow this nobleman through all his martial exploits, which, however, stand recorded by their eye-witnesses, the several royal, noble, and knightly deponents in the celebrated controversy sustained by him with Sir Richard Grosvenor, for the right of bearing his family coat of arms, it is enough to say, that between 1346 and 1385, a period of forty years, there was scarcely a battle of note in England, France, Spain, or Scotland, where the English forces were engaged, in which Scrope did not gain honour. But as a statesman he was still more distinguished. He was lord high treasurer to EDWARD III., and twice lord chancellor of England in the reign of RICHARD II., by both which sovereigns he was entrusted with many other employments of honour and confidence. Walsingham states him to have been remarkable for his extraordinary wisdom and integrity, and records his firmness in refusing to put the great seal as chancellor to the profuse grants made by RICHARD II. to his favourites. When RICHARD, incensed at this, sent messenger after messenger to Scrope, "desiring him forthwith to return the great seal, he refused to deliver it to any other person than to the king himself." Lord Scrope was summoned to parliament continuously during the reigns of EDWARD III. and RICHARD II., and was a trier of petitions on many occasions. In 1385, he challenged the right of Sir Robert Grosvenor to bear the arms, "Azure, a bend, or;" and the memorable suit, instituted for the decision of this heraldic controversy, lasted upwards of four years, and was at length decided in his favour, Scrope having established, by the evidence of a vast number of deponents, consisting of the most distinguished men of the day, from John of Gaunt, the King's uncle, to Chaucer, the poet, who was then a squire at arms, that "his ancestors had continually borne the contested coat from the Conquest." Lord Scrope built the stately castle of Bolton, in Richmondshire, and d. full of honours, at the age of seventy-three, 4th HENRY IV., 1403. His name is among those of the peers who assented to the deposition of RICHARD II.: but his heir apparent, the Earl of Wilt, sacrificed his life in the service of that unfortunate sovereign; and his younger son, Sir Stephen Scrope, adhered to the dethroned monarch with admirable fidelity. Lord Scrope m. Blanche, dau. of Sir William de la Pole, by whom (who d. before 1378) he had issue,

I. SIR WILLIAM SCROPE, K.G., created EARL OF WILT, and appointed treasurer of England, in the reign of RICHARD II., by which sovereign he was greatly esteemed, and employed in numerous important services. (See SCROPE, EARL OF WILT.)

II. ROGER, 2nd Lord Scrope of Bolton, who s. his father in the title and estates, and was the continuator of the family of SCROPES, BARONS OF BOLTON.

III. STEPHEN (Sir), Knt., of Bentley and Castle Combe, ancestor of the SCROPES OF CASTLE COMBE, WILT. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

IV. Richard, archbishop of York, beheaded for conspiring against HENRY IV.

Lord Scrope, who was a noble benefactor to the church, d. in 1403, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR ROGER LE SCROPE, 2nd Baron Scrope, of Bolton, summoned to parliament, 2 October, and 23 November, 1403. His lordship m. Margaret, eldest dau. and co-heir of Robert, Lord Tiptoft, or Tibetot, with whom he acquired the manor of Langor, Notta, and dying 3 December, 1403, was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD LE SCROPE, 3rd baron, but never summoned to parliament. This nobleman, in the 7th HENRY V., attended the king in the expedition then made into France, but d. soon after, anno 1420. His lordship m. Lady Margaret Nevill, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, and by her (who m. 2ndly, William Cressener, Esq.), had two sons,

HENRY (Sir), his heir.

III. Margaret, m. 1st, to Plessington; 2ndly, to Hugh Stafford; and 3rdly, to John Bernard, of Abingdon.

He was s. at his decease, 14 January, 1459, by the eldest son,

SIR JOHN LE SCROPE, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 30 July, 1460, to 16 January, 1497. This nobleman espoused the cause of York, and during the reign of EDWARD IV. was a person of great influence and power. His lordship was a knight of the Garter, and fought against the Lancastrians, as well as the Scots, particularly at Norham Castle, when that fortress was relieved by the Earl of Surrey, and the besiegers driven beyond the Scottish border. He m. 1st, Joane, dau. of William, Lord Fitz-Hugh; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Oliver St. John, and relict of Lord Zouche; and 3rdly, Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Harling, of East Harling, co. Norfolk, and widow, 1st, of Sir William Chamberlain, K.G., and 2ndly, of Sir Robert Wingfield. By his 2nd wife, his lordship had a dau., Mary, m. to Sir William Conyers, and was s. at his death, 17 August, 1498, by his son (by his 1st wife),

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

GEFFREY LE SCROPE (younger brother of Sir Henry le Scrope, the Chief Justice, father of Richard, Lord Scrope, of Bolton, see p. 480), a great landed proprietor in the reign of King EDWARD II., obtained from that monarch license to make a castle of his house at Clifton-upon-Yore, co. York, and had, at the same time, free warren in all his demesne lands at Clifton, and Parnewick, in Yorkshire, and at Whalton, in Northumberland. In the 17th of the same monarch, he was constituted Chief Justice of the court of King's Bench, as he was again in the 4th and 6th of EDWARD III., but being the next year sent abroad upon the king's affairs, he resigned his judicial office. He was afterwards in the wars of Flanders, and attained the rank of banneret. He m. Ivetta, or Rametta, dau. of William Ros, of Ingmanthorpe, and widow of Sir John Uffete, and had issue, Ivetta, m. to John de Hotham.

This learned and gallant person d. about 1340, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY LE SCROPE, who in the 5th EDWARD III., was in the wars of Scotland, and was summoned to parliament the next year as a Baron, and from that period to 15th RICHARD II., 1391. In the 19th EDWARD III., his lordship was in the wars of France, and the next year he fought at the battle of Durham, where DAVID, King of Scotland, sustained so signal a defeat. He was afterwards one of the commissioners for arraying the co. York upon a menaced invasion by the French, and during the remainder of EDWARD III.'s reign, he was either actively engaged in the wars, or as a diplomatist. In the 2nd RICHARD II., being then a banneret, his lordship was sent ambassador, with others, to treat with CHARLES, King of Navarre, regarding a league between that prince and the King of England. By Joan, his wife he had issue,

His lordship d. 31 July, 1391, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR STEPHEN LE SCROPE, 2nd baron, then aged forty, summoned to parliament from 23 November, 1392, to 1 January, 1406. This nobleman received the honour of knighthood for his martial services in the lifetime of his father, and distinguished himself both by sea and land. His lordship m. Margery, dau. of John, Lord Welles, and widow of John, son of Sir William de Huntingfield, Knt., and had issue,

I. HENRY, his successor.

II. JOHN, of whom presently.

IV. William, d. 1463.

He d. 26 January, 1406, possessed of large estates in the co. Essex, Notts, Stafford, Lincoln, and York, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR HENRY LE SCROPE, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 26 August, 1408, to 26 September, 1414, as LORD SCROPE, of Masham. His lordship, in the 7th HENRY IV., was employed in the embassy to Isabel, Queen of Denmark, and Eric, King of Denmark, to treat concerning the dowry of Philippa, the dau. of King HENRY, then consort of the King of Denmark; and for a league between the two crowns. In four years after he was made treasurer of the king's exchequer, and the next year the king considering his great abilities, as also the necessity of his presence in parliament and council, assigned him, during his stay at Westminster, or London, the towns of Hamstede and Hendon, co. Middlesex, for lodging and entertainment of his servants and horses. In the reign of HENRY V. Lord Scrope was appointed ambassador to treat of peace with the French. "But this great trust," says Dugdale, "he shamefully abused; for being a person in whom the king had so great a confidence, that nothing of private or public concernment was done without him; his gravity of countenance, modesty in his deportment and religious discourse, being always such, that whatsoever he advised was held as an oracle; upon this his solemn embassy into France, (which none was thought so fit to manage himself,) he treated privily with the king's enemies, (being in his heart totally theirs), and conspired the king's destruction, upon promise of reward from the French; his confederates in this design being Richard, Earl of Cambridge (brother of the Duke of York) and Sir Thomas Grey, a northern knight. But before this mischievous plot could be effected (which was to have killed the king and all his brethren ere he went to sea; five ships being ready at Southampton to wait the king over into France), it was discovered. Whereupon he had a speedy trial before Thomas, Duke of Clarence, and other peers, at Southampton, and being found guilty there lost his head, in August, 1415." His lordship had m. 1st, Philippa, dau. of Sir Guy de Brien, and 2ndly, Joane, Duchess of York, sister and co-heir of Edmund Holland, Earl of Kent, but had no issue. Upon his lordship's attainder, the Barony of Scrope, of Masham, became FORFEITED, and his lands were seized, part of which, including Masham, the king conferred upon Henry, Lord Fitz-Hugh, for life. He was s. by his brother,

SIR JOHN LE SCROPE, who, upon the death of his brother, Stephen, archdeacon of Richmond, 2nd HENRY VI., on doing his homage, had livery of his lands; and immediately, thereupon, by the consent of the lords in parliament, obtained a grant from the king, of the farms and rents of all those lordships which came to the crown by the attainder of Henry, Lord Scrope, his brother, to hold for four years. This Sir John Scrope wrote himself of Masham and Upsal, and was summoned to parliament as LORD SCROPE, of Masham and Upsal, from 7 January, 1426, to 26 May, 1455, having previously, according to Nicolas, (in 1421), obtained a restoration of his brother's honours and inheritance. His lordship was afterwards in high favour at court, and constituted treasurer of the king's exchequer. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Thomas Chaworth, of Wiverton, co. SCROPE—EARL OF WILTES.

By Charter, dated 29 September, 1397.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM LE SCROPE, K.G., eldest son of Richard, 1st Baron Scrope, of Bolton (see p. 480), was made seneschal of Aquitaine, 6th RICHARD II., and afterwards constituted custos of the castle of Queensboro'. In the 16th of the same reign he was appointed vice-chamberlain of the household, and he purchased, about that time from William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, the Isle of Man, with the crown thereof; it being then a right belonging to the lord of that island, to be crowned with a royal crown, and to bear the title of king. He was subsequently constituted lord chamberlain of the household, and was one of the ambassadors deputed to France to contract a marriage for King RICHARD with Isabel, eldest dau. of CHARLES VI., King of France. After this, having large grants of confiscated lands from the crown, he was created, by charter, dated 29 September, 21st RICHARD II., EARL OF WILTES. "to have to him and his heirs male for ever." He was constituted justice of Chester, North Wales, and Flint, with a grant of the office of surveyor of all the forests within the principality of Chester. He was also made a knight of the Garter. He purchased the sovereignty of the Isle of Man from the Earl of Salisbury, and in 1394, when the truce was confirmed with France, "Guilliam le Scrop" is recorded to have assented to it "pour la seigneurie de Man," as one of the "allies" of the King of England. He is the person of whom Shakespeare makes the Lord Roos to say:—

"The Earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm."

RICHARD II., Act 2, sc. 1.

On the invasion of th kingdom by Henry, Duke of Lancaster, the Earl of Wilts defended the castle of Bristol for the king, but was taken by the usurper's troops and beheaded, 29 July, 1399, v. p.

Since this earl's death, the title has remained dormant, but it is claimed by SIMON-THOMAS SCROPE, Esq., of Danby, co. York, the heir male of the family of SCROPE. The case has been for some time before the House of Lords.

SCUDAMORE—VISCOUNT SCUDAMORE.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 July, 1628.

Lineage.

The Scudamores, one of the most eminent families in the West of England, have been established in Herefordshire for many centuries. At an early period they became divided into two distinct families, the Scudamores of Holme Lacy, and the Scudamores of Kentchurch, but the exact period when the branches separated, has not been accurately ascertained.

SIR JOHN SCUDAMORE (son of William Scudamore, and grandson of John Scudamore, Esq., of Holme Lacy, by Sybell, his wife, dau. of Watkyn Vaughan, of Hergest), was gentleman usher to Queen ELIZABETH, received the honour of knighthood, and was elected by the co. of Hereford in five successive parliaments during that reign. He m. 1st, Eleanor, dau. of Sir James Croft, and had issue,

JAMES (Sir), who was knighted for his valour at the siege of Calais, and in the 1st JAMES I., served in parliament for Herefordshire. Sir James m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Throckmorton and dying v. p., left issue,

JOHN, successor to his grandfather.

Mary, m. to Sir Giles Brydges, of Wilton Castle.

Alice.

Ursula, wife of Alexander Walwyn, Esq., of Oldcourt.

Sir John Scudamore, the Sir Scudamore of Spencers' "Fairie Queen," was s. by his grandson,

JOHN SCUDAMORE, Esq., of Holme Lacy, who, at a very early age m. Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Sir Arthur Porter, Knt., and was created a baronet, 1620, in which year he served in parliament for the co. Hereford, as also in 21st JAMES I., and was created Baron of Dromore, and VISCOUNT SCUDAMORE, of Sligo, by letters patent, 2 July, 1628. In 1634, he was sent ambassador to the court of France, in which employment he acquitted himself with singular prudence and honour. In the beginning of the civil wars, he was surprised in Hereford by Sir John Waller, and was sent prisoner to London, some of his houses were besieged, plundered, and burnt by the rebels, and his whole estate sequestered for several years, after which he compounded for his liberty and property as other royalists had done. The remarkably studious, pious, and hospitable life he led, made him respected and esteemed by all good men, especially by Bishop Laud, who generally visited him in going to and from his diocese of St. David's, and found his entertainment as kind and full of respect as ever he did from any friend. Lord Scudamore d. universally lamented in the seventy-first year of his age, 8 June, 1671, and was buried in the south aisle of the chancel in the parish church of Holme Lacy. Of six sons of this truly great and noble lord, only James lived to man's estate, and dying v. p., his son,

SIR JOHN SCUDAMORE, 2nd Viscount Scudamore, succeeded to the title and estates of his grandfather. He m. Frances, dau. of John, Earl of Exeter, and d. 22 July, 1697, having had three sons and three daus. He was s. by his 2nd son,

SIR JAMES SCUDAMORE, 3rd Viscount Scudamore; who m. Frances, only dau. of Simon, Lord Digby, and d. 2 December, 1716, aged thirty-two (when all his honours became extinct), leaving an only dau. and heir,

FRANCES, b. in 1711, who m. 1st, Henry Somerset, Duke of Beaufort, from whom she was divorced; and 2ndly, Charles Fitzroy, Esq., who assumed the name and arms of SCUDAMORE; by him she had an only dau. and heiress, FRANCES, m. in 1769, to the Hon. Charles Howard, afterwards Earl of Surrey and Duke of Norfolk, who d. 15 December, 1815. The duchess did not very long survive him. She d. 22 October, 1820, when there being no issue by that marriage, the estates of Holme Lacy devolved upon SIR EDWYN-FRANCIS STANHOPE, Bart., as lineal descendant of Mary, wife of Sir Giles Brydges, of Wilton Castle, co. Hereford, dau. of Sir James Scudamore, Knt., and sister of John, 1st Viscount Scudamore. Sir Edwyn Stanhope assumed the additional surname and arms of Scudamore, by royal sign manual, on coming into possession of the Holme Lacey estates.

Another portion of the Scudamore property devolved on Daniel Higford Davall Burr, Esq., M.P., also a descendant of the Scudamores.

SEEZ—EARL OF DORSET.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Lineage.

OSMUND DE SEEZ, a noble Norman, was made bishop of Salisbury, by his kinsman, King WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and afterwards created EARL of the co. of Dorset. This eminent prelate, who filled the high office of Lord Chancellor of England, d. in 1099, and was buried at Old Sarum. In nearly three centuries and a half (1457) subsequently, he was canonized by Pope CALIXTUS, for the purity of his life, and the great services he had rendered to religion.

SEGRAVE—BARONS SEGRAVE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

In the 12th year of HENRY II.,

GILBERT DE SEGRAVE, Lord of Segrave, co. Leicester (whence he assumed his surname) held the fourth part of one knight's fee of William de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, and in the 4th RICHARD I., he was joint sheriff with Reginald Basset, for the cos. Warwick and Leicester, under Hugh de Novant, bishop of Coventry, in which office he continued two whole years. He subsequently, 10th RICHARD I., gave 400 marks to the king towards the support of his wars. This Gilbert was s. by his son,

STEPHEN DE SEGRAVE, who, in the 5th King JOHN, was constable of the Tower of London, and remaining faithful to that monarch in his conflicts with the barons, obtained a grant (17th JOHN) of the lands of Stephen de Gant, lying in the cos. Lincoln and Leicester, with the manor of Kintone, co. Warwick. In the 4th HENRY III., he was made governor of Saunby Castle, Leicestershire, and the next year constituted sheriff of the cos. Essex and Hertford, and afterwards of Leicestershire. In the 8th of the same reign, he was governor of the castle at Hertford, and in two years after, one of the justices itinerant in the cos. Nottingham and Derby. About this period we find this successful person, whom Matthew Paris says, in his young days "from a clerk was made a knight," acquiring large landed property by purchase. In the 13th HENRY III., he bought the manor of Cotes, in the co. Derby, from the dau. and heirs of Stephen de Beauchamp, and he afterwards purchased from Ranulph, Earl of Chester and Lincoln, all the lands which that nobleman possessed at Mount Sorrell, co. Leicester, without the castle; as also two carucates and a half lying at Segrave, which himself and his ancestors had previously held at the rent of 14*s.* per annum. In the 16th HENRY III., he obtained a grant of the custody of the castle and county of Northampton, as also of the cos. Bedford, Buckingham, Warwick, and Leicester, for the term of his life; taking the whole profit of all those shires for his support in that service; excepting the ancient farms, which had usually been paid into the exchequer. And, having been of the king's council for several years, as also chief justice of the Common Pleas, he succeeded in the 16th HENRY III., Hubert de Burgh in the great office of justiciary of England, being at the same time constituted governor of Dover, Canterbury, Rochester, &c., and constable of the Tower of London. After this we find him, however, opposed by the bishops and barons, and his manor house at Segrave burnt to the ground by the populace, as well as another mansion in the co. Huntingdon. The king, too, in this perilous crisis, deserted him, and cited him, along with Peter de Rupibus, bishop of Winchester, and others who had been in power, to appear forthwith at court in order to answer any charge regarding the wasting of the public treasure, which might be preferred against them. Some of those persons, conscious of guilt, fled to sanctuary, and Stephen de Segrave sought an asylum in the abbey of Leicester, where he openly declared that he was and had been a priest, and that he resolved to shave his crown again to be a canon of that house. Nevertheless upon second thoughts, he braved the storm, and appeared at court, under the archbishop's protection; where the king called him a wicked traitor, and told him that it was under his advice that he had displaced Hubert de Burgh from the office of justiciary, and cast that eminent person into prison; nay, that had he gone the full length of his council, Hubert would have been hanged, and divers of the nobility banished. In twelve months subsequently, however, Stephen de Segrave made his peace by paying 1000 marks to the king, and he afterwards grew again into such favour, that in the 21st HENRY III., he was the means of reconciling the king with some of his most hostile barons. Subsequently, he was made justice of Chester, and the king's chief councillor, and "being now," says Dugdale, "advanced in years, deported himself by experience of former times, with much more temper and moderation than heretofore." This eminent person m. twice—1st, Robese, dau. of Thomas le Despencer, and 2ndly, Ida, sister of Henry de Hastings, with whom he had in frank-marriage, the manor of Brunesswaver, co. Warwick. Of Stephen de Segrave, so distinguished in the reign of HENRY III., Matthew Paris, thus speaks—"This Stephen, though come of no high parentage, was in his youth, of a clerk made a knight; and in his latter days, through his prudence and valour, so exalted, that he had the reputation of one of the chief men of the realm, managing the greatest affairs as he pleased. In doing whereof, he more minded his own profit than the common good; yet for some good deeds, and making a discreet testament, he d. with much honour." He departed this life in 1241, and was s. by his son,

GILBERT DE SEGRAVE. This feudal lord having m. Annabill, dau. and co-heir of Robert de Chaucumbe, obtained a grant, in the 15th HENRY III., from Simon de Montfort, lord of Leicester, of the whole town of Kegworth, co. Leicester, and in two years after, had a grant from the crown, of the manor of Newcastle-under-Lyme, co. Stafford; being the same year constituted governor of Bolsover Castle. In the 26th HENRY III., he was made justice of all the royal forests, south of Trent, and governor of Kenilworth Castle. In the 35th of the same reign, he was constituted one of the justices of Oyer and Terminer, in the city of London, to hear and determine all such causes as had usually been tried before the justice itinerant, at the Tower of London. But in three years afterwards, being deputed, with Roger Bigod, Earl Marshal, on an embassy, was treacherously seized (along with John de Plasets, Earl of Warwick, and divers others of the English nobility,) by the French, as he was returning, and d. within a short period, of the severe treatment he had received in prison. His decease occurred somewhat about the year 1254, when he was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE SEGRAVE, who, in the 43rd HENRY III., attended that monarch into France, but soon after espoused the cause of the barons, and became one of their most active leaders. In the 47th of HENRY's reign, he was amongst those who appeared openly in arms, and fortified Northampton, for which proceeding, his lands were seized by the crown. Upon the subsequent fall of Northampton to the royalists, Nicholas de Segrave fled to London, where the citizens having raised a large army for the barons, made him their general. At the head of this force, he marched with Gilbert de Clare, and Henry de Hastings, to the siege of Rochester, and thence to Lewes, at which place, the celebrated battle, so disastrous to the king, commenced, by a charge made by Segrave, at the head of the Londoners; in this, however, he was worsted by Prince Edward, who, flushed with success, pursued his advantage too far, and thus mainly contributed to the defeat which the royal arms sustained. The issue of this battle is well known. The king, Prince Edward, and the chief of their adherents became prisoners to the rebels, who followed up their triumph, by immediately summoning a parliament in the king's name, to which Nicholas de Segrave was summoned as BARON SEGRAVE, 24 December, 1264. But the tide soon ebbing, he was among the defeated at Evesham, where he was wounded and made prisoner. He was, however, admitted to the benefit of the Dictum de Kenilworth, and obtained a full pardon, with restoration of his lands, which had been seized. In four years afterwards, he attended Prince Edward to the Holy Land, and when that prince ascended the throne, he appears to have enjoyed a large share of royal favour. In the 4th year of EDWARD's reign, he was with the king in a campaign against the Welsh, and was subsequently employed in Scotland and Ireland, having had a second summons to parliament, 24 June, 1295. His lordship m. Maud de Lucy, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his successor;

Nicholas, of Barton, summoned to parliament by writ, directed to "Nicholao de Segrave, jun," from 24 June, 1295, to 26 January, 1297, and to "Nicholao de Segrave," from the latter date to 25 May, 1311. His lordship left at his decease, 1322, an only dau. and heiress, Maud, who m. Edmund de Bohun, in whose descendants and representatives this Barony of Segrave is now vested (see SEGRAVE, of Barton Segrave).

Geffery, sheriff of the co. Leicester, 1st EDWARD II. Peter.

Gilbert, bishop of London.

Annabel, m. to John de Pleasetis, son of Sir Hugh de Pleasetis, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1295, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN DE SEGRAVE, 2nd baron, b. 1256, summoned to parliament, from 26 August, 1296, to 6 May, 1325. This nobleman, in the life-time of his father, having been taken prisoner in the wars of Scotland (9th EDWARD I.), obtained from the king, in consideration of his services there, the grant of £100 towards the liquidation of his ransom. He was subsequently much engaged in the Scottish wars, and in the 24th of the same reign was constable of the English army in that country. The next year he was by indenture retained to serve Roger le Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, with six knights, himself accounted, as well in time of peace as in war, for the term of his whole life, in England, Wales, and Scotland: viz., in time of peace with six horses, so long as the earl should think fit, taking Bouche of Court for himself and his knights, and for his esquires, hay and oats; as also livery for six more horses, and wages for six grooms and their horses; likewise for himself two robes yearly, as well in time of peace as war, as for a banneret; and for his five knights, as for his other bachelors, viz., two yearly. Moreover, in time of war he was bound to bring with him his five knights with twenty horses; and in consideration thereof, to receive for himself and his company, with all those horses, 40s. per day, but if he should bring no more than six horses, then 32s.; it being likewise agreed that the horses should be valued, to the end that a fair allowance might be made for any which should be lost in the service. For the performance of this covenant he had a grant of the manor of Lodene, co. Norfolk.

In the 26th EDWARD I., his lordship was again in Scotland, and had a principal command at the battle of Falkirk. In three years after, he obtained license to make a castle at his manor house, of Bretteby, co. Derby, and he was next constituted governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed, as also warden of Scotland. Subsequently we find him with King EDWARD at the celebrated siege of Caerlaverock. After the accession of EDWARD II., he was again made warden of Scotland, and within a short time, attending the king into that usual theatre of war, was amongst the worsted in the great defeat sustained by the English arms at Bannockburn, and was made prisoner by the Scots, who detained him for a year, until he was exchanged for Thomas de Moram, and other prisoners of that realm, who were incarcerated in London. His lordship eventually lost his life in Gascony, whither he was sent by the king, who had conceived some displeasure against him, for the escape of Roger Mortimer out of the Tower of London, under pretence of defending those parts, with Edmund, Earl of Kent, and others, where, being a great mortality, he d. anno 1325. His lordship m. in the life-time of his father, in 1270, Christian, dau. of Sir Hugh de Pleasetis, Knt., by whom he had issue,

STEPHEN, the companion in arms of his gallant father in the Scottish wars, but in the 12th EDWARD II., one of the partisans of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, yet submitting himself, he obtained his pardon, and, 16th EDWARD II., was made constable of the Tower of London. In the 18th EDWARD, he attended his father into Gascony, and d. there v. p. He m. Alice de Arundel, and left issue,

JOHN, successor to his grandfather.

Stephen.

John, m. Julian, dau. and heir of John de Sandwic, and d. 23rd EDWARD III., leaving a dau. and heiress, Mary.

Eleanora Kiriel.

Margaret, m. William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby.
Alice. Christian de Moune.

The baron was s. by his grandson,

JOHN DE SEGRAVE, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 29 November, 1336, to 16 November, 1351. This nobleman appears, like his predecessors, a distinguished personage in the field, during his comparatively short career; for he did not live beyond the age of thirty-eight. In the wars of France and Scotland, temp. EDWARD III., he took an active part, and was more than once retained to serve the king by indenture. His lordship made an illustrious alliance in marrying the Lady Margaret Plantagenet, dau., and eventually sole heiress of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, Marshal of England, younger son of King EDWARD I.; by this lady he left, at his decease, in 1353, an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH, who m. John de Mowbray, 4th Baron Mowbray, and had issue,

JOHN, 5th Lord Mowbray, who was created Earl of Nottingham, but d. soon after in the flower of his youth, etiam.

THOMAS, 6th Lord Mowbray, created after the decease of his brother, Earl of Nottingham, and Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal, and K.G. His grace m. twice, but had issue by his 2nd wife (Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Strange, of Blackmere,) only, viz.,

THOMAS, who never bore the title of Duke of Norfolk, but was denominated simply, Earl Marshal; beheaded, 6th HENRY IV., and d. s. p.

Thomas, restored to the Dukedom of Norfolk, s. in 1432 by his son,

JOHN, 3rd Duke of Norfolk, d. in the 1st HENRY IV., and was s. by his son,

ANNE, at whose decease, s. p., the Baronies of Mowbray and Segrave reverted to the descendants of the dau. of Thomas, 1st duke.

ISABEL, m. 1st, to Sir Henry Ferrers, Knt. by whom she had an only child, Elizabeth, m. to Edward Grey, 2nd son of Reginald, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn. Her ladyship m. 2ndly, James, 5th Lord Berkeley, from whom the extant Earls of Berkeley derive.

MARGARET, m. to Sir ROBERT HOWARD, from whom the HOWARDS, DUKES OF NORFOLK derive.

Upon the decease, s. p., of Lady Anne Mowbray, only dau. and heiress of John Mowbray, 4th and last Duke of Norfolk, of that family, the Barony of Segrave reverted to the descendants of the two daus. of Thomas Mowbray, 1st Duke of Norfolk, namely, Lady Isabel Berkeley and Lady Margaret Howard, and fell into ABERYANCE amongst them, as it still continues.

The representative of Lady Isabel Berkeley is the present EARL BERKELEY.

The representatives of Lady Margaret Howard are the LORDS STOURTON AND PETRE, the representation having devolved, at the decease of Edward Howard, 9th Duke of Norfolk, upon his nieces (the daus. and co-heiresses of Philip Howard, Esq., of Buckingham, co. Norfolk, his grace's brother), namely, Winifred, wife of William, 15th Lord Stourton.

Anne, wife of Robert-Edward, 9th Lord Petre.

SEGRAVE—BARON SEGRAVE, OF BARTON SEGRAVE, CO. NORTHAMPTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

NICHOLAS DE SEGRAVE, of Barton Segrave, co. Northampton, 2nd son of Nicholas, Lord Segrave, being in the king's service in Gascony, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 24 June, 1295. His lordship was soon after in the wars of Scotland, and shared in the victory of Falkirk. In the 33rd EDWARD I. Lord Segrave, whom Matthew Paris calls "one of the most worthy knights in this realm," being accused of treason by Sir John de Cromwell, Knt., challenged, in defence of his innocence, his accuser to single combat, according to the custom of the period, but the king not giving his consent to the duel, his lordship crossed the sea, for the purpose of meeting his antagonist without the realm. Having done so, however, unlicensed, he was taken into custody upon his return, and immediately brought to trial. The affair puzzled the judges, who were at a loss to come to a decision; however, after three days' consultation they declared that his lordship deserved death, and that all his goods should be confiscated; yet added, that in regard he departed not from England in an affront to the king, but to avenge his own quarrel, the king would do well to pardon him. EDWARD was much displeased at the boldness of the judges, who seemed to set bounds to his prerogative, and gave them a severe reprimand. But he, nevertheless, pardoned Segrave, and restored him to his possessions; several of the nobility having interceded for him, and entered into security for his future good conduct.

In the 1st EDWARD II., his lordship was constituted governor of the castle at Northampton, and marshal of England, and in four years after he obtained license to make a castle of his manor house at Barton Segrave.

Upon the grant of the marshalship to Lord Segrave, much animosity arose between him and William le Mareschall; which was allayed, however, by the king's interference. His lordship d. in 1322, leaving an only dau. and heiress, MAUD SEGRAVE, who m. Edmund de Bohun, and in the representatives of this marriage (if any exist) the Barony of Segrave, of Barton Segrave, is now vested.

Arms—Sa., a lion rampant, arg., crowned, or.

SETON—BARONS SETON AND EARLS OF WINTOUN.

Earldom, by Charter, dated 16 November, 1600.

Lineage.

GEORGE SETON, of Seton, only son of Sir William Seton, slain at Verneuil, 1424, was soon after, 23 April, 1448, created a peer of parliament. He d. in the place of the Blackfriars at Edinburgh, after 15 July, 1478 (the date of a charter granted by him), and was buried in the choir of the same, having given to the community 20 merks of annual rents out of his lands. He m. 1st, Lady Margaret Stewart, only dau. and heiress of the gallant John, Earl of Buchan, constable of France, killed at Verneuil, and had a son,

JOHN, who d. r. p., leaving, by Christian, his wife, dau. of John, 1st Lord Lindsay of Byres (which lady m. 2ndly, Robert, Lord Kilmaurs, properly 2nd Earl of Glencairn,) a son, George, successor to his grandfather.

He m. 2ndly, Christian Murray, of the house of Tullybardine, by whom he had a dau.,

Christian, m. to Hugh Douglas, of Corehead.

GEORGE SETON, 2nd Lord Seton, who s. his grandfather, and was one of the commissioners for settling differences on the marches appointed by the treaty of Nottingham, 22 September, 1484, founded the collegiate church of Seton, 20 June, 1493, and endowed it for the support of a provost, six prebendaries, and two singing boys. George, Lord Seton, was one of the conservators of treaties with the English, 30 September, 1497, and 12 July, 1499, and witnessed the assignation of the dower of Margaret, Queen of Scotland, 24 May, 1503. He m. Lady Margaret Campbell, eldest dau. of Colin, 1st Earl of Argyll, and by her had issue,

GEORGE, 3rd Lord Seton.

John, who m. the heiress of Sinclair of Northrig, and was ancestor of the Setons of Northrig.

Martha, m. to Sir William Maitland, of Leightonhilton.

The elder son,

GEORGE SETON, 3rd Lord Seton, fell at the battle of Flodden, 9 September, 1513. He m. Lady Janet Hepburn, eldest dau. of Patrick, 1st Earl of Bothwell, and had (with a dau. Mariot, m. 1st, to William, Master of Borthwick; and 2ndly, to Hugh, 2nd Earl of Eglinton), a son,

GEORGE SETON, 4th Lord Seton, who m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Hay, of Yester, by whom he had issue,

GEORGE, 5th Lord Seton.

John, who, during the absence of his elder brother abroad, assumed the title of Lord Seton, and sat in parliament as a peer. On his brother's return, however, he surrendered estate and dignity: he m. Isabel Balfour, of Cariston, co. Fife, and was ancestor of the SETONS of Cariston, now represented by GEORGE SETON, Esq., M.A.

James.

Marian, m. to John, 4th Earl of Menteth; and 2ndly, to John, 11th Earl of Sutherland.

Margaret, m. to Sir Robert Logan, of Restalrig.

Eleanor, m. to Hugh, 7th Lord Somerville.

Beatrix, m. to Sir George Ogilvie, of Dunlugas.

Lord Seton m. 2ndly, Mary Pyrrres or Peris, a French lady, who accompanied Mary of Lorraine to Scotland; and by whom he had a son, Robert. The eldest son,

GEORGE SETON, 5th Lord Seton, was one of the commissioners appointed by the parliament of Scotland, 17 December, 1557, to be present at the marriage of Queen MARY with the Dauphin of France. His lordship adhered to the party of the queen-dowager against the lords of the congregation, in 1559; and on Queen MARY's return from France, was sworn a privy councillor, and appointed master of the household to her Majesty. After the murder of Lord Darnley, the Queen and Bothwell went to Seton, where they passed some days, and where the contract of marriage between them was signed. Lord Seton was one of those who waited for the Queen on the banks of Lochleven, in May, 1568, when she effected her escape, conducted her by his castle of Niddry to Hamilton, and joined the association in her behalf. After the battle of Langside, Lord Seton retired to Flanders, where he remained in exile two years, and drove a waggon with four horses, for his livelihood. His picture in that employment was painted on the north end of the long gallery of Seton. Lord Seton was in Scotland in April, 1570, actively employed in the cause of Queen MARY; and in the same year he was sent to the Low Countries to solicit the Duke of Alba to assist the friends of her Majesty in Scotland. In 1583, he went as ambassador to France, but d. 8 January following, aged about fifty-five, and was buried at Seton, where a monument remains to his memory. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of Sir William Hamilton, of Sanquhar, high treasurer of Scotland, and by her (who d. 12 November, 1606, aged about seventy-five,) had issue, George, Master of Seton, d. in March, 1562. His brother Robert was served heir of him, 3 February, 1603.

ROBERT, 6th Lord Seton.

John (Sir), of Barna, knight of the order of St. Jago, master of the household, and one of the gentlemen of the bed-chamber to King PHILIP II. of Spain. Being recalled into Scotland by King JAMES VI., he was appointed one of the extraordinary lords of session, in room of his brother Alexander (constituted an ordinary lord), 17 February, 1587; and he d. before 11 June, 1594, when a successor was appointed in his place. He m. Anne, youngest dau. of William, 7th Lord Forbes, and was ancestor of the Setons, of Barna. Sir John Seton, of Barna, was served heir of his father, Sir John Seton, of Barna, 3 October, 1615.

ALEXANDER, high chancellor of Scotland, created 4 March, 1605-6, EARL OF DUNFERMLINE. His lordship d. in 1622, and was s. by his son,

Charles Seton, 2nd earl of Dunfermline, who had, with a dau. (Henriet, m. 1st, to William, 5th Earl of Wigton; and 2ndly, to William, 15th Earl of Crawford), two sons; the elder,

ALEXANDER, 3rd Earl of Dunfermline, d. s. p., and was s. by his brother, JAMES, 4th Earl of Dunfermline, who was outlawed and forfeited in 1640, for his participation in the battle of Killcranky. His lordship d. s. p. at St. Germain, in 1694.

William (Sir), of Killisnore.

The eldest son,

ROBERT SETON, 2nd Earl of Winton, m. Anne, dau. of John, Lord Thirlestane, high chancellor of Scotland, sister of John, 1st Earl of Lauderdale, but by her (who d. 6 July, 1609, aged twenty) had no issue. His brother,

GEORGE SETON, 3rd Earl of Winton, was b. in December, 1584. He twice entertained King CHARLES I. at Seton, and rebuilt Winton House in 1619. His lordship d. 17 December, 1650, aged sixty-five, and was buried at Seton. He m. 1st, Lady Anne Hay, eldest dau. of Francis, 8th Earl of Erroll, and had issue,

i. GEORGE, Lord Seton, b. 1645, fought with Montrose and was made prisoner at Philiphaugh. He d. 4 June, 1643, leaving by Lady Henriet Gordon, his wife, 2nd dau. of George, 2nd Marquess of Huntley (who m. 2ndly, John, 2nd Earl of Traquair), a son,

GEORGE, successor to his grandfather.

ii. Christopher, b. 2 March, 1617; d. 30 June, 1618.

iii. ALEXANDER, Viscount of Kingston. (See that title.)

iv. Francis, b. 1 May, 1623; d. young.

v. Margaret, b. 28 March, 1615; d. uxor. in 1637.

vi. Elizabeth, m. in 1637, to William, 7th Earl of Marischal, and had issue; and d. in 1650, aged twenty-eight.

The Earl of Winton m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Herries, and by her had issue,

- i. Christopher, b. 28 June, 1631, a youth of learning and promise, who, going on his travels with his brother William, was lost on the coast of Holland, in July, 1648.
- ii. William, b. 8 January, 1633, who perished with his brother, 1648.
- iii. John (Sir), of Gairmiltoun (now Garletoun), ancestor of the Setons, of Garletoun.
- iv. Robert (Sir), of Windygoul, created a baronet in 1671, d. s. p.
- i. Isabel, m. to Francis, Lord Sempill.
- ii. Sophia, d. young.
- iii. Anne, m. April, 1654, to John, 2nd Earl of Traquair.
- iv. Jean, d. unm.
- v. Mary, m. to James, 4th Earl of Carnwath.

The earl d. in 1650, and was s. by his grandson,

GEORGE SETON, 4th Earl of Winton, who commanded the East Lothian regiment at the defeat of the Covenanters at Pentland, in 1666, and at the battle of Bothwell Bridge, in 1679. He m. in 1662, Lady Mary Montgomery, eldest dau. of Hugh, 7th Earl of Eglinton, by whom he had no surviving issue: and 2ndly, Christian, dau. of John Hepburn, of Aldersay, by whom (who d. in 1704) he left at his decease, 6 March, 1704, two sons,

- GEORGE, 5th earl.
Christopher, who d. unm. 1704.

The elder son,

GEORGE SETON, 5th Earl of Winton, joining the rising of 1716, was taken at Preston, 14 November, in that year, attainted, and left for execution. His lordship found means, however, to escape from the Tower of London in 1716, and fled to France and eventually to Rome, where he d. unm. 19 December, 1749.

Thus fell one of the noblest and most ancient houses in Scotland, after an honourable existence of full 600 years. In 1840, the Earl of Eglinton, as the lineal representative of Sir Alexander Seton, 3rd son of the 1st Earl of Winton, was served "nearest and lawful heir male general, and also nearest and lawful heir male of provision to George, 4th Earl of Winton."

Lineage.

Of this family which derived its descent from Sir Roger Seymour, of Evenswinden, co. Wilts. Knt., who m. Cecilia, one of the sisters and co-heirs of John, Lord Beauchamp, of Hache, was

SIR JOHN SEYMOUR, of Wolf Hall, Wilts, who, in the 9th HENRY VIII., being then one of the knights of the body to the king, obtained a grant of the constableness of Bristol Castle, to himself, and Edward, his son, in as ample manner as Giles, Lord D'Aubeney, held the same. Sir John m. Margery, dau. of Sir Henry Wentworth, K.B., of Nettlested, co. Suffolk, and had issue,

EDWARD, of whom presently.

Henry (Sir), K.B., whose line is supposed to be extinct.

THOMAS, created Baron Seymour, of Sudeley.

JANE, who became Queen Consort of King HENRY VIII., and was mother of EDWARD VI.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Sir Anthony Oughtred, Knt.; and 2ndly, to Gregory, Lord Cromwell.

Dorothy, m. 1st, to Sir Clement Smith, Knt., and 2ndly, to Thomas Laventhorpe, Esq.

The eldest son,

SIR EDWARD SEYMOUR, was one of the esquires of the body to King HENRY VIII., and when his sister, Jane (who had been maid of honour to Queen Anne Boleyn,) became the wife of his royal master, his advancement to rank and influence was rapid and unrestricted. At the nuptials (28th HENRY VIII.) he was elevated to the peerage by the title of VISCOUNT BEAUCHAMP, of Hache, and appointed in two days afterwards captain of the Isle of Jersey. His father, Sir John Seymour, d. the next year, when his lordship had livery of his lands; and he was created, by letters patent, dated 18 October, 1537, EARL OF HERTFORD, with remainder to his issue male, thereafter to be begotten. He was next constituted lord great chamberlain of England for life, and the same year he accompanied the Duke of Norfolk, lieutenant-general of the English army, consisting of 20,000 men, into Scotland. His lordship, during the remainder of the reign of his brother-in-law, was constantly engaged in the wars of France; and upon the decease of that monarch was chosen unanimously by the council, Protector to the young king, his nephew, EDWARD VI., and within a month constituted lord treasurer of England. As he was not previously a baron of the realm, that dignity, under the title of BARON SEYMOUR, was conferred upon him 15 February, 1547, and he was created the next day DUKE OF SOMERSET, both honours in remainder to the heirs male of his body, by Anne, his 2nd wife; failing which to "Sir Edward Seymour, son of the Earl of Hertford, by Katherine, his 1st wife, and the heirs male of Sir Edward Seymour the son."* His

* This singular limitation is copied from the statement in page 49 of the Third General Report of the Lords Committee to search for documents relative to the dignity of a peer of the realm, to which is added the following remark on the effect of the attainder of the said duke on the descendants of Sir Edward grace was immediately after constituted earl marshal of England for life; and in the ensuing March he obtained a patent for the great office of Protector, and governor of the king and realms. On 3 November following, his grace had a special grant that he should sit alone, and be placed at all times (as well in the king's presence in parliament, as in his absence) upon the middle of the bench or stool, standing next on the right hand of the king's seat royal, in his parliament chamber. In the 1st year of the duke's administration he concluded a peace with France, directing then all his attention to bringing about a marriage between Mary, only dau. and heir of JAMES V., of Scotland, and his nephew, the English king. But the negotiation proving abortive, he subsequently invaded Scotland with a large army, and fought and won the celebrated battle of Musselburgh, chiefly by his own courage and conduct. Thus having traced the rise of this eminent person, it now remains for us briefly to narrate his fall. Exciting by his extraordinary prosperity the envy of his contemporaries, and incurring by his barbarous treatment of his brother, Lord Seymour, of Sudeley, the hostility of the people, it required no great effort to hurl him from his giddy pre-eminence; and when he did fall, the recollection of his having signed the death warrant of his own brother, deprived him of much public sympathy. The moment he affixed his signature to that deed of fratricide his own doom was signed; and it was generally observed, that with his left hand he had cut off his right. Persons of his own rank designated him a blood-sucker and murderer, and declared aloud, that it was unfit that the king should remain under the protection of so ravenous a wolf. "Besides," (Sir William Dugdale writes) "many well disposed minds conceived a very hard opinion of him, for causing a church near Strand bridge, and two bishops' houses, to be pulled down, to make a site for his new building, called Somerset House, in digging the foundation whereof the bones of many, who had been there buried, were cast up, and carried into the fields. And because the stones of that church and those houses were not sufficient for that work, the steeple, and most part of the church of St. John of Hierusalem, near Smithfield, were mined and overthrown with powder, and the stones carried thereto. So likewise the cloister on the north side of St. Paul's Cathedral, and the charnel house on the south side thereof, with the chapel, the tombs and monuments therein being all beaten down, the bones of the dead carried into Finsbury fields, and the stones converted to this building; and it was confidently affirmed, that for the same purpose he intended to have pulled down St. Margaret's Church, at Westminster, but that the standing thereof was preserved by his fall." The duke's great rival and most bitter foe was John Dudley, Viscount L'Isle, afterwards Earl of Warwick and Duke of Northumberland. This nobleman, observing the gathering storm around the Protector, availed himself of it, and retired from court, accompanied by eighteen other influential members of the privy council. A course of proceedings ensued which compelled Somerset to remove the King from Hampton Court to Windsor, and finally terminated in placing the protector himself at the mercy of his enemies. His grace was brought from Windsor, a prisoner, to London, and conducted on horseback through Holborn, between the Earls of Southampton and Huntingdon, followed by lords and gentlemen to the number of three hundred, all on horseback to the Tower; where he was afterwards waited upon by certain lords of the council, who laid before him a list of twenty-eight articles of impeachment, to which they required his immediate answer. To these Somerset was induced to subscribe with his own hand an acknowledgment of guilt, and to offer at the same time to sue, upon his knees, to the king for pardon. This humble bearing saved his life; but he was stripped of his offices of protector, treasurer, and marshal, lost all his goods, and nearly

Seymour his son:—"The attainder of the Duke of Somerset, his father, and forfeiture of his dignities, by act of parliament, of the 5th and 6th EDWARD VI., did not affect the dignity of the Duke of Somerset granted to Sir Edward Seymour, and the heirs male of his body. By the terms of the grant, that dignity had vested immediately after the patent passed the great seal, in Sir Edward Seymour, with limitation to the heirs male of his body, though the actual enjoyment of it by Sir Edward, and the heirs male of his body, was made to depend on the failure of heirs male of the body of his father by his 2nd wife; and it is confidently affirmed, that, on the extinction of the heirs male of the Duke of Somerset, by his 2nd wife, that dukedom would have devolved on the heirs male of Sir Edward Seymour, above-mentioned, even had not the act of restoration, in 1660, taken place, 'because so far as the said limitation was in question, it wanted no such act for its preservation.' As the Barony of Seymour was granted with the same limitation, the preceding observations prove that it would have descended in a similar manner to the Dukedom of Somerset."

£2,000 in lands. Subsequently working by the most abject submission upon the feelings of the king, he was released from his imprisonment, his fines remitted, and his lands, save those which had been given away, restored. Within a short interval too, he was feasted by the king, with a great show of favour, and re-sworn of the privy council. A reconciliation was likewise effected between him and Dudley, who had become Earl of Warwick, and his grace's daughter was married to the earl's son and heir, Lord L'Isle. But this alliance was found to be no cement to the new-born friendship, nor was it sufficiently strong to preserve even the semblance of good feeling between the rival noblemen. Somerset was soon after accused of meditating the assassination of Warwick, who was then Duke of Northumberland, and being committed, with his duchess to the Tower, was arraigned at Westminster Hall, 1 December, 1551, before the Marquess of Winchester, then lord treasurer, as high steward for the occasion, and twenty-seven other peers, on five distinct charges, viz.,

1. Of raising men in the northern parts of the realm.
2. Of assembling men to kill the Duke of Northumberland.
3. Of resisting his attachment.
4. Of killing the gens d'armes, and raising London.
5. Of assaulting the lords, and devising their deaths.

To which he pleaded not guilty, and was eventually acquitted of high treason, but convicted of felony, whereupon he had judgment to be hanged: a sentence which most of our historians say, he might have avoided by praying the benefit of his clergy, but upon a closer inquiry it will be found, that he was thus condemned under a specific statute then in force, which made the conspiring the death of a privy councillor felony, without the benefit of clergy. After conviction he was detained nearly two months in prison, when he was at length brought to the scaffold, on Tower Hill, 22 January, 1552, and being attainted, his honours were supposed to have become forfeited. The duke's character differed entirely from that of his brother, Thomas, Lord Seymour, of Sudeley. Dugdale says, "that Thomas was a person of great courage, courtly in fashion, in personage stately, in voice magnificent, but, somewhat empty in matter. The duke greatest in favour with the people; Sudeley most respected by the nobility; both highly esteemed by the king; both fortunate alike in their advancements; both ruined alike by their own vanity and folly. Both so well affected to the king, that the one might well be termed his sword, the other his target." His grace m. 1st, Katherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Filhol, of Filhol Hall, co. Essex, and had issue,

The only son of the attainted duke, by his 2nd wife,

SIR EDWARD SEYMOUR, upon whom the chief honours of his father were especially entailed, was created, by Queen ELIZABETH, by letters patent, dated 13 January, 1559, Baron Beauchamp, of Hache, and Earl of Hertford. This nobleman incurred subsequently the displeasure of the Queen, by marrying without her consent the Lady Catherine Grey, dau. of Henry, Duke of Suffolk, and great-grand-dau. of King HENRY VII., for which offence he had to pay a fine of £5,000, and to endure nine years incarceration: while the unhappy lady, being also committed to the Tower, was only released by death. The validity of this marriage was finally established at common law, by the verdict of a jury, of which John Digby, Esq., of Coleshill, was foreman. By this lady his lordship had three sons and one dau., viz.,

1. EDWARD, Lord Beauchamp, who, in the 6th of JAMES I., obtained letters patent, that himself and the heirs male of his body, after the decease of his father, should be barons of parliament, and have place and voice therein; and also letters patent, for the enjoyment of the Earldom of Hertford after his said father's decease. His lordship died however before that nobleman. He m. Honora, dau. of Sir Richard Rogers, of Bryanston, co. Dorset, and had issue,

SIR WILLIAM SEYMOUR, 2nd Earl of Hertford, who was created 3 June, 1640, MARQUESS OF HERTFORD. He had previously incurred the displeasure of King JAMES I., by marrying without his Majesty's consent, Arabella Stewart, for which himself and his wife were committed to the Tower; whence his lordship found means to escape, and passed beyond the sea. But the Lady Arabella, remained a prisoner until her decease (see STUART). The marquess during the civil wars, continued faithfully attached to the royal cause, and, upon the restoration of the monarchy was made a knight of the Garter, and restored in 1660, by special act of parliament, to the DUKEDOM OF SOMERSET, with all the privileges as fully and amply as though the attainder of the Protector Somerset had never occurred. The duke m. 2ndly, Lady Frances Devereux, dau. of Robert, 2nd Earl of Essex, and had issue,

WILLIAM SEYMOUR, 3rd Duke of Somerset. This nobleman d. in minority, unm., in 1671, when his estates devolved upon his sister, Lady Elizabeth Seymour, who m. Thomas, 2nd Earl of Ailesbury, and his honours reverted to his uncle,

JOHN SEYMOUR, as 4th Duke of Somerset. His grace m. Sarah, dau. of Sir Edward Alston, Knt., and widow of George Grimston, Esq., but d. s. p. 20 April, 1675, when the Marquessate of Hertford became EXTINCT, but the other honours devolved upon his cousin (referred to Francis, 3rd son of Edward, Lord Beauchamp, eldest son of Sir Edward Seymour, son and successor of the Protector),

FRANCIS SEYMOUR, 3rd Lord Seymour, of Trowbridge, as 5th Duke of Somerset. This nobleman did not, however, long enjoy his elevation. In his travels in Italy, visiting the church of the Augustinians, at Lerice, near Genoa, with some French gentlemen, his grace or one of his party was said to have in-sulted in the church some ladies of the family of Botti, for which supposed affront he was shot dead by Horatio Botti, the husband of one of them, at his inn door (April, 1678), when, dying unm., his honours devolved upon his brother,

CHARLES SEYMOUR, 6th Duke of Somerset, known as "the proud Duke of Somerset, a man in whom the pride of birth and rank amounted almost to a disease." This nobleman was made a knight of the Garter by King CHARLES II., and was of the privy council and a lord of the bedchamber to King JAMES II. He was subsequently, however, a promoter of the Revolution, and in the reign of WILLIAM, was constituted president of the council. His grace was one of the commissioners for the union with Scotland, temp. Queen ANNE, and upon the accession of King GEORGE I., he was sworn of the privy council, and appointed master of the horse. SEYMOUR—BARON SEYMOUR, OF SUDELEY.

By Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1547.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS SEYMOUR, brother of the celebrated Protector Somerset, and of Jane Seymour, Queen Consort of HENRY VIII., was elevated to the peerage by King EDWARD VI., 16 February, 1547, as BARON SEYMOUR, of Sudeley, co. Gloucester. His lordship was lord high admiral of England, and a privy councillor. He m. the Queen Dowager, Katherine (Parr), who d. in childbirth, 2nd EDWARD VI. His lordship, in the reign of his brother-in-law, had distinguished himself in arms, and was esteemed a person of lofty bearing, but turbulent, fierce, and ambitious. Conspiring against the power of his brother, the Protector, and paying court to the Lady Elizabeth, dau. of King HENRY VIII., with whom he was on the point of contracting a private marriage, he was committed to the Tower by parliament, and condemned without any form of trial. The parliament was soon after dissolved, and his lordship was beheaded on the 6th day succeeding, under the warrant of his brother, the Duke of Somerset. Lord Seymour dying s. p., the Barony of Seymour, of Sudeley, would have become EXTINCT, had it not fallen under the ATTAINDER.

On 14 October, 1786, at which time Sudeley Castle was possessed by Lord Rivers, the Rev. Dr. Nash, in company with the Honourable John Somers Coocks, and Mr. John Skipp, of Ledbury, made an examination of the grave of Queen KATHERINE, and its contents. "Upon opening the ground," says Dr. Nash,* "and heaving up the lead, we found the face totally decayed, the bones only remaining; the teeth, which were sound, had fallen out of their sockets. The body, I believe, is perfect, as it has never been opened; we thought it indelicate and indecent to uncover it, but observing the left hand to lie at a small instance from the body, we took off the cere-cloth, and found the hands and nails perfect, but of a brownish colour; the cere-cloth consisted of many folds of coarse linen, dipped in wax, tar, and perhaps some gums; over this was wrapt a sheet of lead fitted exactly close to the body. I could not perceive any remains of a wooden coffin. On that part of the lead which covered the breast was this inscription:—

'K. P.
Here Lyethe quene
Katherine wife to Kyng
Henry the VIII. and last the wife of Thomas
Lord of Sudeley highe
Admyrall of England.
And vnele to Kyng
Edward the VI., died
5 September mcccc.
xlviii.'†

The letters K. P. above the inscription was the signature she commonly used, though sometimes she signs herself, "Keteryn, the Quene." It seems at first extraordinary that she should be buried so near the surface of the ground; but we should consider that a pavement, and perhaps some earth had been taken away since she was first interred; and as she was buried within the communion rails, probably that ground might be formerly two or three steps higher than the rest of the chapel.

SHEFFIELD — BARONS SHEFFIELD, OF BUTTERWICKE, CO. LINCOLN, EARLS OF MULGRAVE, MARQUESSSES OF NOR-MANBY, DUKES OF NORMANBY, DUKES OF BUCKINGHAM.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1547.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 7 February, 1626.

Marquessate, by Letters Patent, dated 10 May, 1694.

Dukedom of Normanby, by Letters Patent, dated 9 March, 1703.

Dukedom of Buckingham, by Letters Patent, dated 23 March, 1703.

Lineage.

The family of Sheffield attained importance so early as the reign of HENRY III., when

SIR ROBERT SHEFFIELD, Knt., flourished. He was s. by his son,

ROBERT SHEFFIELD, who m. Anne, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Simon Goure, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT SHEFFIELD, who m. Genette, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Alexander Lownde, of Butterwicke, co. Lincoln, and thus became possessed of that lordship. From this Sir Robert descended

SIR ROBERT SHEFFIELD, who, in the 2nd HENRY VII., was one of the commanders in the royal army, against John, Earl of Lincoln, and his adherents, at the battle of Stoke. Sir Robert was afterwards Speaker of the House of Commons, and recorder of London. He m. Helen, dau. and heiress of Sir John Delves, Knt., and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT SHEFFIELD, of Butterwicke, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Zouche, of Codnor, and left a son,

EDMUND SHEFFIELD, who was advanced to the peerage, 16 February, 1547 (two days before the coronation of King EDWARD VI.), in the dignity of BARON SHEFFIELD, of Butterwicke, co. Lincoln. The next year, his lordship having accompanied the Marquess of Northampton, to suppress the rebellion of Ket, in Norfolk, lost his life in the conflict. He had m. the Lady Anne Vere, dau. of John, Earl of Oxford, and left issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Frances, m. to — Metham, Esq.

Eleanor, m. to Denzil Holles, Esq., 2nd son of Sir William Holles, Knt., of Houghton, Notts.

Elizabeth.

His lordship was s. by his son,

JOHN SHEFFIELD, 2nd Baron Sheffield. This nobleman m. Douglas, dau. of William, Lord Howard of Effingham, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Dudley, Earl of Leicester,) he had issue,

EDMUND, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, Earl of Ormonde.

His lordship d. in 1669, and was s. by his son,

EDMUND SHEFFIELD, 3rd baron. This nobleman distinguished himself in arms, in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, particularly in the celebrated defeat of the formidable Armada. He was subsequently made governor of the Brill, and in the same reign, a knight of the Garter. By King JAMES I., his lordship was constituted president of the council for the northern parts of the realm; and created by the succeeding monarch, 7 February, 1626, EARL OF MULGRAVE. He m. 1st, Ursula, dau. of Sir Robert Thirwhit, of Ketilby, co. Lincoln, and had no less than fifteen children, of whom, Charles d. unm., &c.

JOHN (Sir), m. Griseld, dau. of Sir Edmund Anderson, chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and dying v. p., left a son, EDMUND, who s. his grandfather.

Margaret, m. to Walter Walsh, Esq., of Castle Hoel, in Ireland, and her 2nd dau. and co-heiress, URSULA WALSH, m. John Bryan, Esq., of Bawnmore, co. Kilkenny (his 2nd wife). The only surviving child and heiress of this marriage,

ELIZABETH BRYAN, marrying Oliver Grace, Esq., M.P., of Shanganagh, in the Queen's co., a portion of the Sheffield property came, eventually, into the Grace family, and is at present enjoyed by Sir William Grace, Baronet.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Sir Edward Swift, Knt.; and 2ndly, to Sir John Bouchier.

Mary, m. to Sir Ferdinand Fairfax.

Frances, m. to Sir Philip Fairfax.

Triphena, m. to George Verney, Esq.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Mariana, dau. of Sir William Urwyn, Knt., by whom he had James, d. 1664; Thomas; Robert; Margaret m. Symon Thelwall, Esq., of Plas-y-Ward, co. Denbigh; and Sarah. He d. at eighty years of age, in 1646, and was s. by his grandson.

EDMUND SHEFFIELD, 2nd Earl of Mulgrave, who m. Lady Elizabeth Cranfield, dau. of Lionel, Earl of Middlesex, and dying in 1658, was s. by his only son.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, 3rd Earl of Mulgrave. This nobleman, who became one of the most eminent personages of the period in which he lived, first attained distinction in arms; being in the great sea fight at Solbay, and afterwards captain of the Royal Catherine. In 1674, he was installed a knight of the Garter, and soon after made gentleman of the bed-chamber to King CHARLES II. He was at the same time appointed colonel of the old Holland regiment, governor of Hull, and entrusted with the command of the forces sent to Tangier. In the 1st JAMES II., his lordship was sworn of the privy council, and constituted lord chamberlain of the household. After the Revolution, he was sworn of the new privy council, and created by King WILLIAM, 10 May, 1694, MARQUESS OF NORMANBY, co. Lincoln. His lordship was further advanced, 2nd Queen ANNE, 9 March, 1703, to the DUKEDOM OF NORMANBY, and created in a fortnight afterwards, DUKE OF THE COUNTY OF BUCKINGHAM. The duke aspired to the fame of a man of letters, as well as a soldier and a statesman; and his literary productions have attained some popularity, but his abilities as a writer have been, of course, differently estimated.

Dryden says: "His thoughts are always just, his numbers harmonious, his words chosen, his expressions strong and manly, his verse flowing, and his turns as happy as they are easy." Walpole on the contrary, thus characterizes his lordship:—

"The life of this peer takes up fourteen pages and a half, in folio, in the 'General Dictionary,' where it has little pretensions to occupy a couple. But his pious relict was always purchasing places for him, herself, and their son, in every suburb of the temple of fame: a tenure, against which, above all others, quo warrantos are sure to take place. The author of the article in the 'Dictionary,' calls the duke one of the most beautiful prose writers, and greatest poets of this age; which is also, he says, proved by the finest writers his contemporaries; co-tidicates that have little weight, where the merit is not proved by the author's own works. It is certain, that his grace's compositions in prose have nothing extraordinary in them; his poetry is most indifferent; and the greatest part of both is already fallen into total neglect. It is said, that he wrote, in hopes of being confounded with his predecessor in the title; but he would more easily have been mistaken with the other Buckingham, if he had never written at all. He had a great deal of bravery, and understood a court. Queen ANNE, who undoubtedly had no turn to gallantry, yet so far resembled her predecessor, ELIZABETH, as not to dislike a little homage to her person. This duke was immediately rewarded, on her accession, for having made love to her before her marriage. Though attached to the house of Stewart and their principles, he maintained a dignity of honour in some points, independent of all connections; for he ridiculed King JAMES's religion, though he attended him to his chapel; and warmly took the part of the Catalans against the Tory ministry, whom he had helped to introduce to the queen."

His grace m. 1st, Ursula, dau. of Colonel Stawel, and widow of the Earl of Conway, by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke, and widow of Baptist, Earl of Gainsborough, who also d. s. p. in 1703-4; and 3rdly, Catherine, natural dau. of King JAMES II. (by Catherine, dau. of Sir Charles Sidley, Baronet), and widow of James, Earl of Anglesey, by whom he had three sons and a dau., one of whom, EDMUND, alone survived infancy. His grace* d. in 1721, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES HERBERT, who, at the decease of Edmund, the last Duke, succeeded to a great part of the estates, including Normanby, co. Lincoln, and assumed by the will of his father, the surname of SHEFFIELD; he was created a baronet in 1755, and the present Sir Robert Sheffield is his great-grandson and successor.

EDMUND SHEFFIELD, 2nd Duke of Buckingham. This young nobleman served in 1734, as a volunteer, under the command of his uncle, the Duke of Berwick, in Germany, and was an aide-de-camp at the siege of Fort Kiel and Philipsburgh, where that eminent general lost his life. His grace d., however, the following year at Rome, of a rapid consumption, not having attained majority, and with him, the honours and male line of the ducal house of Sheffield, EXPIRED.

SHERARD—BARONS AND EARLS OF HARBOROUGH.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 19 October, 1714.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 8 May, 1719.

Lineage.

The house of Harborough claimed descent from a family of Shirard, which it is stated was powerful and opulent at the Conquest, in the counties of Chester and Lancaster. Its representative, temp. HENRY VI.,

GEOFFREY SHERARD, high-sheriff of Rutlandshire in 1468, 1480, and 1484, m. Joyce, dau. of Thomas Ashby, Esq., of Lowsby, in Leicestershire, and had two sons; the younger, Robert, of Lobethorpe, was ancestor of the SHERARDS, Baronets of Lobethorpe (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage); and from the elder, THOMAS, descended the immediate founder of the dignities of the ennobled line.

WILLIAM SHERARD, Esq., of Stapleford, co. Leicester (sprung, through a long line of eminent ancestors, from Robert Sherard, Lord of Bromhall, in Cheshire, temp. King STEPHEN), who received the honour of knighthood from JAMES I., at Oakland, 3 July, 1622, and was elevated to the peerage of Ireland by the succeeding monarch, 10 July, 1627, as Baron Sherard, of Leitrim. He m. Abigail, eldest dau. and co-heir of Cecil Cave, Esq., by Anne, his wife, dau. and sole heir of Anthony Bennet, Esq. of Greenwich, by whom he had seven sons and four daus.; of whom, BENNET s. to the honours; PHILIP (the 2nd son), seated at Whissendine, was father of BENNET, whose son, PHILIP, s. as 2nd EARL OF HARBOROUGH; and George (the 3rd son), was ancestor of PHILIP-CASTELL SHERARD, Esq. of Glatton, Hunts, who s. as 9th BARON SHERARD, 28 July, 1853. (See Extant Peerage). William, 1st Lord Sherard, d. 16 April, 1640, and was s. by his eldest son,

BENNET, 2nd baron, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Robert Christopher, Knt., of Alford, co. Lincoln, and dying in 1700, was s. by his only surviving son,

BENNET, 3rd baron, who was enrolled amongst the peers of Great Britain, as Baron Harborough, of Harborough, co. Leicester, 19 October, 1714, with remainder, in default of male issue, to Philip Sherard, Esq. of Whissendine, co. Rutland (ref. to Philip, 2nd son of the 1st lord). His lordship was advanced to a viscounty, 31 October, 1718, by the title of Viscount Sherard, of Stapleford; and created 8 May, 1719, EARL OF HARBOROUGH, with the like reversionary clause in the patent of creation (of the earldom) as had already been granted in that of the barony. His lordship m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Sir Henry Calverley, Knt., of Ayrholme, in the bishopric of Durham; and d. s. p. 16 October, 1732, when the viscounty became extinct; but the earldom devolved upon his cousin,

PHILIP SHERARD, Esq. of Whissendine, as 2nd earl, who inherited also, as direct heir, the Irish dignity. This nobleman m. Anne, only dau. and heir of Nicholas Pedley, Esq., eldest son of Sir Nicholas Pedley, Knt., of Huntingdon, serjeant-at-law, by whom he had issue,

I. BENNET, his successor.

II. John, d. unm. in 1746.

III. ROBERT, 4th earl.

IV. Daniel, R.N., d. unm. 1744.

V. Philip, a lieut.-gen. in the army; d. unm. 14 September, 1790.

The family of Phipps, which now possesses the titles of Mulgrave and Normanby, was connected with the Sheffields, by William Phipps, Esq., father of the Earl Mulgrave, marrying Lady Catherine Annesley, only dau. and heiress of James, 1st Earl of Anglesey, by Catherine, natural dau. of King JAMES II., which Catherine m. 2ndly, JOHN SHEFFIELD, Duke of Buckingham and Normanby, and by him was mother of EDMUND, the last Duke of Buckingham, which Edmund was thus half-brother to the said Lady Catherine Annesley, wife of William Phipps.

- i. Dorothy, m. to the Rev. James Torkington, of Great Stukeley, co. Huntingdon.
 ii. Lucy, d. 1751.
 iii. Susan, d. 1765.
 iv. Ursula, d. 1745.

He d. 20 July, 1753, and was s. by his son,

BENNET SHERARD, 3rd earl. This nobleman m. four times: 1st. 27 June, 1748, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Ralph, Earl of Verney, by whom he had several children, who all d. in infancy; 2ndly, 3 July, 1757, Frances, dau. of the Hon. William Noel, one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, by whom he had a dau., Frances, m. 18 April, 1776, to Major-Gen. George Morgan; 3rdly, 21 March, 1761, Margaret, dau. of Thomas Hill, Esq. of Tern, in Shropshire, M.P., by whom he had no surviving issue; and 4thly, in 1767, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir Thomas Cave, Bart., LL.D., of Stanford Hall, co. Leicester, which lady d. s. p. His lordship d. 23 February, 1770, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

THE REV. ROBERT SHERARD, prebendary and canon-residentary of Salisbury, as 4th earl, b. 21 October, 1712. His lordship m. 1st, in 1762, Catherine, eldest dau. and co-heir of Edward Hearst, Esq. of Salisbury, by whom he had no child; 2ndly, 1767, Jane, dau. of William Reeve, Esq., by whom he had a dau. (Lucy, who was m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Cave, Bart., M.P., and 2ndly, to the Hon. Philip Pusey, and d. the widow of the latter, 28 March, 1858) and a son, PHILIP, his successor; and 3rdly, 1772, Dorothy, dau. of William Roberts, Esq. of Glaston, co. Rutland, by whom he had Dorothea-Sophia. He d. 21 April, 1799, and was s. by his son,

PHILIP SHERARD, 5th earl, b. 10 October, 1767; who m. 4 July, 1791, Eleanor, dau. of the Hon. John Monckton, of Fineshade, co. Northampton, by whom (who d. 9 October, 1809) he had issue,

- i. ROBERT, his heir.
 ii. Lucy-Eleanor, m. 19 May, 1817, to Col. the Hon. Henry-C. Lowther, 2nd son of William, Earl of Lonsdale, K.G., and d. 8 June, 1848, leaving Henry Lowther, Esq., M.P., and other issue.
 iii. Anna-Maria, m. 7 March, 1816, to William Cuffe, Esq. of St. Albans, co. Kilkenny, and d. 22 November, 1848.
 iv. Sophia, m. 1st, 9 April, 1818, to Sir Thomas Whichcote, Bart.; and 2ndly, 23 April, 1840, to William Charles-Evans Freke, Esq., 4th son of the Hon. Percy Freke, and nephew to Lord Carbery.
 v. Jane, d. 18 December, 1856.
 vi. Charlotte, d. unm. 1856.
 vii. Susan, m. 11 July, 1821, to Lieut.-Gen. John Reeve, of the grenadier guards, and had, with other issue, a son, Col. John Reeve, of Leadenham House, co. Lincoln, late grenadier guards, b. 1 June, 1822, m. 18 August, 1857, Frances-Wilhelmina, eldest dau. of Sir G. Erie Welby, Bart.

His lordship d. 10 December, 1807, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT SHERARD, 6th earl, b. 26 August, 1797, who m. 27 November, 1843, Mary-Eliza, dau. of Edward Temple, Esq. (only son of the late Rev. Thomas-William Temple, D.D.), by Caroline, his wife, dau. of Sir John Honeywood, Bart., of Evington, and the Lady Frances Courtenay, his wife, sister of the late Earl of Devon. The earl d. 28 July, 1859, when the Earldom and Barony of Harborough became extinct, and the Irish Barony of Sherard devolved upon PHILIP-CASTELL SHERARD, Esq., as 9th BARON SHERARD.

SHULDHAM—BARON SHULDHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 31 July, 1776.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the very ancient family of Shuldham, seated for full 500 years at Shuldham's Manor, co. Norfolk.

EDMOND SHULDHAM, Esq. of Dublin, crown solicitor, 1713, m. Mary, dau. and heir of McCarthy Spanuagh, of Dunmanway, and had with other issue, a son,

THE REV. LEMUEL SHULDHAM, of Dublin, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Daniel Molyneux, Esq. of Ballymulvey, by Catherine, his wife, dau. of Thomas Pooley, Esq. of the city of Dublin, and granddau., by Mary, his wife, dau. and co-heiress of

William Dowdall, Esq., of Mount-town, co. Meath, of Col. Adam Molyneux of Ballymulvey, M.P. for co. Longford in 1661, who was son of Daniel Molyneux, Esq. of Newlands, co. Dublin, Ulster King of Arms, M.P. for Strabane in 1613, and grandson of Thomas Molyneux, chancellor of the exchequer in Ireland, temp. ELIZABETH, who d. 3 January, 1596. By Elizabeth Molyneux, who was sole heir of her brother, Pooley Molyneux, Esq. of Ballymulvey, who d. s. p. in 1772, the Rev. Lemuel Shuldham had issue,

LEMUEL, ancestor of the SHULDHAMS of Ballymulvey and Moig House, co. Longford (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

MOLYNEUX, of whom presently.

Rebecca, d. in 1785, unm.

The 2nd son,

MOLYNEUX SHULDHAM, vice-admiral R.N., and M.P. for Fowey, was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, as BARON SHULDHAM, 31 July, 1776. His lordship m. 4 October, 1790, Margaret-Irene, dau. of John Sarney, Esq. of Somerset House, London, and widow of John Harcourt, Esq. of Ankerwycke, Bucks, but by her (who m. 3rdly, 13 July, 1805, Richard, 2nd Earl of Clanwilliam) had no issue. He d. October, 1798, and with him the title EXPIRED. His lordship had two uncles, one of whom, Edmond, was ancestor of the SHULDHAMS, of Dunmanway, co. Cork.

SIDLEY—COUNTESS OF DORCHESTER.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 January, 1685-6.

Lineage.

CATHERINE SIDLEY (only dau. of Sir Charles Sidley, Bart., of Southfield, co. Kent), mistress to King JAMES II., was created by that monarch, 20 January, 1685-6, Baroness of Dartington, co. Durham, and COUNTESS OF DORCHESTER, for life. By his Majesty, her ladyship had an only surviving dau.,

LADY CATHERINE DARNLEY, who m. 1st, James Annesley, 3rd Earl of Anglesey, by whom she had an only dau.,

LADY CATHERINE ANNESLEY, who m. William Phipps, Esq., son of Sir Constantine Phipps, Knt., Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and had a son, CONSTANTINE PHIPPS, who was created BARON MULGRAVE, in the peerage of Ireland; a dignity inherited by the present Marquess of Normanby.

Her ladyship being divorced from Lord Anglesey, for cruelty and causeless ill-treatment on her husband's part, m. 2ndly, John Sheffield, Duke of Buckingham, by whom she was mother of Edmund, 2nd Duke of Buckingham and Normanby.

The countess, after the dissolution of her connection with the King, m. Sir David Colyear, subsequently Earl of Portmore, by whom she left one only surviving son, Charles, 2nd Earl of Portmore. The conduct of this lady made so strong an impression upon the honourable mind of her father, Sir Charles Sidley, that he conceived ever after a rooted hatred to her royal paramour, and was a zealous promoter of the Revolution. Being asked one day, why he appeared so warm against the king, who had created his dau. a countess, he replied, "it was from gratitude; for as his Majesty had made his daughter a countess, it was but fit he should do all he could to make his daughter a queen."

Her ladyship d. in 1692, when all her honours became, as a matter of course, extinct.

SINCLAIR—EARL OF ORKNEY.

Lineage.

The Scandinavian Earls of Orkney trace their descent from the noblest and most heroic of the ruling dynasties of the north. IVAR, Prince of the Uplands in Norway, who claimed a descent from the deified hero THOR, was the father of EYSTEIN, who had issue ROGENWALD and MALAHULE. The latter was ancestor of the great Norman race of De Toeny, who were the hereditary Standard bearers of Normandy, and from whom the house of Lindsay is descended. ROGENWALD, was a supporter of King HAROLD HARFAER, and assisted him in obtaining the mastery over the other independent Norwegian chiefs, and in establishing himself as King of all Norway. He was Earl of Møre and Raumdahl in Norway, and in 888, he obtained from King HAROLD a grant of the Orkney and Shetland islands. One of his sons, ROLLO, conquered Neustria, founded the line of sovereign Dukes of Normandy, and was ancestor to WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. Another of the sons of Earl Rogenwald was EYNAR, to whom his father assigned the Orkney and Shetland Isles, and whom King HAROLD created earl. He was the ancestor of the line of great Scandinavian earls who reigned over the Orkney and Shetland islands during five centuries. The alliances of these insular magnates with royalty were frequent. Besides more remote intermarriages between them and the family of HAROLD HARFAGR, four deserve especial notice.

SIGURD, 2nd Earl of Orkney, who was slain at the battle of Clontarf in 1014, m. one of the daus. and co-heirs of MALCOLM II., King of Scotland; and his descendants and representatives share the honour of being heirs general of the ancient Scoto-Pictish kings, with the reigning family of Great Britain.

PAUL, Earl of Orkney, who, in 1066, accompanied King HAROLD HARDRADE in his ill-omened expedition against England, m. the dau. of Earl Haco and Princess Ragenhilda, dau. of MAGNUS, the good King of Norway, who d. in 1048; and the descendants of this marriage became heirs-general of a branch of the royal family of Norway. The grand-dau. and eventual heir of this marriage, Margaret, Countess of Orkney, m. about the middle of the 12th century, Madoch, Earl of Athole, son of Earl Melmare, younger son of King DUNCAN I., and brother of King MALCOLM CANMORE. Her descendant, JOHN, Earl of Orkney, who d. in 1306, m. a Norwegian Princess, dau. of MAGNUS, King of Norway, by Ingeborga, dau. of ERIC, King of Denmark. The son of this marriage,

MAGNUS, 5th Earl of Orkney, was admitted by his uncle, Haco, King of Norway, in 1308, to be a prince of the blood royal, and to take his place along with the immediate sons of the Norwegian kings; he m. Catherine, Countess of Caithness, in her own right, and in 1320, he joined the other Magnates Scotie, in signing the famous letter to the Pope, in which the independence of Scotland was asserted. This great earl was the last of the Scandinavian sovereigns of the Orkneys. He was s. by his dau., the Countess Isabella, who carried the Earldoms of Orkney, and Caithness, together with the right of representation of her illustrious blood, into a great Scottish family, by marrying MALISE, 6th Earl Palatine of Strathorne. The son of this marriage was

MALISE, 7th Earl Palatine of Stratherne, and Earl of Orkney and Caithness, one of the most illustrious and powerful of the magnates of Scotland. He had no male issue. His dau. Isabella outlived all her sisters, and their descendants, and carried her extensive possessions and magnificent claims into the great Norman house of SINCLAIR, or DE SANCTO CLARO. Isabella of Stratherne, m. William St. Clair or Sinclair, Lord of Rosslyn, and transmitted her right to the Earldom of Orkney to Henry her son. The remote ancestor of William St. Clair was a noble Norman baron, descended from Waleran, Count of St. Clair in Normandy, by a dau. of Richard, the Norman duke, who settled in Scotland in the reign of King DAVID I., and obtained from that monarch, before the middle of the 12th century, the Lordship of Rosslyn, in the shire of Midlothian. His descendant WILLIAM ST. CLAIR, Lord of Rosslyn, the companion in arms of King ROBERT BRUCE, perished along with James, Lord of Douglas, in battle against the Moors in Spain, in 1330, while carrying that monarch's heart to the Holy Sepulchre, in Jerusalem. The son of this hero,

WILLIAM ST. CLAIR, Lord of Rosslyn, m. Isabella, of Stratherne, dau. and eventual sole heir of Malise, 7th Earl Palatine of Stratherne, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, by whom he had issue,

- I. HENRY, who became Earl of Orkney.
- II. David, who had from his brother in 1391, the confirmation of Newburgh, and of some lands in Orkney and Shetland.
- III. Margaret, wife 1st, in 1353, of Thomas, Earl of Angus and 2ndly, of Sir William St. Clair, of Hermandston. This is the first connexion that can be traced between the two distinct branches of the Norman race of De Sancto Claro.

HENRY ST. CLAIR, the eldest son, s. his father as Lord of Rosslyn, and in right of his mother he successfully prosecuted his claim to the Earldom of Orkney, which, being a female fief, was granted to him by Haco, 6th King of Norway, as heir of the old Scandinavian earls, in 1379; and he was immediately thereupon recognized as Earl of Orkney, by his native sovereign, ROBERT, 2nd King of Scotland. Earl Henry is said to have m. 1st, Florentia, a lady descended from the royal family of Denmark, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Jean, dau. of Sir John Haliburton, Lord of Dirleton, by whom he had issue,

- I. HENRY, his successor.
- II. John, who, in 1418, did homage to ERIC, King of Norway, for Shetland.

III. William.

- I. Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Drummond, of Stobhall, brother to Annabella, Queen of ROBERT III. of Scotland.
- II. Mary, wife of Thomas Somerville, of Carnwath, ancestor to Lord Somerville.
- III. Jean, wife of Sir John Forester, ancestor to Lord Forester.
- IV. Marjory, wife of Sir David Menzies of Weem.
- V. Beatrix, wife of James, 7th Earl of Douglas; in some genealogies this lady is stated to have been dau. to the 2nd earl.

Henry, Earl of Orkney, d. in 1400, having been survived by his mother Isabella, through whom he had claimed, and obtained the earldom. He was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY ST. CLAIR, 2nd Earl of Orkney, and Lord Sinclair. There is no doubt that this earl held the Barony of Sinclair as a subordinate title to his great earldom. He m. Egidia, dau. and heir of William Douglas, Lord of Nithsdale, by the Princess Egidia, dau. of ROBERT II., King of Scotland, who brought great possessions to her husband, and who survived him for many years, being alive in 1438. The earl d. in 1422, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM ST. CLAIR, 3rd Earl of Orkney, and Lord Sinclair. In 1456 the Earl resigned to the crown his Lordship of Nithsdale, and received in compensation the Earldom of Caithness, which was granted to him, and his heirs female as well as male. King JAMES III. having on his marriage with the Princess Margaret of Denmark, acquired from his father-in-law, the King of Denmark and Norway, the over lordship of the Orkney Islands, compelled the earl to resign that princely fief to the crown in 1470, and gave him as a most inadequate compensation, the lands of Dysart and Ravensheugh, and the castle of Ravenscraig, co. Fife. He m. 1st, the Lady Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas, and Duke of Touraine, by the Princess Margaret, dau. of ROBERT III., King of Scotland. This lady had been previously twice m., 1st to John Stewart, Earl of Buchan, Constable of France, son of Robert, Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland; and 2ndly, to Thomas Stewart, styled Earl of Garioch. By her the Earl of Orkney had issue, a son, WILLIAM, ancestor to the Lords Sinclair, and a dau., Catherine, wife of Alexander, Duke of Albany, 2nd son of JAMES II., King of Scotland. He m. 2ndly, Marjory, dau. of Alexander Sutherland, of Dunbeath, by Mariotta, dau. of Donald, Lord of the Isles and Earl of Ross, by whom he had issue,

- I. Oliver, founder of the cadet branch of St. Clair of Rosslyn, now extinct in the male line.
- II. William, founder of the family of Sinclair, Earl of Caithness.
- III. David.
- IV. John, bishop of Caithness.
- I. Eleanor, wife of John Stewart, Earl of Athol, half-brother of King JAMES II.
- II. Marian, wife of Sir John Houston, of Houston.
- III. Margaret, wife of David Boswell, of Balmuto.
- IV. Marjory, wife of Andrew Leslie, Master of Rothes.

The earl being resolved to disinherit his eldest son William, resigned the Earldom of Caithness to the crown in 1476, and got a new grant of it with remainder to his 3rd son, WILLIAM, and his heirs male and female. He d. in 1480, and at the time of his death was Earl of Caithness and Lord Sinclair. He left nothing to his eldest son, WILLIAM, Master of Orkney and Caithness, to whom, during his life, he had given the Barony of Newburgh, in Aberdeenshire. He left his great estates of Rosslyn, Herbertshire, &c., to Sir Oliver, the eldest son of his 2nd marriage, and the Earldom of Caithness, with the estates thereto belonging to William, the 2nd son of his 2nd marriage. As he had not resigned the lordship of Sinclair, it went to his eldest son,

WILLIAM, the disinherited Master of Orkney and Caithness, who thus became Lord Sinclair. His life was spent in a struggle with his more favoured brothers for a share of the paternal inheritance, and he compelled Sir Oliver to resign to him the estates of Dysart and Ravensheugh, and the castle of Ravenscraig, co. Fife; and he was solemnly recognized by Sir Oliver, and William, Earl of Caithness, as their chief and head of their house. Immediately after bringing this family arrangement to a conclusion, William the Master of Orkney and Caithness, d. in 1487, leaving by his wife, Lady Christian Leslie, dau. of George, 1st Earl of Rothes, a son and heir,

HENRY SINCLAIR, who immediately upon his father's death was in 1488, recognized as a peer of parliament, by the king and parliament as LORD SINCLAIR. He was not then so created, but recognized as Lord Sinclair, his father, grand-father, and great-grandfather before him having held that title. As he was the first of the family who held that title alone, he is generally styled 1st Lord Sinclair, but he was in fact the 4th lord, dating the origin of the title from the 2nd Earl of Orkney. The Barony of Sinclair was a female title It has been ruled in law in the case of the old lordship of Lindsay, which was attached to the Earldom of Crawford, that a lordship for which there was no patent, and which was held as an inferior title along with a great earldom, followed the course of succession of that superior title. It accordingly follows that the lordship of Sinclair was determined as to its succession by the great Earldoms of Orkney and Caithness, to which it was attached as an inferior title, and as they were not limited to male succession, but were descendible to heirs general, the lordship of Sinclair consequently was a peerage which descended to heirs-general. HENRY SINCLAIR, who thus in 1488 became 1st, or more properly, 4th Lord Sinclair, m. Margaret, dau. of Adam Hepburn, Lord Hailes, and sister of the 1st Earl of Bothwell, by whom he had issue, a son, and four daus.,

- I. WILLIAM, his heir.
- i. Catherine, wife of Sir David Wemyss, of Wemyss, ancestor to the Earls of Wemyss.
- ii. Helen, wife of James, 4th Lord Ogilvie, of Airlie.
- iii. Jean, wife of Alexander Lindsay, Master of Crawford, son of the 8th earl.
- iv. Agnes, wife of Patrick Hepburn, 3rd Earl of Bothwell; her son, James, 4th Earl of Bothwell, and Duke of Orkney, was 3rd husband of Mary Queen of Scots.

Henry, Lord Sinclair, was slain at Flodden in 1513, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM SINCLAIR, 2nd or more properly 5th Lord Sinclair. m. 1st, in 1515, Lady Elizabeth Keith, dau. of William, 3rd Earl Marischal, and descended from JAMES I., King of Scotland (widow of Colin, Master of Oliphant), by whom he had issue,

- I. HENRY.
- II. Magnus.
- i. Margaret.

He m. 2ndly, Agnes Bruce. He d. in 1570, and was s. by his son,

HENRY SINCLAIR, 3rd or more properly 6th Lord Sinclair. He m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Patrick, 6th Lord Lindsay, of the Byres, by whom he had issue,

- I. JAMES, Master of Sinclair
- ii. Patrick, of Balgreggie. He m. Catherine, dau. of James Boswell, of Balmuto, by whom he was ancestor of a line of Sinclairs of Balgreggie, which did not fail in the male line until 1710, in the person of John Sinclair of Balgreggie, who as he survived the last Lord Sinclair in the male line for thirty-four years, was during that long period head of the house of Sinclair, and if the title had been limited to heirs male, would have had an undoubted right to it. His family is now represented in the female line by Aytoun, of Inchdarnie.
- iii. Andrew.
- iv. Magnus.
- i. Helen, wife of Andrew Kinninmont, of Kinninmont.

Lord Sinclair m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William, 7th Lord Forbes, by whom he had issue,

- I. Laurence.
- ii. William.
- i. Elizabeth, wife of Sir Duncan Campbell, of Glenorchy, ancestor to the Earls of Breadalbane.
- ii. Jane.

Henry, Lord Sinclair, d. in 1601. His eldest son, James, Master of Sinclair, d. before his father in 1592. He m. Lady Isabella Leslie, dau. of Andrew, 4th Earl of Rothes, by whom he had issue, 1 HENRY; 2 James; 3 Patrick, all successively Lords Sinclair; 1 Catherine; 2 Margaret, wife of William, Lord Berniedale, eldest son of the 5th Earl of Caithness: her grandson was George, 6th Earl of Caithness. The 3rd lord was s. by his grandson,

HENRY SINCLAIR, 4th, or more properly 7th Lord Sinclair, d. in 1602, and was s. by his brother,

JAMES SINCLAIR, 5th, or more properly 8th Lord Sinclair, who d. in 1607, and was s. by his brother,

PATRICK SINCLAIR, 6th, or more properly 9th Lord Sinclair. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Cockburn, of Ormiston, Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland by whom he had issue,

- I. JOHN, his heir.
- ii. Henry, d. unn. 1670.

And dying in 1615, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN SINCLAIR, 7th or more properly, 10th Lord Sinclair. This nobleman took an active part in the political troubles of the times, and was a zealous royalist. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester in 1651, and was detained in prison until 1660. He was the last lord of the male line of the family, and on his death in 1676, at the age of sixty-six, the honour of being male representative of the great house of Rosslyn and Orkney devolved on John Sinclair, of Balgreggie, until his death without male issue in 1710; while the ancient Sinclair peerage and the family estates were transmitted through the 7th lord's dau., Catherine, Mistress of Sinclair, to her son as heir general. The original constitution of the Sinclair peerage proves it to have been a female title; and th is confirmed by a long series of charters from the crown to successive Lords Sinclair and their heirs-general. John, 7th lord, m., in 1631, Lady Mary Wemyss, eldest dau. of John, 1st Earl of Wemyss, by Jane, eldest dau. of Patrick, 7th Lord Gray, by whom he had an only dau. and heir, CATHERINE SINCLAIR, Mistress of Sinclair, who, 15 April, 1659, m. John St. Clair, eldest son of Sir John St. Clair, of Hermandston, by Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Sinclair, Baronet of Stevenson, by whom she had issue, 1 HENRY, heir to his grandfather, b. 1660; 2 John, b. 1663, d. unn.; 1 Mary, b. 1666, d. unn. The Mistress of Sinclair d. in 1666, and was followed to the grave by her husband, while their son was in his minority. John, 7th Lord Sinclair, d. in 1676, and was s. in his title and estates by his daughter's son,

HENRY ST. CLAIR, who was thus heir male of Hermandston, and heir-general of Rosslyn and Orkney, uniting in his person the two great unconnected Norman lines of De Sancto Clara. As the 7th lord had never surrendered or resigned his peerage to the crown, Henry St. Clair inherited it, along with the estates of Dysart and Ravensraig, in right of his mother Catherine, the Mistress of Sinclair. During his minority he was under the guardianship of his paternal grandfather, Sir John St. Clair, of Hermandston, and in the year 1677, a new patent of the Sinclair peerage was obtained from King CHARLES II., purporting to be founded on a designation made by John, 7th lord, in Henry's favour; and introducing an entirely new series of heirs, excluding all the heirs male and female of the ancient Lords Sinclair, and substituting in place of them, the cadet branches of the entirely alien family of Hermandston. By this patent the peerage was granted, in default of the male heirs of Henry, Lord Sinclair's own body, in remainder to the heirs male of his father, the cadet branches of the family of Hermandston, who were of a totally different race, and in no way descended from the Lords Sinclair. But previous to the granting of this new patent there was no resignation to the crown of the original peerage of Sinclair. That peerage therefore continued to exist, and was, in no way affected by the limitations of the patent of 1677, which must be held to convey a different peerage, while the old peerage stands exactly on the footing on which it stood anterior to the new patent, and the right to which is vested in the undoubted representative and heir-general of Henry, 8th or 11th Lord Sinclair, viz., John Anstruther Thomson, of Charleton, who is thus, de jure, Lord Sinclair, of the original creation. Henry St. Clair, 8th or more properly 11th Lord Sinclair, m. in 1690, Grizzel, dau. of Sir James Cockburn, Bart., of Cockburn, by whom he had issue,

- I. JOHN, of whom hereafter.
- ii. JAMES, of whom hereafter.
- iii. William, a major in the army, d. s. p. in 1762.
- iv. David, d. young.
- v. Henry, d. unn. in 1756.
- vi. Matthew, d. unn. in 1747.
- i. Grizzel, of whom hereafter as carrying on the line of the family as heir-general.
- ii. Catherine, b. 1695, wife of Sir John Erskine, Bart., of Alva. Her son, Sir Henry Erskine, Bart., m. Janet Wedderburn, sister to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Loughborough, created Earl of Rosslyn, with remainder to her son, Sir James Erskine, Bart., who s. his maternal uncle as 2nd Earl of Rosslyn, and s. by special destination to the estates of Dysart and Rosslyn, on the death of his father's cousin, Colonel Paterson St. Clair, in 1789, on which he assumed the additional name of St. Clair. His son is James Alexander, 3rd and present Earl of Rosslyn.
- iii. Margaret, wife of Sir David Baird, Bart., of Newbythe. Her son d. s. p.
- iv. Elizabeth, wife of David, 3rd Earl of Wemyss, by whom she had issue, two daus., 1 Elizabeth, wife of William, 16th Earl of Sutherland; 2 Margaret, wife of James, 7th Earl of Moray.

By descent from these three daus. of the 8th Lord Sinclair, Grizzel, Catherine, and Elizabeth, John Anstruther Thomson, is heir-general of the Earls of Orkney and the Lords Sinclair, through the eldest, while the Earl of Rosslyn is representative of the 2nd, and the Duke of Sutherland, is representative of the 3rd. Henry, 8th Lord Sinclair, d. in 1723, and was s. in the family estates by his eldest son,

JOHN ST. CLAIR, Master of Sinclair, born 1683, who having been engaged in the rebellion in 1715, was attainted and never assumed the title of Lord Sinclair. In 1735, he had the satisfaction of purchasing the ancient ancestral castle of Rosslyn from the last male heir of that cadet branch, and he added it to the family estates. He m. 1st, in 1733, Lady Margaret Stewart, dau. of James, 5th Earl of Galloway and widow of James, 5th Earl of Southesk, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, in 1750, Amelia, dau. of Lord George Murray, and sister of the 3rd Duke of Athol (she m. 2ndly, 1754, James Farquharson, of Invercauld) by whom he had no issue, and dying in 1750, he was s. by his brother,

JAMES ST. CLAIR, a general in the army, and de jure 9th

Lord Sinclair, although he never assumed the title; he was a distinguished diplomatist, as well as a military commander, and was ambassador at the courts of Turin and Vienna. During forty years until the time of his death he was a member of the British parliament. He m. Janet, dau. of Sir David Dalrymple, Bart., of Hailes, and widow of Sir John Baird, Baronet, by whom he had no issue, and dying in 1762, he was s. by his nephew Colonel James Paterson, son of his eldest sister,

THE HON. GRIZZEL ST. CLAIR, eldest dau. of Henry, 8th Lord Sinclair. She m. John Paterson, of Preston Hall, eldest son of the Most Rev. John Paterson, last archbishop of Glasgow, and elder brother of Sir William Paterson, 1st baronet of Eccles. She d. in 1737, and had issue a son, JAMES, and a dau., MARGARET, of whom hereafter. Her son,

JAMES PATERSON, a colonel in the army, on succeeding to the Dysart and Rosslyn estates, on the death of his uncle General St. Clair, assumed the name of St. Clair, as heir general of the family. He was moreover entitled to the original Sinclair peerage which has continued dormant since the death of the 8th lord. Whilst the peerage confirmed by the patent of 1677, by King CHARLES II., was claimed in 1780, by Charles St. Clair, of Hermandston, descended from a younger son of Sir John St. Clair of Hermandston, but in no way either descended from, or connected with the original Lords Sinclair. He, being included in the remainder of the patent of 1677, had his claim allowed by the House of Lords, and in 1782, became Lord Sinclair, being the first of his race that has borne the title. Colonel Paterson St. Clair, d. unm. in 1789. He was s. in the Dysart and Rosslyn estates by his cousin, Sir James Erskine, Baronet, afterwards 2nd Earl of Rosslyn, according to a special destination; whilst he was s. as heir-general of the house of Sinclair, by John Anstruther, his grandnephew, grandson of his sister, MARGARET PATERSON, who in 1744, m. John Thomson, of Charleton, son of John Thomson, of Charleton, by Rachel, dau. of — Brymer, of Edrom, and by him she had issue, 1. Rachel, wife of Colonel Macdonald, of Lochgarry, and d. in early life, s. p.; 2. Grizzel Maria, heiress of Charleton.

GRIZZEL-MARIA THOMSON, sole heiress of Charleton, m. Col. John Anstruther, 2nd son of Sir Philip Anstruther, 2nd baronet of Balcaiskie, by Catharine Hay, dau. of Lord Alexander Hay of Spott, son of John Hay, 1st Marquess of Tweeddale, by Lady Jean Scott, dau. of Frances, Earl of Buccleugh. Colonel John Anstruther was 18th in direct paternal descent from William de Candela, Lord of Anstruther, in 1100, the founder of the house of Anstruther, in Scotland. By John Anstruther, she had issue, a son, JOHN, her heir, and two daus., one of whom d. unm., and the other was wife of her cousin, General James Durham of Largo.

JOHN ANSTRUTHER, on succeeding to his mother's estate of Charleton, assumed the name of Thomson, and became John Anstruther Thomson of Charleton. On the death of his grand-uncle, Colonel James Paterson St. Clair, of Dysart and Rosslyn, he became heir-general of the Earls of Orkney and Lords Sinclair, and inherited the claim to the original Sinclair peerage. He was also heir-general of the St. Clairs of Hermandston, Lord Sinclair of that family being descended from a younger son. He m. Clementina, only dau. of the Right Hon. William Adam, M.P., of Blair Adam, baron of Exchequer, lord chief commissioner of the Jury Court, lord-lieutenant of the co. Kinross, by the Hon. ORIGINAL BARONY OF SINCLAIR.

The title of Lord Sinclair was held by Henry Sinclair, 2nd Earl of Orkney, as a subordinate title, along with his earldom. In a confirmation by the Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, in 1407, of the charter of the Barony of Herbertshill, from Archibald, Earl of Douglas, to Henry, Earl of Orkney, he is styled Lord Sinclair. In the grant by King JAMES II., in 1455, of the Earldom of Caithness to William, 3rd Earl of Orkney, son of Earl Henry, he is styled Lord Sinclair; and again, in a charter by King JAMES III. to the same nobleman, in 1471.

In the settlement between William Sinclair, Master of Orkney and Caithness, eldest son of Earl William, and his brother Oliver, in 1481, the former is styled Lord Sinclair; and in a charter of confirmation to this nobleman in 1487, he is styled Lord Sinclair.

On 26 January, 1488-9, Henry Sinclair, the son and heir of William, Master of Orkney, was recognized by the king and parliament of Scotland as Lord Sinclair, "his grandsire and his father having been Lords Sinclair." He was not then created Lord Sinclair. He was then recognized as actually holding a title which he had derived from his ancestors. He was the 4th lord, although he is generally reckoned as the 1st, he being the first of the family who did not hold that title in conjunction with another of superior dignity. Thus, the antiquity of the Sinclair peerage, dating prior to 1407, leads to the presumption that it was one which descended to heirs general.

The Earldom of Orkney, and also the Earldom of Caithness (as originally constituted) were titles that descended to heirs general. And as the peerage of Sinclair was attached to them as an inferior title, it must be presumed to have followed the course of succession of those superior titles. This sequence of an inferior title without a patent to the greater titles to which it was attached, has been ruled in law in the case of the ancient Barony of Lindsay.

All the grants and feefs given to the Sinclair family as Earls of Orkney, Earls of Caithness (as originally constituted), and Lords Sinclair were invariably given to heirs general.

These proofs and arguments tell in favour of the peerage of Sinclair having been a title which descended to heirs general, provided that there was no subsequent resignation of the original peerage to the crown, of which there is no trace whatever.

Henry, 4th, or as he is generally reckoned, 1st Lord Sinclair, fell at Flodden in 1513. And the title was transmitted in regular succession to his descendant John, 10th, or as he is generally reckoned, 7th lord, who s. his father in 1615. He was devoted to the cause of CHARLES I. and suffered severely for his principles both in his person and in his fortune. He had an only dau. and sole heir, Catherine, Mistress of Sinclair, who, in 1659, m. John St. Clair, eldest son of Sir John St. Clair of Hermandston, the head of a very ancient and distinguished family of the same name, but in no way descended from the Lords Sinclair, or even from the house of Rosslyn and Orkney. She pre-deceased her father in 1666, and her husband did not long survive her. She left, with two other children that had no succession, a son, HENRY ST. CLAIR, heir to his grandfather, John, 7th Lord Sinclair. This nobleman d. in 1676, leaving his grandson, Henry, as his heir-general, and his 2nd cousin, John Sinclair of Balgreggie as his heir male, who survived him until 1710, when he also d. without male issue. John, Lord Sinclair was s. in his title and estates by his grandson, HENRY, at that time a minor, having been b. in 1660, and under the guardianship of his paternal grandfather, Sir John St. Clair of Hermandston.

JOHN, 7th LORD SINCLAIR, had made a settlement of his honours and estates in favour of his grandson and heir-general, Henry. As the title was one descendible to heirs-general, no opposition was offered to his succession by the heir male, John Sinclair of Balgreggie, who would have been clearly entitled to it, if it had been restricted to heirs male.

Immediately upon the death of John, 7th Lord Sinclair, a patent was procured in 1677, from King CHARLES II., which conferred the title of Lord Sinclair upon the minor HENRY; at the same time that it altogether changed the line of succession to the peerage, and introduced a new and alien set of heirs. This patent states that it proceeds upon a designation by John, 7th Lord Sinclair, of his honours and estates in favour of his grandson, Henry. It is the royal confirmation of the designation or nomination of the deceased lord, which was unaccompanied by any resignation or surrender to the crown. It conveyed a Barony of Sinclair, with the precedence of the original barony, to a totally new line of heirs, limiting it, in the first instance, to the male line of Henry, the patentee, failing which, to the collateral younger branches of his father's family of Hermandston, who were total aliens to the house of Sinclair, to the exclusion of his own heirs general, and of all the heirs of the original lords. It seems clear that this confirmation or new creation in 1677, could not exclude the right of the previous heirs, owing to the want of a resignation, by which alone they could be barred. The patent does not found upon a resignation; but upon something quite different, viz., a "designation" or nomination, by John, Lord Sinclair. Therefore we may conclude that there was no resignation; otherwise it would have been stated in the patent. No new grant of the sovereign could have the slightest effect in altering the destination of the original dignity, so long as that dignity had not been actually resigned by the holders. There is not the slightest pretence for holding that such a resignation took place on the part of John, 7th Lord Sinclair, and therefore the title was actually vested in his grandson, Henry, at the time when the new patent was passed, and the dignity which he so inherited, must duly descend to his posterity according to the original course of succession, which was to heirs general. No resignation can be proved, and no constructive resignation can be presumed. There is not the smallest ground for supposing that John, Lord Sinclair's "designation" extended to the younger branches of his son-in-law's family of Hermandston, who were absolute aliens. It is indeed clear that it did not do so from the terms of the patent itself. The preamble of the patent only states the "designation" of the 7th lord as having been in favour of his grandson, and not a word is said of the family of Hermandston. The introduction of the cadet branches of that family into the body of the new patent, while they are excluded from its preamble makes the patent inconsistent with itself. In the preamble the king limits his reason for granting the patent to his favour for John, 7th Lord Sinclair, and his desire to reward his services in the person of his descendants. And yet in the body of the patent there is an alien race introduced, who have nothing to do with John, Lord Sinclair, to the exclusion of his descendants.

The new patent of 1677 granted to Henry, the heir of the deceased lord, then a minor and under the guardianship of his paternal grandfather, seems to have been procured through that gentleman's influence, in order to divert the peerage into his own family. And it must, in fact, be regarded as conveying a separate peerage, and in no way interfering with, or controlling, the succession to the ancient original Sinclair peerage which existed prior to 1407, and which was solemnly recognized in 1488. There is no mention of a resignation and nothing is more certain than that without that mention in the most specific terms, no resignation can exist. The original Sinclair peerage, therefore, must be held to exist although dormant, and its undoubted heir is the heir-general of the original lords, viz., John Anstruther Thomson of Charleton.

HENRY ST. CLAIR, the 8th Lord Sinclair, who inherited the original peerage as heir-general of his grandfather, and on whom a peerage was conferred by patent, by King CHARLES II. in 1677, during his minority, had numerous issue. Besides several sons who predeceased their elder brothers and left no succession, he had,

- i. JOHN, Master of Sinclair, his heir.
- ii. JAMES, who s. his brother.
- i. Grizzel, who carried on the line of heirs-general.
- ii. Catherine wife of Sir John Erskine, Bart., of Alva. Her grandson, Sir James Erskine, Bart., s. to the Sinclair estates by special entail on the death of Colonel James Paterson St. Clair, in 1789. He became Earl of Rosslyn, and his son is James-Alexander, present Earl of Rosslyn.
- iii. MARY, wife of Sir William Baird, Bart., of Newbythe. Her line failed.
- iv. Elizabeth, wife of David, 3rd Earl of Wemyss. Her heir is the Duke of Sutherland.

Henry, 8th Lord Sinclair, d. in 1723, and was s. by his son,

JOHN, Master of Sinclair, who, having been attainted during his father's lifetime, for his share in the rebellion in 1715, never assumed the title. Dying s. p. in 1750, he was s. by his brother,

THE HON. JAMES ST. CLAIR, a general in the army, and a distinguished ambassador, and during the greater part of his life a leading member of the House of Commons. He was de jure 9th Lord Sinclair, but he never assumed the title, and he d. s. p. in 1762. On his death, the male issue of Henry, 8th Lord Sinclair became extinct; and according to the limitations in the patent of 1677, the claim to the peerage which that patent conferred, opened to the cadet branches of the St. Clairs of Hermandston, and was brought forward in 1780, by Charles St. Clair, who in 1782 became Lord Sinclair in virtue of the patent of 1677. While the right to the original unresigned peerage of Sinclair was vested in the heir-general of the ancient lords, Colonel James Paterson, only son of the HON. GRIZZEL ST. CLAIR, eldest dau. of Henry, 8th lord, wife of John Paterson of Prestonhall, eldest son of the Most Reverend John Paterson, last archbishop of Glasgow, and elder brother of Sir William Paterson, 1st Baronet of Eccles. She d. in 1737, leaving issue, a son, JAMES, and a dau., Margaret, wife of John Thomson of Charleton.

JAMES PATERSON was a colonel in the army, and on the death of his uncle, the Hon. General James St. Clair, he s. to the Sinclair estate, became heir-general of the ancient Lords Sinclair, and took the name of St. Clair. Dying in 1789, he was s. in the representation of the Lords Sinclair, and in the claim to their ancient peerage, by his grand-nephew,

JOHN ANSTRUTHER THOMSON of Charleton, grandson and heir of his sister.

MARGARET PATERSON, wife of John Thomson, of Charleton, by whom she had a dau. and heir,

GRIZZEL MARIA THOMSON, heiress of Charleton, wife of Col. John Anstruther, 2nd son of Sir Philip Anstruther, Bart., of Balcastle, by Catherine, dau. of Lord Alexander Hay, son of John, 1st Marquess of Tweeddale, by Lady Jean Scott, dau. of the Earl of Buccleugh. By him she had a son, JOHN ANSTRUTHER, who, on inheriting his mother's estates of Charleton, took the name of Thomson, and on the death of his grand uncle, Col. Paterson St. Clair, became heir-general and representative of the Lords Sinclair.

SKEFFINGTON—EARL OF MASSEREENE.

By Letters Patent, dated 16 July, 1756.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM SKEFFINGTON, Knt., of Fiskerwick, co. Stafford, who was appointed by HENRY VIII., in 1529, his Majesty's commissioner to Ireland, arrived there in the August of that year, empowered to restrain the exactions of the soldiers, to call a parliament, and to provide that the possessions of the clergy might be subject to bear their part of the public expense. Sir William was subsequently a very distinguished political personage in Ireland; and d. in the government of that kingdom, as lord deputy, in December, 1535. His great-grandson,

JOHN SKEFFINGTON, Esq., of Fisherwick, co. Stafford, m. Alice, 7th dau. of Sir Thomas Cave, of Stanford, and was father of

SMITH, OR SMYTH—BARONS AND VISCOUNTS CARRINGTON.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 31 October, 1643.

Irish Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 4 November, 1643.

Lineage.

From SIR MICHAEL CARRINGTON, Knt., standard bearer to King RICHARD I. in the Holy Land, descended

JOHN CARRINGTON, who, in the beginning of HENRY IV.'s reign, having stoutly adhered to the deposed monarch, RICHARD II., was obliged to expatriate himself, and after residing some time abroad, is stated to have assumed for security the very general surname of SMITH. From this gentleman claimed descent

JOHN SMITH, Esq., who being the lord treasurer's remembrancer in the exchequer, was constituted, in the 38th HENRY VIII., 2nd baron of that court. This learned person m. Anne, dau. and heir of John Harwell, Esq., of Wotton Waven, co. Warwick, and from that union sprang

FRANCIS SMITH, Esq., of Ashby Folville, co. Leicester, and of Wootton Waven, co. Warwick, who m. Maria, dau. and heir of John Morton, Esq., of Ashby Folville, and d. 3 September, 1606, leaving a son,

GEORGE SMITH, Esq., of Ashby Folville, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Giffard, of Chillington, co. Stafford, Knt., and d. 31 July, 1607, leaving with other issue, a son,

SIR FRANCIS SMITH, of Wootton Waven and Ashby Folville, Knt., who m. Anne, dau. of Thomas Markham, of Allerton, co. Notts, Esq., and d. 6 May, 1629, æt. fifty-nine, and was buried at Ashby Folville. He had, besides dau., four sons,

I. CHARLES (Sir), of whom presently.

II. Thomas (Sir), of Broxton, Knt.

III. Francis.

IV. John (Sir), slain ex parte Regis, at the battle near Alresford, Hants, 30 March, and was buried 1 April, 1644, at Christ Church, Oxford.

Sir Francis Smith's will, which bears date 28 February, 1628, was proved 8 October, 1629. His eldest son,

SIR CHARLES SMITH, Knt., was, in consideration of his fidelity to King CHARLES I., elevated to the peerage 31 October, 1643, as LORD CARRINGTON, BARON OF WOOTTON WAVEN, co. Warwick, and was advanced 4 November following, to the dignity of VISCOUNT CARRINGTON, of Barrelore or Burford, in Connaught, in the peerage of Ireland. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Caryll, Knt., of South Harting, in Sussex, and had issue, FRANCIS, his successor.

Caryll, d. s. p., m.

CHARLES, successor to his brother.

Mary, m. to Sir George Wintour, Knt., of Huddington.

Lucy, } d. unm.

Anne, } d. unm.

Margaret, m. to Sir Francis Hungate, Bart. of Huddleston, in Yorkshire.

Mary, d. unm.

Lord Carrington having occasion to visit France, and lodging at Pontoise, was there barbarously murdered by one of his own servants, 21 February, 1664, for the sake of his money and jewels; and his remains were interred in the church at that place, under a marble tomb erected to his memory. His lordship was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS SMITH, 2nd viscount, and Baron Carrington. This nobleman m. 1st, Juliana, dau. of Sir Thomas Walmsley, of Dunkenhagh, in Lancashire, by whom he had an only son, CHARLES, who d. in infancy.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Anne Herbert, dau. of William, Marquess of Powis, but had no issue. His will, dated 19 January, 1700, was proved 30 April, 1701. He was s. by his brother, CHARLES SMITH, 3rd Viscount and Baron Carrington, who m. Frances, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir John Pate, Bart. of Sysonby, co. Leicester, d. s. p. May 1706, and was buried at Ashby Folville. With him the peerage honours became EXTINCT.

SOMERIE—BARON DUDLEY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 10 March, 1308.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN DE SOMERIE (lineally descended from the marriage of John de Somerie, with Hawyse, sister and heir of Gervase Pagnell, Lord of Dudley, co. Stafford), was for his services in the Scottish wars, temp. EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., summoned to parliament as a Baron,* from 10 March, 1308, to 14 March, 1322. His lordship d. in the latter year s. p., when his barony became EXTINCT, and his castles and lands devolved upon his sisters, as co-heirs, thus,

* Although this barony is uniformly considered to be that of "DUDLEY," it appears very questionable if such is the proper designation. That antecedent to the latter part of the reign of EDWARD I., the tenure of the castle of Dudley constituted the family of SOMERIE, barons by tenure, can scarcely be doubted; but that such tenure did not establish a right in the possessor of the castle to demand a writ of summons to parliament, may be inferred from this fact, that John de Somerie, who was first summoned in 1308 (1st EDWARD II.) and who continued to be regularly summoned to 1322 (15th EDWARD II.) is never once designated as "DE DUDLEY," but is merely described as "Johanni de Somery."—NICOLAS.

MARGARET, m. to John de Sutton, had the Castle of Dudley, with the manor of Seggesley, chase of Penanet, and manor of New Synford-Regis, co. Stafford; as also the town of Dudley (see Sutton, Barons Dudley).

JOANE, m. to Thomas Botetourt, eldest son and heir of John, Lord Botetourt, had the manors of Bradfield, Soleham, and Bastenden, co. Berks; with Rowley-Somery, and other lands in Staffordshire (see Botetourt, Barons Botetourt).

SOMERS—BARON SOMERS.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 December, 1697.

Lineage.

JOHN SOMERS, or SOMMERS, Gent., of Clifton on Severn, an attorney in the city of Worcester, m. in 1648, Catherine, youngest dau. of John Severne, Esq., of Powyck, co. Worcester (ancestor of the Severnes, of Wallop Hall, co. Salop), and by her (who d. in 1709,) left at his decease, January, 1680-1, one son and two daus., viz.,

- I. JOHN, LORD SOMERS.
1. Mary, m. Charles Cocks, Esq., M.P., and had issue.
- II. Elizabeth, m. Sir Joseph Jekyll, master of the rolls; and d. s. p. 1746.

The son and heir,

JOHN SOMERS, b. at Worcester, in 1652, having been brought up to the higher grade in the legal profession, acquired such reputation as an advocate, that he was engaged in the important case of the Seven Bishops, temp. JAMES II., and his speech upon that occasion will ever be regarded as one of the boldest, most impressive, and constitutional, delivered at the bar. After the Revolution, Mr. Somers was appointed successively (1689) solicitor, and (1692) attorney-general, and received the usual honour of knighthood. In 1696, he became Lord Keeper, and in 1697 was constituted Lord Chancellor of England, and elevated to the peerage as LORD SOMERS, BARON OF EYESHAM, co. Worcester. Of this great and learned personage, Walpole, in his Catalogue of Noble Authors, observes, "That Lord Somers was one of those divine men, who, like a Chapel in a Palace, remain unprofaned, while all the rest is tyranny, corruption and folly: and that all the traditional accounts of him, the historians of the last age, and its best authors, represent him as the most uncorrupt lawyer, and the honestest statesman; a master orator; a genius of the finest taste; and as a patriot of the noblest and most extensive views; as a man who dispensed blessings by his life, and planned them for posterity; at once the model of Addison, and the touchstone of Swift." Macaulay considers him in some respects the greatest man of the age in which he lived: "He was," says that brilliant historian, "equally eminent as a jurist and as a politician, as an orator, and as a writer. His speeches have perished: but his State Papers remain and are models of terse, luminous and dignified eloquence. In truth, he united all the qualities of a great judge, an intellect comprehensive, quick and acute, diligence, integrity, patience, suavity. In council, the calm wisdom which he possessed in a measure rarely found among men of parts so quick, and of opinions so decided as his, acquired for him the authority of an oracle." Macaulay winds up his panegyric in these words: "He was at once a munificent and a severely judicious patron of genius and learning. Locke owed opulence to Somers. By Somers, Addison was drawn forth from a cell in a college. In distant countries, the name of Somers was mentioned with respect and gratitude by great scholars and poets who had never seen his face."

Lord Somers survived, however, his great mental powers, and d. in dotage, unm., April 1716, when the Barony of Somers became extinct, and his estates devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs, the elder of whom,

MARY SOMERS, m. Charles Cocks, Esq., M.P., in 1692, for the city of Worcester, and had issue,

- 1 JAMES COCKS, M.P., of Bruckmans, Herts, whose only son, James, was killed at St. Cass, on the coast of France, 11 September, 1758.
- 2 JOHN COCKS, of Castleditch, co. Hereford, whose eldest son and successor,

CHARLES COCKS, Esq., of Castleditch, M.P., was created a baronet in 1772, and elevated to the peerage as LORD SOMERS, Baron of Eyesham, in 1784. (See BURKE'S Extant Peerage.)

- 1 Katherine Cocks, m. to James Harris, Esq., of Salisbury.
- 2 Margaret Cocks, m. to Philip Yorke, 1st Earl of Hardwicke, lord chancellor.

SONDES—EARL OF FEVERSHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 8 April, 1676.

Lineage.

SIR GEORGE SONDES, Bart., of Lees Court, co. Kent, was elevated to the peerage, in consideration of the services he had rendered to King CHARLES I., by letters patent, dated 8 April, 1676, in the dignities of Baron Throsley, Viscount Sondes, of Lees Court, and EARL OF FEVERSHAM, with remainder, failing his own male issue, to Lewis, Lord Duras, the husband of his elder dau. His lordship m. 1st, Jane, dau. and heir of Sir Ralph Freeman, Knt., by whom he had three sons,

- I. Freeman, who d. young.
- II. George, inhumanly murdered in his bed by his younger brother,
- III. Freeman, who suffered death for the atrocious deed of fratricide.

The earl m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir William Villiers, of Brokesby, co. Leicester, Bart., and had two daus.,

SPENCER—VISCOUNT OF TEVIOT.

By Letters Patent, dated 20 October, 1685.

Lineage.

THE HON. ROBERT SPENCER, brother of Henry, 1st Earl of Sunderland, and 2nd son of William, 2nd Lord Spencer, of Wormleighton, by Lady Penelope Wriothesley, his wife, eldest dau. of Henry, Earl of Southampton, was created a Peer of Scotland, as VISCOUNT OF TEVIOT, 20 October, 1685. He m. Jane, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Sir Thomas Spencer, Bart., of Yarnton, co. Oxford, but d. s. p., when the title became extinct.

Arms—Quarterly: arg. and gu., in the 2nd and 3rd quarters, a fret, or, over all, on a bend, az., three escallopes of the 1st.

STAFFORD—BARONS STAFFORD, EARLS OF STAFFORD, DUKES OF BUCKINGHAM, BARONS STAFFORD.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Earldom, dated 5 March, 1351.

Dukedom, dated 14 September, 1444.

Barony, dated 1547.

Lineage.

The first that assumed this surname,

ROBERT DE STAFFORD, possessed, at the time of the General Survey, lordships in Suffolk, Gloucestershire, Lincolnshire, Warwickshire, and Staffordshire, in all 131, and Dugdale surmises, that the assumption of the surname of Stafford arose from his being governor of Stafford Castle, which had been erected by the Conqueror; for his name originally was De Toenel, and he is said to have been a younger son of Roger de Toenel, standard bearer of Normandy. Of this Robert de Stafford, who lived till HENRY I.'s time, nothing further is known than his founding an Augustine priory, at Stone, in Staffordshire, upon the spot where Enysan de Waltons, one of the companions of the Conqueror, had killed two nuns and a priest. He m. Avice de Clare, and was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE STAFFORD, who was sheriff of Staffordshire, temp. King HENRY I. This feudal lord was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE STAFFORD, who was sheriff of Staffordshire from the 2nd to the end of the 6th year, inclusive, of King HENRY II.'s reign, and in six years afterwards paid towards the marriage portion of the king's dau. 60 marks for 60 knights' fees. This Robert performed a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and d. about the year 1176, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE STAFFORD, at whose decease, about 1189, a. p., the feudal barony and lordships devolved upon his only sister and heiress,

MILICENT DE STAFFORD, who m. in the 5th RICHARD I. a Staffordshire gentleman of ancient family, named Hervey Bagot. This Hervey paying a fine of 300 marks to the crown, had livery of his wife's inheritance, but in order to raise that sum he was obliged to sell the lordship of Drayton to the canons of St. Thomas, near Stafford. The son and heir of this Hervey and Milicent, assuming his maternal surname, inherited the estates as

HERVEY DE STAFFORD. This feudal lord was with King HENRY III. at the siege of Bitham Castle, in Lincolnshire, in the 5th of that monarch's reign. He m. Petronill, sister of William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, and dying in 1237, was s. by his son,

HERVEY DE STAFFORD, who d. s. p. in 1241, and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE STAFFORD, who, in the 25th HENRY III., upon doing homage, and paying £100 for his relief, had livery of his lands. This feudal lord was in the wars of Gascony, 38th HENRY III., and in four years afterwards he had a military summons to march against the Welsh. He m. Alice, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Thomas Corbet, of Caus, co. Salop, and dying in 1282, was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE STAFFORD. This feudal lord, who was actively engaged against the Welsh, in the reign of King EDWARD I., was killed before Droselan Castle, about 1293, and was s. by his son,

EDMUND DE STAFFORD, who, having distinguished himself in the Scottish wars, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, by King EDWARD I., from 6 February, 1299, to 26 August, 1308, the year of his decease. He m. Margaret, dau., and at length heir of Ralph, Lord Basset, of Drayton, and had issue,

RALPH, his successor.

Richard, m. Maud, dau. and heir of Richard de Camville, of Clifton, and was styled "Sir Richard Stafford, of Clifton, Knt." (see STAFFORDS, of Clifton).

His lordship d. in 1308, and was s. by his elder son,

RALPH DE STAFFORD, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 14 January, 1337, to 25 November, 1359. This nobleman attaining majority in the 17th EDWARD II., and then doing his homage, had livery of his father's lands, and the next ensuing year, being made a knight by bathing, and other sacred ceremonies, had robes, &c., as a banneret, allowed him out of the king's wardrobe for the solemnity; after which he soon became a personage of celebrity in the wars of King EDWARD III. His lordship was first engaged in Scotland for some years, and he then embarked for Brittany, where he was made prisoner at the siege of Nantes. In the 19th EDWARD III., he was sent into Gascony, with Henry of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, and while that nobleman assaulted Bergerath by land, Lord Stafford commanded the force which attacked it by sea. The next year he was constituted seneschal of Aquitaine, when John, son and heir of PHILIP, King of France, coming to besiege Aguilhon, where his lordship then resided, he stoutly defended that place against the whole power of the French, until King EDWARD came to his relief, and forced the enemy to raise the siege. After this, joining his troops with the army of King EDWARD, he had a principal command in the van of the English at the glorious battle of Cressy. On the termination of this great conflict, his lordship being sent with Sir Reginald Cobham, and three heralds, to view the slain, reported the number to be 11 great princes, 80 bannerets, 1,200 knights, and more than 30,000 common soldiers. He was afterwards, when Calais surrendered, appointed, together with Sir Walter Manny, and the Earl of Warwick, to take possession of that place for the king; and subsequently his lordship was one of the ambassadors deputed to the cardinals of Naples and Claremont, to treat of peace between King EDWARD and Philip de Valois, then assuming the title of King of France. The next year he had license to make castles of his manor houses at Stafford and Nadeley; as also a grant from the king of £573, for his expenses in foreign service.

About this time his lordship was elected a knight of the Garter, being one of the original members of that noble order. In the 24th EDWARD III., he was in commission with the bishop of Durham, and the Lords Percy and Nevill, to treat with the nobles of Scotland, at York, for a firm and final peace between the two realms; for all which eminent services, he was created, 6 March, 1351, EARL OF STAFFORD, and constituted lieutenant and captain-general of the Duchy of Aquitaine. His lordship m. Margaret, only dau. and heiress of Hugh de Audley, Baron Audley, and in right of his wife, EARL OF GLOUCESTER, by which alliance he acquired a considerable inheritance, and the BARONY OF AUDLEY is presumed to have merged in that of STAFFORD. He had issue,

Ralph, who m. Maud, dau. of Henry, Earl of Derby, Duke of Lancaster, but d. v. p., s. p.

HUGH, his successor.

Beatrice, m. 1st, Maurice, son and heir of Maurice Earl of Desmond; 2ndly, Thomas, Lord Ros, of Hamlake; and 3rdly, Sir Richard Burley, Knt.

Joane, m. to John, son and heir of John Cheriton, Lord Powis.

Elizabeth, m. to Fulke le Strange.

Margaret, m. to Sir John Stafford, Knt.

His lordship d. 31 August, 1372; was buried at Tunbridge, and was s. by his only surviving son,

HUGH DE STAFFORD, 3rd baron, and 2nd Earl of Stafford, who, following the steps of his noble father in those martial times, came very early into action, for at the age of seventeen he was in the wars of France, and again when he attained majority, being then in the retinue of the Black Prince. At the period he succeeded to the honours of his family, he was twenty-eight years of age, and he was subsequently distinguished in all the wars of EDWARD III., and in those at the beginning of King RICHARD II.'s time. In the 9th of the latter monarch, his lordship having obtained license to travel, undertook a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulchre, and on his return d. at Rhodes, October 1386, having had issue by his wife, the Lady Philippa Beauchamp, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Warwick,

Ralph, who was murdered in 1385 by Sir John Holland, half-brother to King RICHARD II. (Proissart).

THOMAS, } successors, alternately, to the honours of the WILLIAM, } family.
EDMUND, }

Hugh (Sir), K.G., m. Elizabeth Bouchier, only dau. and heiress of Bartholomew, Lord Bouchier, and was summoned to parliament as Baron Bouchier. His lordship d. s. p. in 1420 (see p. 502.)

Margaret, m. to Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland.

Katherine, m. to Michael, son of Michael de la Pole, 2nd Earl of Suffolk.

Joane, m. to Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent.

The earl, who was a knight of the Garter, was s. by his eldest surviving son,

THOMAS DE STAFFORD, 4th baron, and 3rd Earl of Stafford, who, in the 14th RICHARD II., making proof of his age, and doing his homage, had livery of his lands, and about the same time, upon the decease of Ralph, the last Lord Basset, of Drayton, was found to be one of his co-heirs.* His lordship was in the wars of France, in the 15th RICHARD II., under the conduct of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, whose dau., the Lady Anne Plantagenet, he had married, but d. s. p. in 1392, when he was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM DE STAFFORD, 5th baron, and 4th Earl of Stafford, b. 1378. This nobleman was but fourteen years of age when he came to the title, and in ward to the Duke of Gloucester. He d. in three years after, and the honours devolved upon his next brother,

EDMUND DE STAFFORD, 6th baron, and 5th Earl of Stafford, who, in the 22nd RICHARD II., by virtue of the king's special license, m. Anne, sister and heir of Humphrey Plantagenet, Earl of Buckingham, and widow of Thomas, 3rd earl of Stafford, his eldest brother (which marriage of the said Thomas and Anne had never been consummated, owing to the tender years of the earl). At the coronation of King HENRY IV., this Edmund, Earl of Stafford, was made a knight of the Bath, as was also Hugh, his younger brother. He was subsequently made a knight of the Garter, but he was killed soon after, at the battle of Shrewsbury, fighting on the part of the king, 22 July, 1403. By Anne, his wife, who d. 1438-9, his lordship (who was buried at the Augustine Friars, Stafford,) left issue,

HUMPHREY, his successor.

Philippa, d. young.

Anne, m. 1st, to Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, and 2ndly, to John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon.

* Thus, Margaret Basset, great aunt of the above-mentioned Ralph, Lord Basset, was the wife of Edmund, 1st Lord Stafford, the earl's great grandfather. For this inheritance he had a contest with the Shirleys.

The earl was s. by his son,

HUMPHREY DE STAFFORD, 7th baron, and 6th Earl of Stafford, who, in the 2nd HENRY VI., making proof of his age, had livery of his lands; as also of those which had descended to him by the death, s. p., of his uncle, Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bouchier. In the 6th of the same reign, his lordship obtained license from the king to be absent from the realm of Ireland for ten years, but nevertheless to receive the revenue of all his castles, lordships, and lands there. From this period he served for several years in France, and was constituted, 19th HENRY VI., captain of the town of Calais, and tower of Risanke; as also of the marches of Calais; in consequence of which services, and his near alliance in blood to the royal family, he was created, 14 September, 1444, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, with precedence before all dukes whatsoever, next to those of the blood royal; but a great dispute regarding this matter immediately arose between his grace and Henry Beauchamp, Duke of Warwick, which required a special act of parliament to adjust, giving to the rival dukes precedence alternately, year about; the question was, however, finally set at rest by the death of the Duke of Warwick, s. p., in about two years after. In the 28th of HENRY VI., the Duke of Buckingham was made constable of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports; and in the 34th of the same reign, after the fatal battle of St. Albans, where the Duke of York being victorious, Humphrey, Earl of Stafford, his eldest son, lost his life; seeing what specious pretences were made by the Yorkists, to obtain the favour of the people, his grace, with the Duke of Somerset, made his way privately to Queen Margaret, and apprised her of the danger that impended. Continuing faithfully attached to the Lancastrian interest, the duke fell gallantly fighting under that banner at the battle of Northampton, 27 July, 1460. His grace, along with his other honours, was a knight of the Garter. His wife was the Lady Anne Nevill, dau. of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmoreland, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Walter Blount, Lord Mountjoy,) he had issue,

I. HUMPHREY, Earl of Stafford, slain in the battle of St. Albans, 22 May, 1455, leaving by Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Edmund, Duke of Somerset,

HENRY, who s. his grandfather.

II. Henry (Sir), m. Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of King HENRY VII.

III. Edward.

IV. George, and v. William, twins.

VI. JOHN, created EARL OF WILTSHIRE (see STAFFORD, Earls of Wilt.).

I. Anne, m. 1st, to Aubrey de Vere, son and heir-apparent of John, 12th Earl of Oxford, and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Cobham, son of Reginald, Lord Cobham, of Sterborough.

II. Joane, m. 1st, to William, Viscount Beaumont, and 2ndly, to Sir William Knyvet, of Buckenham, co. Norfolk.

III. Catherine, m. to John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury.

The duke was s. by his grandson,

HENRY DE STAFFORD, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, who, being in ward to King EDWARD IV., was committed with Humphrey, his brother, to the tuition of Anne, Duchess of Exeter, the king's sister, with an assignation of 500 marks per annum, for their maintenance. This nobleman was little heard of during the remainder of the reign of EDWARD IV., but being a main instrument in elevating RICHARD III. to the throne, he was made a knight of the Garter, and constable of England by that monarch; besides being promised the possession of the great inheritance of the Bohuns, Earls of Hereford, to which he pretended a right. But whether through disappointment at this promise not being fulfilled, or from a conscientious feeling, certain it is that he soon afterwards entered into a conspiracy to place the Earl of Richmond upon the throne, and actually took up arms for the purpose; but the Courtenays and his other associates, not being able to second his movements, he found himself deserted, and was forced to seek an asylum at the house of an old servant, Humphrey Banaster, near Shrewsbury; by this servant he was, however, betrayed and delivered up to his enemies, but the king refused to reward the betrayer, observing, "that he who could be untrue to so good a master, would be false to all other." The duke was beheaded soon after, in the market-place at Salisbury, 2 November, 1483, without any arraignment, or legal proceeding. His grace had m. Katherine, dau. of Richard Widville, Earl of Rivers, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Jasper, Duke of Bedford; and 3rdly, Sir Richard Wingfield, K.G.,) left issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Henry, created Earl of Wiltshire.

Elizabeth, m. to Robert Ratcliffe, Lord Fitz-Walter.

Anne, m. 1st, to Sir Walter Herbert, Knt., and 2ndly, to George, Earl of Huntingdon.

The earl was s. by his elder son,

EDWARD DE STAFFORD, who was restored by King HENRY VII. to the Dukedom of Buckingham, Earldom and Barony of Stafford, and all the other honours of his father. This nobleman was in arms against the Cornish men, who rebelled in favour of Perkin Warbeck, and in the 24th HENRY VII., he obtained several considerable grants. He was likewise made a knight of the Garter, and lord high constable of England. In the 2nd HENRY VIII., he had license to impark 1000 acres of land at his lordship of Thornbury, in Gloucestershire, and was then in high favour with the king. But in some years afterwards, exciting the enmity of Wolsey, that ambitious prelate planned, and finally succeeded, in accomplishing his grace's ruin. It is stated that the offence given by the duke to the cardinal arose thus:—His grace upon some occasion holding a basin to the king, so soon as his majesty had washed, Wolsey dipped his hands in the water, which appeared so derogatory to the rank of Buckingham, that he flung the contents of the ewer into the churchman's shoes; who, being highly incensed, menaced that he would stick upon the duke's skirts; a threat which his grace met by coming to court soon after richly dressed, but without any skirts—and the king demanding the cause of so strange a fashion, the duke replied, that it was intended to prevent the cardinal's design. The duke, like his father, was doomed, however, to fall by domestic treason, for having discharged one Knevet, a steward, for oppressing his tenants, that individual became a fit instrument in the hands of Wolsey to effect the object he had so much at heart. Knevet declared that the duke had contemplated the assassination of the king, in order that he might ascend the throne himself as next heir, if his majesty died without issue, and upon this frivolous information, one of the most illustrious noblemen in England was arraigned at Westminster, before Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, then sitting as lord high steward of England for the occasion.

The duke pleaded his own cause, and sustained the character of an able and accomplished advocate, but to no purpose; he was found guilty, and sentenced to death. Upon which he addressed the high steward thus:—"My Lord of Norfolk, you have said as a traitor should be said to; but I was never any. I nothing malign you, for what you have done to me; but the eternal God forgive you my death. I shall never sue to the king for life, though he be a gracious prince; and more grace may come from him than I desire; and so I desire you and all my fellows to pray for me." The duke was executed by decapitation in pursuance of the judgment passed upon him, on Tower Hill, 17 May, 1521. When the emperor CHARLES V. heard of the event, he is said to have exclaimed, "A butcher's dog has killed the finest buck in England." His grace had m. the Lady Alianore Percy, dau. of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and left issue,

HENRY, of whom presently.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk.

Katherine, m. to Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmoreland.

Mary, m. to George Nevill, Lord Bergavenny.

A bill of attainder followed the judgment and execution of the duke, and all his honours became FORFEITED. The fate of this illustrious house was marked by a more than ordinary degree of misfortune:

Edmund, Earl of Stafford, and his son, Humphrey, Duke of Buckingham, and his son, Humphrey, Earl of Stafford,	} all fell in the war of the Roses.
Henry, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and his son, Edward, 3rd and last Duke of Bucking- ham,

With the last Duke sunk for ever the splendour, princely honours, and great wealth of the ancient and renowned family of Stafford. Upon passing the bill of attainder against the duke, the parliament enacted also a bill to restore in blood, but not in honours and lands, his grace's only son.

HENRY STAFFORD, to whom, however, the king made immediate grants of manors in the co. Stafford and elsewhere, which had belonged to his father, and he obtained from the crown, in some years after, the castle and manor of Stafford, with other of the estates of the deceased duke; but altogether producing only a comparatively small annual income. He was summoned to parliament, from 24 November, 1548, to 5 November, 1558. In the 1st EDWARD VI., anno 1547, an act of parliament passed,* again restoring him in blood, and declar-

* Dugdale states, that he was restored in blood in 1522; but on a reference to the authorized collection of the statutes it appears, that, in the 14th and 15th HENRY VIII., the act in ing, "that the said Henry, Lord Stafford, and the heirs male of his body coming, may be taken, and reputed as Lord Stafford, with a seat and voice in parliament as a baron; and further that the said Henry be restored in blood as son and heir of Edward, late Duke of Buckingham, &c." His lordship m. Ursula, dau. of Sir Richard Pole, K.G., and Margaret Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury, dau. and heir of George, Duke of Clarence, and niece of Kings EDWARD IV. and RICHARD III., by whom he had issue,

HENRY, his heir.

EDWARD, successor to his brother.

Richard, m. Mary, dau. of John Corbet, of Lee, co. Salop, Esq. and had issue, ROGER, who claimed the barony upon the decease of Henry, 4th lord, in 1637, but was denied it on account of his poverty. He d. unm. in 1640.

Jane, who m. a joiner, and had a son a cobbler, living at Newport, in Shropshire, in 1637: thus the great-great-grandson of Margaret Plantagenet, dau. and heiress of George, Duke of Clarence, sunk to the grade of a mender of old shoes.

Walter.

Dorothy, m. to William Stafford, of Grafton, and from this lady, Mr. Richard Stafford Cooke, who claimed the ancient Barony of Stafford, derived descent. "But admitting this descent," says Nicolas, "it is difficult to find any real claim which it affords to the Barony of Stafford. The ancient barony undoubtedly became forfeited on the attainder of Edward, Duke of Buckingham, in 1521, and which attainder has never been reversed. Henry Stafford, his son and heir, was created Baron Stafford, de novo, with an express limitation, to the heirs male of his body coming, by act of parliament, 1st EDWARD VI., 1547, and which dignity became extinct on the termination of the male descendants of the said Henry, about the year 1640."

Elizabeth, m. to Sir William Nevil, Knt., of Chebsey.

This nobleman, who was esteemed for his learning and piety, d. in 1562, and was s. by his son,

HENRY STAFFORD, 2nd Baron Stafford, who d. s. p. 8 April, 1566, and was s. by his brother,

EDWARD STAFFORD, 3rd Baron Stafford, of the new creation, summoned to parliament in the 23rd ELIZABETH. His lordship m. Mary, dau. of Edward, Earl of Derby, and had issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Ursula, m. to Walter Erdeswick, Esq.

Dorothy, m. to Gervais of Chadsden.

He d. 18 October, 1603, and was s. by his son,

EDWARD STAFFORD, 4th baron. This nobleman m. Isabel, dau. of Thomas Forster, of Tonge, in Shropshire, whom Banks surmises to have been a chambermaid, from a paragraph in a letter of Rowland White, to Sir Robert Sydney, dated 22 November, 1595 (Sidney Papers): "My Lorde Stafford's sonne is basely married to his mother's chambermaid." His lordship had issue,

EDWARD, b. in 1600, m. Anne, dau. of James Wilford, Esq., of Newnham Hall, co. Essex, and d. 1621, v. p., leaving issue,

HENRY, who s. his grandfather.

Mary, m. to Sir William Howard, K.B., younger son of Thomas, Earl of Arundel (see HOWARD, Baron and Viscount Stafford).

The baron d. 25 September, 1625, and was s. by his grandson,

HENRY STAFFORD, 5th baron, who d. unm. in 1637, when the barony devolved upon his kinsman (revert to children of Henry Stafford, the restored baron in 1547).

ROGER STAFFORD, b. at Malpas, in Cheshire, about the year 1572. "This unfortunate man (says Banks) in his youth went by the name of Fludd, or Floyde: for what reason, has not yet been explained: perhaps with the indignant pride, that the very name of Stafford should not be associated with the obscurity of such a lot! However, one Floyde, a servant of Mr. George Corbett, of Cowlesmore, near Lee, in Shropshire, his mother's brother, is recorded in a manuscript which was once part of the collections of the Stafford family: and it is not improbable, that this was some faithful servant, under whose roof he might have been reared, or found a shelter from misfortunes, when all his great alliances, with a cowardly and detestable selfishness might have forsaken him; and that he might have preferred the generous, though humble name of Floyde, to one that had brought him nothing but a keener memorial of his misfortunes. At the age of sixty-five he became, by the early death of Henry, Lord Stafford (the great grandson of his father's elder brother,) in 1637, heir male of the family;" and petitioned parliament accordingly, but eventually submitted his claim to the decision of King CHARLES, who decided that the said Roger Stafford, having no part of the inheritance of the said Lord

Stafford, nor any other lands or means whatsoever, should make a resignation of all claims and title to the said Barony of Stafford, for his Majesty to dispose of as he should see fit. In obedience, and performance of which said order, the said Roger Stafford, who was never married, did by his deed enrolled, dated 7 December, 1639, grant and surrender unto his Majesty the said Barony of Stafford, and the honour, name, and dignity of Lord Stafford. After which surrender, the king, by patent dated 12 September, 1640, created Sir William Howard, and Mary Stafford, his wife, Baron and Baroness Stafford, with remainder to the heirs male of their bodies, failure of which, to the heirs of their bodies, with such place or precedence, as Henry, Lord Stafford, brother of the said Mary, ought to have had as Baron Stafford.

With this unfortunate ROGER STAFFORD, who d. circa 1640, the male line of the Staffords became EXTINCT, as did the Barony of Stafford, created in 1547. (See BURKE's Vicissitudes of Families.)

STAFFORD—BARON STAFFORD, OF CLIFTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1371.

Lineage.

SIR RICHARD DE STAFFORD, younger son of Edmund, 1st Lord Stafford (see Stafford, Barons and Earls Stafford), having m. Maud, dau. and heiress of Richard de Camville, of Clifton, co. Stafford, acquired that lordship, and was thence designated. Sir Richard Stafford distinguished himself in the French wars of King EDWARD III., and was seneschal of Gascony in that monarch's reign. He was s. at his decease by his son,

RICHARD DE STAFFORD, who, having been engaged in the French wars, was summoned to parliament, by King EDWARD III., as BARON STAFFORD, of Clifton, 8 January, 1371, and he had regular summons from that period to 20 October, 1379; he d. in 1381, leaving his son and heir,

EDMUND DE STAFFORD, in holy orders, who was afterwards bishop of Exeter, and lord keeper of the great seal, who d. in 1419

And another son,

SIR THOMAS STAFFORD, who came to possess the estate, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS STAFFORD, who d. s. p., leaving an only sister and heiress,

KATHERINE STAFFORD, who m. Sir John Arderne, of Elford, co. Stafford, Knt., and left an only child, MAUD ARDERNE.* This lady m. Sir Thomas Stanley, 2nd son of Sir John Stanley, K.G., and although none of the Staffords were summoned but Richard, the 1st lord, yet the barony still existed, and was conveyed to the family of her husband by this Maud, and continues vested in the representatives of that lady.

Arms—Same as Stafford, Earls Stafford, a crescent for difference.

STAFFORD—BARON STAFFORD, OF SUTHWYK, EARL OF DEVON.

Barony, first by Writ of Summons, dated 26 July, 1461, and afterwards by Patent, dated 24 April, 1464.

Earldom, created 17 May, 1469.

Lineage.

This branch of the ancient house of Stafford sprang from

SIR JOHN STAFFORD, son of William Stafford, of Bromshull, co. Stafford, and a descendant of Hervey Bagot and Millicent Stafford (see Stafford, Lords Stafford, Dukes of Buckingham, &c.); which Sir John m. Margaret, youngest dau. of Ralph Stafford, 1st Earl of Stafford, and left issue,

I. HUMPHREY (Sir), his heir.

II. Ralph, who m. Maud, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Hastings, and was ancestor of the Staffords of Grafton, co. Worcester, and of the Staffords of Blatherwycke, co. Northampton.

The elder son,

SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, a distinguished soldier in the martial reign of King EDWARD III., and one of the retinue of the Black Prince. He m. the dau. and heir of — Greinvil, and was s. by his son, question was passed, and which merely enabled the said Henry, and Ursula, his wife, and their heirs, to hold and enjoy certain estates, granted them by letters patent, dated 20 December, 1622.—NICOLAS.

* Some accounts make Maud the dau. of Sir John Arderne, junior, and granddau. of Sir John Arderne, by Katherine Stafford, his wife.

SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, called "Humphrey with the silver hand," who m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir William Aumerle, and widow of Sir John Maltravers, of Hooke, co. Dorset, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth Cheyney, and had two sons,

HUMPHREY, his successor.

John, bishop of Bath and Wells, and afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, d. about the 30th HENRY VI.

This Sir Humphrey was sheriff of the cos. Somerset and Dorset, in the reign of HENRY IV., and dying in 1413, was s. by his elder son,

SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and eventually sole heiress, of Sir John Maltravers, Knt., of Hooke, and had livery of the lands of her inheritance in the 8th HENRY IV. By this lady he had issue,

1. John (Sir), m. Anne, dau. of William, Lord Botreaux, and dying v. p., left a son, HUMPHREY, who s. his grandfather.

2. William, m. to Katherine, dau. of Sir John Chidlock, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir John Arundel), had a son, HUMPHREY, of whom hereafter, as Lord Stafford, and Earl of Devon.

3. Alice, m. 1st, to Sir Edmund Cheney, of Brooke, co. Wilts, and had issue,

Elizabeth Cheney, m. to Sir John Coleshill, Knt., and d. s. p., 1st RICHARD III.

Anne Cheney, m. Sir John Willoughby, and had issue,

Sir Robert Willoughby, summoned to parliament as Lord Willoughby de Broke.

Alice, Lady Cheney, m. 2ndly, Walter Talboys, by whom she had an only dau.,

Eleanor, who m. Thomas Strangways, Esq., of Melbury, co. Dorset.

Sir Humphrey Stafford was s. at his decease by his grandson,

SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD, who was slain 30th HENRY VI., in rencontre with the rebels under Jack Cade, at Sevenoaks, co. Kent, and was s. by his son,

HUMPHREY STAFFORD, appointed steward of the Duchy of Cornwall, in the 1st HENRY IV., but d. the same year s. p., when the estates devolved upon his cousin (refer to issue of William, son of Sir Humphrey Stafford, and Elizabeth, heiress of Maltravers),

HUMPHREY STAFFORD, of Suthwyk, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron by writ addressed "Humfrido Stafford de Suthwyk," from 26 July, 1461, to 28 February, 1463. His lordship was created, by patent, dated 24 April, 1464, LORD STAFFORD, of Suthwyk, and advanced to the EARLDOM OF DEVON, 17 May, 1469; after the execution and attainder of Thomas Courtenay, Earl of Devon, who had been made prisoner at Towton Field. But this latter dignity he enjoyed only a few months: for being sent with 800 archers to assist the Earl of Pembroke in suppressing the northern rebellion under Sir John Conyers, he deserted the earl's banner owing to some personal slight, and caused the total defeat of that nobleman and his army; which conduct so irritated King EDWARD IV., that he immediately dispatched letters to the sheriffs of Somerset and Devon, commanding them to seize Stafford wheresoever they should find him, and to put him to immediate death. His lordship was, in consequence, taken at a village called Brentmarsh, and thence conveyed to Bridgewater, where his head was cut off 17 August, 1469. He had m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Barre, Knt., and had two daus., Elizabeth and Anne, who both d. unm. All his honours fell, however, under the attainder; but "his estates, comprising divers manors in the co. of Dorset, by a feoffment made to John Stafford, archbishop of Canterbury, Sir William Bonvill, and others, by Sir Humphrey Stafford with the silver hand (which feoffers passed them to Katherine, late wife of William Stafford, Esq., to hold for life, with remainder to Sir Humphrey, son of the said William, and his lawful heirs; and in default of such issue, to the right heirs of Sir Humphrey with the silver hand), descended to Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Coleshill, in the co. of Devon: Sir Robert Willoughby, son and heir of Anne Cheney, otherwise Willoughby, and Eleanor Strangways, as heirs of Sir Humphrey Stafford with the silver hand" (refer to issue of Alice, only dau. of Sir Humphrey Stafford, and Elizabeth, heiress of Sir John Maltravers).

Sir John Coleshill dying s. p., 1st RICHARD I., the estates were then divided between the Willoughbys and Strangways. From the Willoughbys, their dividend passed to the Paulets and the Blounts, and at length centred entirely in the former, who thereby became possessors of the manor of Hooke, co. Dorset.

STAFFORD—EARLS OF WILTSHIRE.

Created 8 January, 1470, and 1509.

Lineage.

LORD JOHN STAFFORD, youngest son of Humphrey, 1st Duke of Buckingham, was elevated to the peerage by King EDWARD IV., as EARL OF WILTSHIRE, and in three years afterwards was joined in commission with the Earl of Northumberland, and others, to treat with the ambassadors of JAMES III., King of Scotland, for the adjustment of grievances complained of by both realms. His lordship m. Constance, dau. and heiress of Sir Henry Greene, of Drayton, co. Northampton. The earl, who was remarkable for little more than his devotion to the house of York, by which he acquired the peerage and the Garter, d. in 1473, and was s. by his only child,

EDWARD STAFFORD, 2nd Earl of Wiltshire. This nobleman m. Margaret, one of the daus. and co-heirs of John Grey, 2nd Viscount L'Isle, but d. s. p. 24 March, 1499, when the earldom became EXTINCT. In some years afterwards the deceased lord's 1st cousin, LORD HENRY STAFFORD, younger son of Henry, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, was created by King HENRY VIII. (in the first year of his reign 1509), EARL OF WILTSHIRE. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, Countess of Wilt, widow of the deceased lord, and 2ndly, Cecily, dau. and heiress of William Bonville, Lord Harrington, and widow of Thomas Grey, Marquess of Dorset, but d. s. p. in 1523, when the Earldom of Wiltshire became again EXTINCT.

STAFFORD — BARON STAFFORD, OR BOURCHIER.

(See p. 499, and also BOURCHIER, Barons Bouchier and Earls of Essex.)

SIR HUGH STAFFORD, K.G., m. Elizabeth Bouchier, Baroness Bouchier, and in her right was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 21 September, 1411, to 22 March, 1413. He d. however s. p. in 1420; his widow m. Sir Lewis Robbert, K.G., and d. s. p. 1 July, 1433, when the barony devolved on Henry Bouchier, Earl of Ewe, in Normandy.

STANHOPE — BARONS STANHOPE, OF HARRINGTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 4 May, 1605.

Lineage.

The family of STANHOPE was of great antiquity in the co. Nottingham, although it did not attain the dignity of the peerage, until comparatively modern times. In the 45th EDWARD III.,

JOHN STANHOPE, of Rampton, served the office of escheator for Nottinghamshire, and the co. Derby, a public situation at that time little inferior to that of sheriff. From him descended another,

JOHN STANHOPE, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Steven Mauvelot (cousin and heir of Sir John Longvilliers, grandson to Thomas Longvilliers, Baron Longvilliers, temp. EDWARD III.), and was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD STANHOPE, Knt., who, in the 6th HENRY IV., was sheriff of the cos. Nottingham and Derby. From this Sir Richard descended,

SIR EDWARD STANHOPE, Knt., constable of Sandale Castle, temp. HENRY VII., whose 2nd son,

SIR MICHAEL STANHOPE, Knt., obtained a grant, temp. HENRY VIII., of the manor of Shelford, co. Nottingham, with its members, parcel of the possessions of the then dissolved monastery there, as also grants of lands in the cos. Lincoln and Derby. Sir Michael had a numerous family, of which the eldest son,

SIR THOMAS STANHOPE inherited Shelford, and was grandfather of Philip, 1st Earl of Chesterfield.

And the 3rd son,

SIR JOHN STANHOPE, Knt., of Harrington, co. Northampton.

M.P. for that shire, having enjoyed high favour at the courts of ELIZABETH and JAMES I., was elevated to the peerage by the latter monarch, to whom he was vice-chamberlain, as BARON STANHOPE, of Harrington, 4 May, 1605. His lordship m. 1st, Joan, dau. and heir of William Knolls, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Henry M'Williams, Esq., of Stanborne, in Essex, by whom he had issue,

CHARLES, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Lionel Tollemache, Bart., of Helmingham, ancestor of the Earls of Dysart.

Catherine, m. to Robert, Viscount Cholmondeley, of Kells, in Ireland, afterwards Earl of Leinster.

Lord Stanhope d. 9 March 1620, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES STANHOPE, 2nd baron. This nobleman lived abroad during the civil wars, temp. CHARLES I. He m. Dorothy, sister of Edward, Lord Barret, of Newburgh, but d. s. p. in 1675, aged eighty-two, when the Barony of Stanhope, of Harrington, became extinct.

STANLEY—BARONS STANLEY.

By Writ of Summons, tested 15 January, 1456.

Lineage.

This family, according to Dugdale, is "a branch of that, whose chief seat hath been for many ages at Hooton, in Cheshire;" and it originally assumed its surname from the lordship of Standleigh, Stondleigh, or Stanley, in Staffordshire, which lordship was so called from the nature of the soil, it being rough and stony, with divers craggy rocks around it. Stondleigh was formerly possessed by the Lords Aldithley, or Audley, and was exchanged by Adam, the son of Lydulph de Aldithley, with his cousin, William, son of his uncle, Adam de Aldithley, which William became in consequence,

WILLIAM DE STANLEIGH: from him descended,

SIR JOHN STANLEY, K.G., who m. Isabel, dau. and heiress of Sir Thomas Lathom, and acquired thereby the estates of Lathom and Knowsley, co. Lancaster. Sir John was, subsequently, one of the most powerful personages in the kingdom. In the reign of HENRY IV., he obtained, being then steward of the household, license to fortify a house near Liverpool, which he had newly built, with embattled walls. He was afterwards lord deputy of Ireland. In 1399, he was lord justice and lord lieutenant of the same kingdom. In the 1st year of HENRY V., being then constable of Windsor Castle, he was installed a knight of the Garter, and was a second time constituted lord-lieutenant of Ireland, for six years, in which government he d. 6 January, 1414. By the heiress of Lathom he left two sons,

JOHN, his successor.

Thomas (Sir), who m. Maud, dau. and heir of Sir John Arderne, of Elford, co. Stafford, and so long as his male line continued, Elford was their chief seat. From this marriage descended the STANLEYS of Elford, Pipe, &c.

The elder son,

JOHN STANLEY, Esq., was made governor of Carnarvon Castle, and marrying Isabel, sister of Sir William Harrington, Knt., of Hornby, had a son,

SIR THOMAS STANLEY, Knt., who, in the 9th HENRY VI., was constituted lord-lieutenant of Ireland, as his grandfather had been for six years, and he was subsequently made lord chamberlain to the king. With King HENRY, Sir Thomas was in high favour, and having been commissioned by that monarch upon several occasions to negotiate peace with his enemies, he was made a knight of the Garter, and had summons to parliament as BARON STANLEY, by special writ, tested 15 January, 1456, but never afterwards. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Goushill, Knt., by Elizabeth, his wife, widow of Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, and had issue,

I. THOMAS, his successor.

II. William (Sir), of Holt.

III. John (Sir), ancestor of the STANLEYS of ALDERLEY, co. Chester.

IV. James, archdeacon of Carlisle.

I. Margaret, m. to Sir William Troubeck, Knt.

II. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Richard Molyneux, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1458-9, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS STANLEY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 30 July, 1460, to 9 December, 1483. This nobleman, who was steward of the household to King EDWARD IV., stood faithful to the interests of his son, EDWARD V., and incurred, in consequence, the jealousy of the Protector Gloucester, from the moment that daring personage contemplated seizing upon the government. Lord Stanley was at the council, when Lord Hastings was arrested by order of the Protector, and then very narrowly escaped with his life, having received a violent blow on the head from a halbert. He was afterwards committed to prison, when the Protector threw off the mask, and usurped the crown as RICHARD III., but was released, lest his son, George, Lord Strange, should stir up the people to revolt. To ensure his support, the new monarch loaded his lordship with honours; constituting him lord steward of the household, constable of England for life, investing him with the Garter, &c.; but his having married for his 2nd wife, Margaret Tudor, Countess of Richmond, and mother of RICHARD's rival, HENRY, Earl of Richmond, made him still an object of distrust to Richard. So soon, therefore, as RICHARD was apprised of the Earl of Richmond's arrival in Brittany, and his projects regarding the English sceptre, Lord Stanley was commanded to discharge all his servants, and strictly prohibited holding any communication with his stepson. Subsequently he obtained permission to retire into the country, but was obliged to leave his son and heir, GEORGE, Lord Strange, as hostage. This young nobleman, RICHARD afterwards threatened to put to death, should his father appear in arms on the part of Richmond, but the menace failed in keeping Lord Stanley from the field, who distinguished himself as one of the most active commanders at Bosworth, and when victory at length declared for Lancaster, had the high honour of crowning upon the field of battle, his son-in-law and chief, and proclaiming him King of England, under the title of HENRY VII. His lordship was soon afterwards created EARL OF DERBY, and sworn of the privy council. He m. 1st, Lady Eleanor Neville, dau. of Richard, Earl of Salisbury, and had issue,

I. GEORGE (Sir), K.B. and K.G., who m. Joane, dau. and heir of John, Lord Strange, of Knokyn, and in her right was summoned to parliament, as Lord Strange. He d. v. p. 8 December, 1497, leaving,

1 Thomas, who s. as 2nd Earl of Derby.

2 John, d. young.

3 James (Sir), of Crosshall, ancestor of the present EARL OF DERBY.

II. EDWARD, afterwards Lord Monteagle.

III. James, bishop of Ely.

I. Margaret, m. to Sir John Osbaldeston.

His lordship m. 2ndly, as already stated, Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of King HENRY VII., but by her had no issue. He d. in 1504, and from that period the Barony of Stanley merged in the Earldom of Derby, until the decease of

FERDINANDO STANLEY, 5th Earl of Derby, and 6th Baron Stanley, 16 April, 1594, when it fell into ABERNACE, together with the Barony of Strange, of Knokyn, amongst that nobleman's three daus. and co-heirs, viz.,

ANNE, m. 1st, to Grey Bruges, Lord Chandos, and 2ndly, to Mervin, Earl of Castlehaven.

FRANCES, m. to Sir John Egerton, afterwards Earl of Bridgewater. Of this marriage the co-heirs are the EARL OF JERSEY and the DUKE OF SUTHERLAND.

ELIZABETH, m. to Henry, Earl of Huntingdon: their heir-general is the MARQUESS OF HASTINGS.

STANLEY—BARONS MONTEAGLE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 23 November, 1514.

Lineage.

SIR EDWARD STANLEY, 2nd son of Thomas, 1st Earl of Derby, having commanded in the 5th HENRY VIII., the rear guard of the English army, at the battle of Flodden Field, and contributed by extraordinary valour, at the head of a body of archers, to the total overthrow of the Scottish army, was the next year proclaimed LORD MONTEAGLE, by King HENRY, then holding his court at Eltham, in consideration of his gallant conduct, and in commemoration of having won an elevated position from the Scots; in which dignity he was summoned to parliament, from 23 November, 1514, to 12 November, 1515. He was also made a knight of the Garter.

"This nobleman's birth," says Banks, "his active childhood and martial spirit had brought him early to HENRY VIII.'s notice and company, and his aspiring manhood to his service. The camp was his school, and his learning was a pike and sword. Whenever his Majesty met him, his greeting was, 'Ho, my soldier.' Twice did he and Sir John Wallop land, with only 800 men, in the heart of France; and four times did he and Sir Thomas Lovel save Calais; the first time by intelligence, the second by stratagem, the third by valour and resolution, the fourth by hardship, patience, and industry." His lordship m. Anne,* dau. and co-heir of Sir John Harrington, Knt., and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Thomas Langton, Knt., of Newton, in Lancashire.

He d. in 1523, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS STANLEY, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 3 November, 1529 to 23 January, 1559. This nobleman was made a knight of the Bath at the coronation of ANNE BOLEYN. His lordship m. Lady Mary Brandon, dau. of Charles, Duke of Suffolk, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), his successor.

Francis, } both d. young and s. p.
Charles, }

Elizabeth, m. to Richard Zouche, of Staffordel, co. Somerset.
Margaret, m. 1st, to William Sutton, and 2ndly, to John Tallard.

Anne, m. to Sir John Clifton, Knt., of Barrington, in Somersetshire.

Lord Monteagle m. 2ndly, Helen, dau. of Thomas Preston, Esq., of Levens, in Westmoreland, but had no issue. He d. in 1560, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 11 January, 1563, to 6 January, 1581. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Thomas Preston, and widow of Sir James Leybourne, Knt., by whom he had an only child,

ELIZABETH, who m. Edward Parker, LORD MORLEY, and her son,

William Parker, was summoned to parliament as LORD MORLEY and MONTEAGLE (see Parker, Barons Morley and Monteagle).

He m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Sir John Spencer, of Althorp, co. Northampton, by whom (who m. after his lordship's decease Henry, Lord Compton, and afterwards Robert, Lord Buckhurst,) he had no issue. His lordship d. in 1581, when the Barony of Monteagle devolved upon his only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH STANLEY, who conveyed it to the family of her husband, Edward Parker, LORD MORLEY.

STANLEY—BARONS STRANGE, OF KNOKYN.

Refer to STRANGE, Barons Strange, of Knokyn.

STAPLETON—BARONS STAPLETON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 8 January, 1313.

Lineage.

The surname of this ancient family is derived from Stapleton-on-Tees, a little village on that river, between Richmond and Darlington.

The representative of the elder or Carlton branch is the present Lord Beaumont.

HERYON or HERMAN, Lord of Stapleton-on-Tees, became seized of that manor in 1052. His descendant was

SIR MILES STAPLETON, Knt., who, having distinguished himself, temp. EDWARD I. and II., in the wars of Gascony and Scotland, in the retinue of Edward, Prince of Wales, was summoned to parliament as a Baron 8 January, 23 May, and 26 July, 1313. He d. in 1314, and was s. by his son,

SIR NICHOLAS STAPLETON, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, 25 February, 1342. This nobleman in the time of EDWARD II. was involved in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and was fined 2,000 marks to save his life, but the fine was remitted in the 1st EDWARD III. He m. Sibill, dau. and heir of Sir John de Bella-aqua (Beaulieu or Bellew), the last baron of that name, by his wife Laderina, sister and co-heir of Peter Bruce, the 6th and last Baron of Skelton Castle. In her right he became Lord of Carlton, which is still the property of the elder branch of the family; and he was also Lord of Wighill at his death in 1343. He had issue,

I. MILES.

II. Gilbert, a priest of St. Leonard's Hospital at York.

The elder son,

SIR MILES STAPLETON, Knt., 3rd baron, summoned to parliament in 1358, was one of the first knights of the Garter, at the foundation of the order by EDWARD III. This nobleman was a person of great note at the period in which he lived. He participated in many of the French campaigns of EDWARD III., and when Philip, brother of the King of Navarre, came to England to obtain help, he was chosen as "an expert soldier," and marched under his banner to within nine leagues of Paris, when the French were obliged to enter into a truce. He was high sheriff of Yorkshire in 1353, and again in 1355, for five years consecutively. He d. in 1373, leaving issue,

I. SIR NICHOLAS, whose son, THOMAS, was 4th baron, but was never summoned to parliament, having d. the same year he inherited. Having left no issue, his sister ELIZABETH, wife of SIR THOMAS METHAM, became his heir, and the barony has since been vested in her descendants. Her son and heir, Sir Alexander Metham, Knt., was the ancestor of Sir Thomas Metham, Knt., who fell at Marston Moor, ex parte Regis. He m. Barbara, dau. of Philip Constable, Esq., and left, with an only son, Thomas, who d. unm., two daus., Catherine, who m. Edward Smyth, Esq., of Eshe, and Barbara, m. to THOMAS DOLMAN, Esq., of Badsworth and Pocklington, co. York; JOHN THOMAS DOLMAN, Esq., now of Souldern House, co. Oxford, petitioned the Crown, some years since, as heir-general of this marriage, for a confirmation of his right to the Barony of Stapleton. The petition was referred to H. M.'s attorney-general, but no further proceedings were taken.

II. GILBERT, m. Agnes, eldest dau. and one of the heirs of Sir Bryan Fitzalan, Lord of Bedale, the last baron of that name, Sir Bryan left two daus. only, the elder m. Sir Gilbert Stapylton, and Catherine, m. to John, Lord Grey of Rotherfield, K.G., whose heirs merged in the families of Lovel and Beaumont. Sir Gilbert had issue,

1 Sir Miles Stapleton of Bedale and Ingham, m. Joan, widow of Roger, Lord Strange of Knockyn, and dau. and co-heir of Sir Oliver Ingham of Ingham, co. Norfolk, in whose right he became possessed of Ingham. This line terminated after several generations, in two daus., Elizabeth, m. 1st, Sir Philip Calthorp; 2ndly, Sir John Fortescue, chief justice of England; and 3rdly, Sir Edward Howard, lord high admiral of England; and Joan, m. 1st, to Christopher Harcourt, Esq. of Stanton Harcourt; 2ndly, to Sir John Hudleston.

2 SIR BRYAN STAPLETON, K.G., ancestor of the Stapyltons of Carlton, whose representative is LORD BEAUMONT, and the STAPYLTONS of Wighill, co. York, now represented by HENRY-EDWARD CRUTWIND-STAPYLTON, Esq.

STEWART—EARL OF BLESINTON, BARON STEWART, VISCOUNT MOUNTJOY.

Barony and Viscounts, by Letters Patent, dated 19 March, 1682.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 7 December, 1745.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM STEWART, Knt., being in great favour with King JAMES I., became an undertaker for the plantation of escheated lands in the province of Ulster, and was created a Baronet of Ireland, 10 April, 1623. Sir William was a privy councillor in the reigns of King JAMES I. and King CHARLES I., and having served as a military officer in the troubles of Ireland, received in satisfaction for arrears of pay due prior to 5 June, 1649, one debenture of 4,000 and odd pounds; while his son, Sir Alexander Stewart, was allotted for his services a debenture for £2,509. Sir William m. Frances, 2nd dau. of Sir Robert Newcomen, Bart. of Moostown, co. Longford, and had issue,

- i. ALEXANDER (Sir), of whom presently.
- ii. William, d. unm.
- iii. John, d. unm.
- iv. Robert, d. unm.
- v. Thomas, a captain in the army, m. a dau. of John Montgomery, and was ancestor of SIR ANNESLEY STEWART, of Fort Stewart, co. Donegal, who s. as 6th bart. at the death of William, Earl of Blesinton.

- ii. Anne, m. to Sir William St. Paul, otherwise Semple, of Letterkenny, co. Longford, Knt.

The eldest son,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, was killed at the battle of Dunbar, 3 September, 1653. He m. Catharine, dau. of Sir Robert Newcomen, Bart. (3rd son of the said Robert), by Anna Boleyn, his wife, of kin, it is stated, to Queen ELIZABETH, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Arthur Forbes, created Earl of Granard,) he had an only son,

SIR WILLIAM STEWART, who s. his grandfather, Sir William Stewart, as 2nd baronet, and was advanced to the peerage of Ireland, 19 March, 1682, by the titles of Baron Stewart of Ramalton and Viscount Mountjoy; his lordship being constituted at the same time master-general of the ordnance for life and colonel of a regiment of foot. The viscount served in Hungary, at the siege of Buda, in 1696, and upon his return to Ireland was raised to the rank of brigadier-general, with the pay of £497 10s. a-year. His lordship undertaking, with the Lord Chief Baron, Sir Stephen Rice, in 1688, a mission from the Lord Deputy Tyrconnel to King JAMES II. then at Paris, was immediately upon his arrival in that city thrown into the Bastille, and there confined until the year 1692, when, being released, he waited upon King WILLIAM in Flanders and lost his life 24 August, in the same year, at the battle of Steinkirk. Lord Mountjoy m. Mary, eldest dau. of Richard, Lord Colooney, by whom he had with two daus. (Mary, m. 1st, to Phineas Preston, Esq., of Ardsallagh, and 2ndly, to George, Earl of Granard; and Catherine, m. to Arthur Davis, Esq. of Carrickfergus,) six sons,

i. WILLIAM, his successor.

ii. Alexander, who was a captain of foot, m. Mary, eldest dau. of William Tighe, Esq. of Dublin; and dying in 1701, left an only dau. and heiress, Anne, who m. the Right Hon. Luke Gardiner, treasurer of Ireland; from which marriage, Gardiner, Earl of Blesinton, descended.

iii. Richard, who in 1704 and 1713 was elected to parliament for Castlebar and the co. Tyrone, in 1715 for Strabane, and in 1727 for said co.; he d. unm. 4 August, 1728.

iv. Arthur, a captain in the army, buried by his brother Alexander, 1 August, 1723.

v. Charles, M.P. co. Tyrone, vice-admiral of the White, d. 5 February, 1740.

vi. James, b. in October, 1687, s. his brother Richard in parliament for the co. Tyrone, m. 15 February, 1731, Rebecca, elder dau. and co-heir of Robert Stewart, Esq., of Castle-rothery, co. Wicklow, and d. 9 March, 1747.

His lordship was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM STEWART, 2nd Viscount Mountjoy, a lieutenant-general in the army, and master-general of the ordnance; who m. 23 November, 1696, Anne Boyle, younger dau. and eventually heiress of Murrough Boyle, Viscount Blesinton; and dying in London, 10 January, 1727, had issue by her (who re-m. with John Farquharson, Esq., and d. 27 October, 1741), five sons and four daus., who all d. infants, except Mary, the wife of James, Lord Tyrawley, and

SIR WILLIAM STEWART, 3rd Viscount Mountjoy, b. 7 April, 1709, who was created EARL OF BLESINTON, 7 December, 1745. His lordship m. 10 January, 1733, Eleanor, dau. and heiress of Robert Fitzgerald, Esq. of Castle Dod, co. STEWART—DUKE OF ALBANY.

Lineage.

ROBERT STEWART, 3rd, but 2nd surviving son of King ROBERT II., by Elizabeth Mure, his wife, b. in 1339, obtained the great Earldom of Menteith by his marriage with Margaret, Countess of Menteith, dau. and heir of Alan, Earl of Menteith, and became subsequently EARL OF FIFE and MENTEITH, and was created DUKE OF ALBANY, according to Fordun, in 1398. In 1383, he was appointed great chamberlain of Scotland, which office he held till 1408, when he resigned it in favour of his son, John, Earl of Buchan; and in 1389, was recognized as governor of the kingdom. By Margaret, Countess of Menteith, who was his 1st wife, he had issue, MURDOCH, 2nd Duke of Albany.

Isabel, m. 1st, to Alexander, Earl of Ross, and 2ndly, to Walter, Lord Haliburton, of Dirleton.

Marjory, m. to Sir Duncan Campbell, of Lochow, created Lord Campbell, 1445.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Malcolm Fleming, of Cumbernauld.

Margaret, m. to Robert, Lord Lorn and Innermeath.

Beatrix, m. to James, 7th Earl of Douglas, Duke of Tourraine.

A dau., m. to Sir George Abernethy, of Salton.

The regent m. 2ndly, Muriella, eldest dau. of Sir William Keith, Great Marischal of Scotland, and had by her,

JOHN, Earl of Buchan.

Andrew, d. s. p.

Robert, killed with his brother, the Earl of Buchan, at the battle of Verneull, 1424, s. p.

This powerful nobleman governed Scotland under ROBERT II. and ROBERT III., and as regent for JAMES I., for fifty years, and d. at the age of eighty and upwards. "The Duke of Albany," says Scott, "as a statesman, was an unprincipled politician; and as a soldier, a man of suspected courage." Winton and Bower, however, speak of him in high terms of praise, and even Pinkerton cannot deny him some kind of commendation. The eldest son, MURDOCH STEWART, 2nd Duke of Albany, m. in 1391, Isabel, dau. of Duncan, Earl of Lennox, and had the EARLDOM OF LENNOX settled on him, his wife, and their issue, after the death of his father-in-law, Duncan, without heirs male of his body. In 1419, Murdoch s. his father as Duke of Albany, and in his office of regent of Scotland, but with far inferior talents for government.

By this great heiress, Albany had four sons, who, as is said by a contemporary writer (Cupar MSS. of the Scotch-ronicon,) were men of "princely stature and lovely person, eloquent, wise, agreeable, and beloved." Robert, the eldest, d. s. p., v. p., in 1421. Walter and Alexander were beheaded along with their father, and James survived to transmit the blood of his race, through many lines, to our own day.

King JAMES I., on his restoration to power was not slow in commencing the work of vengeance on the race by whom he had been long supplanted. The first victim was Walter, the regent's eldest surviving son, who was called Walter of the Lennox, as heir to the earldom of his maternal grandfather. He was carried off before the king's coronation, and confined in the Rock of the Bass. Soon after, the aged grandfather, Duncan, Earl of Lennox, was seized with Sir Robert Graham, and confined in the castle of Edinburgh. In March, 1425, JAMES felt himself sufficiently secure on his throne to order the arrest of the late regent himself, along with twenty-six of the most illustrious men in Scotland, many of whom, however, were immediately released, and were, in fact, compelled to sit in judgment on the distinguished and foredoomed victims. When the regent was arrested, the Duchess Isabella was also seized, at their castle of Doune, and dragged to the fortress of Tantallon. James, the youngest son, alone escaped, and being a daring youth, he made one desperate effort to succour or avenge his family. With a body of armed followers he sacked Dumbarton, and put to death its commander, John Stewart, of Dundonald, natural son of King ROBERT II.; but his struggle was unavailing, and he fled to Ireland, where he became father of many families which have been great in the history of their country.

In a parliament, where the king presided, in May, 1425, Walter Stewart of the Lennox was tried by his peers, convicted, and instantly beheaded. On the next day his brother, Alexander, had his head struck off; and he was followed to the scaffold, a few hours later, by Duke Murdoch, his father; and the Earl of Lennox also perished, at the age of eighty. They were all put to death on the castle hill of Stirling, from which high position the unhappy ex-regent was enabled to cast a last look on his rich and romantic territory of Menteith, and the hills of Lennox, to which his duchess was heir; and he could even descry the stately castle of Doune, which had been his own vice-regal palace. The companion of these most unhappy princes, Sir Robert Graham, was released, and he lived to consummate his long-planned vengeance on the king, in 1437. He it was who, when James cried for mercy, in his extremity, replied, "Thou cruel tyrant, thou never hadst any mercy on lords born of thy blood, therefore no mercy shalt thou have here!"

This ruin seems to have smitten the house of Albany most unexpectedly. On May, 1424, Duke Murdoch, as Earl of Fife, seated his royal cousin on the throne, to receive the unction and the crown. His son, Alexander, was then made a belted knight by the king's hands, and the duchess appeared as the first lady at the court; but in the commencement of the following year she had to mourn the violent deaths of her husband, her father, and her two sons.

The widowhood of the Duchess of Albany was long and dreary, though rich and great. She inherited the vast estates of her father, which were not confiscated, and his earldom, which was not forfeited. She retired within her princely domains to her feudal castle of Inchmurrin, in an island of Loch Lomond, where she bore, with punctilious ceremony, the lofty names of Albany and Lennox, and possessed all the broad and fair domains around that beautiful lake. Yet, widowed and childless, she was haunted by the recollection that her race was extinguished by the hand of the executioner, and that her fair and handsome sons would never return at her call—

"To renew the wild pomp of the chase and the hall."

The widowed duchess outlived the destroyer of her family for twenty-three years: and, if she harboured feelings of revenge against him, they were amply gratified by his murder, in 1437, which was attended by every circumstance of horror.

There are many charters of the Duchess of Albany, which prove her to have lived at her castle in Loch Lomond, and in possession of the power and wealth of her family until the year 1460. A very interesting one, conveying lands for the pious purpose of offering prayers for the souls of her murdered husband, father, and sons, and dated 18 May, 1451, is attested by Murdoch, Arthur, and Robert Stewart of Albany, who all seem at that time to have been domesticated with her at Inchmurrin Castle.

Who were these three Stewarts of Albany? They were three of the seven illegitimate children of James Stewart, the duke's youngest son, who fled to Ireland, and who there formed a connection with a lady of the house of the Lord of the Isles, which produced a flourishing progeny. These youths seem to have been adopted, after their father's death, by their grandmother, to bear her company in the melancholy, deserted halls of her feudal castle. These seven sons are all well-known to history. Many of them were legitimated, which, however, did not entitle them to succeed to the possessions of their family, though some of them and their descendants reached the highest rank and offices in the state, and founded great families. When the Duchess Isabella died, in 1460, her title of Lennox seems to have become dormant. She had no legitimate descendants, and those of her two sisters had each some claim to the succession. Her 2nd sister, Margaret, was wife of Sir Robert Menteith of Ruskey, and her dau. carried her claims into the families of Napier and Haldane. Her 3rd sister, Elizabeth, was wife of Sir John Stewart of Darnley, and her grandson, John, created a lord of parliament, as Lord Darnley, assumed the title of Earl of Lennox, in 1478, and was the direct paternal ancestor of JAMES I., King of Great Britain.

A rapid review of the varied fortunes of the seven sons of James Stewart* of Albany, the youngest of the fair and noble princes of the house of Albany, and heir of the line of Lennox will not inappropriately conclude this memoir.

i. Andrew, was invited from Ireland by King JAMES II., raised to high honours, and created Lord Avondale in 1459, was appointed in 1460, lord high chancellor of Scotland (which office he held for twenty-five years), and had a grant for life of the landed estates belonging to the Earldom of Lennox. He d. s. p. in 1488.

vi. Walter, was grandfather of Andrew Stewart, who was Lord Avondale in 1501; and he was the father of three distinguished sons,

1 Andrew, 3rd Lord Avondale, who exchanged his title for that of Ochiltree. His direct representative, Andrew, 3rd Lord Ochiltree, resigned his Scottish title, settled in Ireland, and was created a peer as Lord Castlestewart, in 1619. His descendant is the present Earl of Castlestewart, who is the representative of the House of Albany. A younger son of the 2nd Lord Ochiltree, Captain James Stewart, achieved a bad notoriety under King JAMES VI., when for a few years he was all-powerful as Earl of Arran and Lord High Chancellor; but his fall was as sudden as his rise had been.

2 Henry Stewart was created Lord Methven in 1528, and m. in 1526, Princess Margaret of England, widow of King JAMES IV. He had no issue by the Queen, and his issue by a 2nd wife failed.

3 James Stewart of Beath, was father of James, created Lord Down in 1581. His grandson, James, Lord Down, m. the dau. and heir of the Regent Earl of Moray, natural son of King JAMES V., and the descendant of this marriage is the present Earl of Moray.

The four intermediate sons between Andrew and Walter were less distinguished, and do not appear to have left issue. They were MURDOCH, ARTHUR, ROBERT, and ALEXANDER; and three of them seem to have been the companions of their widowed grandmother.

vii. JAMES STEWART, the youngest, was ancestor to the still existing families of Stewart of Ardvohrich, and Stewart of Glenbuckey.

The Dukedom of Albany continued forfeited to the crown till it was conferred on

ALEXANDER STEWART, 2nd son of King JAMES II.; King JAMES III., having imbibed an unhappy prejudice against his two brothers, the Duke of Albany and the Earl of Marr, they were arrested by his orders, 1479, and Marr put to death. Albany was committed prisoner to the castle of Edinburgh, whence he made his escape by the aid of two casks of malmsay wine, with which he intoxicated his guards, and, according to Fitzcottle, killed them. "One of the casks," says Douglas, "contained a coil of rope, which was let down from a retired part of the wall (the king was then in the castle); Albany's servant

* The Hon. and Rev. Andrew Godfrey Stuart, M.A., in his Sketch of the House of Castle Stuart, maintains, and with strong evidence to support his assertion, that Andrew, 1st Lord Avondale, was son of Walter, Duke Murdoch's eldest son.

first descended, but from the shortness of the rope, fell and broke his thigh. The duke guarded against the same fate by lengthening the cord with the torn sheets of his bed, and descended safely, first carrying his faithful domestic upon his back to a place of security, whence proceeding to Newhaven, he was received on board a French ship lying off that place, which immediately sailed for France. He was forfeited 4 October, 1479, and troops were sent to besiege his castle of Dunbar, which soon yielded, the garrison escaping in boats to England. He met with an honourable reception at Paris, where his expenses were defrayed by Louis XI., and he remained there till 1482, when he proceeded to England, where he entered into an agreement with King EDWARD IV., disgraceful to himself, and treasonable to his country. By that agreement, EDWARD obliged himself to assist in reducing Scotland, and maintaining his royalty against JAMES." Albany assumed the title of ALEXANDER, King of Scotland, by gift of the English king; and consented to pay homage to EDWARD, and to give up to him some counties and places in the south of Scotland, particularly Berwick. He afterwards joined the English army, which advanced against Berwick, and after taking that town, marched to Edinburgh. His grace nevertheless found means to make his peace with his brother, King JAMES III., who engaged to restore his estates and offices, and to grant an amnesty to his followers, and having delivered the king from the power of the Earl of Atholl, his uncle, who kept him a prisoner in Edinburgh Castle, he acquired great favour. However, in 1483, Albany renewed his former treasonable agreement with King EDWARD IV., and having previously placed his castle of Dunbar in the hands of the English, he and the Earl of Douglas invaded Scotland with 500 cavalry and some infantry. They suffered a defeat at Lochmaben, 22 July, 1484, when Douglas was taken prisoner, and Albany, escaping by the swiftness of his horse, retired into France. By act of the parliament of Scotland, 1 October, 1487, the lands forfeited by Alexander, Duke of Albany, Earl of March, Marr, and Garioch, Lord of Annandale and Man, were annexed to the crown. These lands were the Lordship and Earldom of March, the Baronies of Dunbar and Colbrandspath, with the castle of Dunbar, and tower and fortalice of Colbrandspath, and the lordship of Annandale, with the castle of Lochmaben. Alexander, Duke of Albany, was accidentally killed at Paris in 1485, by the splinter of a lance at a tournament between the Duke of Orleans and another knight, and was buried in the Celestines in that city. He m. 1st, Lady Catherine Sinclair, eldest dau. of William, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, but sentence of divorce was pronounced between the parties by the official of Lothian, 2 March, 1477-8, on account of propinquity of blood. By her he had one son, Alexander, who was declared illegitimate by act of parliament, 13 November, 1516. He had first, the priory of Whithorn, in Galloway; afterwards, the abbey of Inchaffray; then that of Scone; was consecrated bishop of Murray, 1527, and dying in 1534, was buried at Scone. Alexander, Duke of Albany, m. 2ndly, 16 February, 1480, Anne de la Tour, 3rd dau. of Bertrand, Comte d'Auvergne and de Bouillon, and by her (who m. 2ndly, 16 February, 1487, Louis, Comte de la Chambre, father of Cardinal Philippe de la Chambre, and dying 13 October, 1512, was buried in the Carmelite monastery de la Rochette, in Savoy) had one son,

JOHN STEWART, Duke of Albany, "who, in 1514," says Douglas, "was invited to assume the regency of Scotland, during the minority of King JAMES V., arrived at Dumbarton, 18 May, 1515, with eight ships laden with ammunition, warlike stores, and the gold and luxuries of France; the peers and chiefs crowded to his presence; his exotic elegance of manners, his condescension, affability, and courtly demeanour, won all hearts. As soon as the forms would admit, a parliament was assembled at Edinburgh, where the first care, after the restitution of his honours and estates, was to inaugurate Albany in the regency, a ceremony performed with great splendour. A sword was delivered, a crown was placed upon his head, and the peers paid solemn obeisance, while Albany was with martial music proclaimed protector and governor of Scotland, till the period of the king's attaining the age of eighteen years." This, the celebrated Regent Albany of the reign of JAMES V., after governing the kingdom with great incapacity and extreme unpopularity for eight years, made his final retreat to France in 1523, loaded with the curses and reproaches of the nation. John, Duke of Albany, m. 8 July, 1506, his cousin-german, Anne de la Tour, Comtesse D'Auvergne and de Lauragais, with whom he got the county of Lauragais, and the seigneuries of Douzenac, Courreze, and Bousnac. She was eldest dau. of John de la Tour, Comte D'Auvergne, by Jane de Bourbon, his wife, eldest dau. of John, Comte de Vendôme, and must have been very young at her nuptials, as her father and mother's contract of marriage is dated 11 January, 1496. She d. a. p. at St. Saturnin. Her sister, Madeline de la Tour, m. 13 June, 1518, Lorenzo de Medici, Duke of Urbino, nephew of Pope Leo X., and d. in the following year, leaving one child, Catherine de Medici, Countess of Auvergne and Lauragais, Queen of HENRY II. of France.

The next possessor of the title of Albany was

HENRY STEWART, Lord Darnley, Earl of Ross, eldest son of Matthew, 4th Earl of Lennox, who was created DUKE OF ALBANY, to him and the heirs male of his body legitimately to be procreated, 20 July, 1565, nine days before his nuptials with MARY, Queen of Scots. The next on the list was

CHARLES STEWART, 2nd son of King JAMES VI., who was, at his baptism, 23 December, 1600, created Duke of Albany, Marquess of Ormond, Earl of Ross, and Lord Ardmanoch, and ascended the throne as CHARLES I. The last time the dukedom of Albany was conferred on a Royal Stewart, was 31 December, 1660, when the title was given to

JAMES STEWART, Duke of York, 2nd son of King CHARLES I., and at His Royal Highness's accession to the throne, 1686, the dukedom vested in the crown.

The direct line of the Royal Stuarts terminated with the late Cardinal York, in 1807. He was the 2nd son of the old "Pretender," James-Francis-Edward, only son of King JAMES II., by Mary-Clementina, his wife, dau. of Prince James Sobieski (see p. 518), and was born at Rome, 26 March, 1725, where he was baptized by the name of Henry Benedict Maria Clemens. In 1745, he went to France to head an army of 15,000 men assembled at Dunkirk for the invasion of England, but the news of Culloden's fatal contest counteracted the proposed plan. Henry Benedict returned to Rome, and exchanging the sword for the priest's stole, was made a cardinal by Pope BENEDICT XIV.

Eventually, after the expulsion of Pius VI. by the French, Cardinal York fled from his splendid residences at Rome and Frascati to Venice, infirm in health, distressed in circumstances, and borne down by the weight of seventy-five years. For a while he subsisted on the produce of some silver plate which he had rescued from the ruin of his property, but soon privation and poverty pressed upon him, and his situation became so deplorable, that Sir John Cox Hippisley deemed it right to have it made known to the King of England. GEORGE III. immediately gave orders that a present of £2,000 should be remitted to the last of the Stuarts, with an intimation that he might draw for a similar amount in the following July, and that an annuity of £4,000 would be at his service so long as his circumstances might require it. This liberality was accepted, and acknowledged by the Cardinal in terms of gratitude, and made a deep impression on the Papal Court. The pension, Cardinal York continued to receive till his decease in June, 1807, at the age of eighty-two. From the time he entered into holy orders, his eminence took no part in politics, and seems to have laid aside all worldly views. The only exception to this line of conduct was his having medals struck at his brother's death, in 1788, bearing on the face a representation of his head, with this inscription—"Henricus Nonus Magnus Britanniae Rex; non volutate hominum, sed Dei Gratia."* Those who have visited Rome will not fail to recollect Canova's monument in St. Peter's to the last of the Stuarts.

With Cardinal York, expired all the descendants of King JAMES II.; and the representation of the royal houses of Plantagenet, Tudor, and Stuart thereupon vested by inheritance in CHARLES EMMANUEL IV., King of Sardinia, who was eldest son of VICTOR-AMADEUS III., the grandson of VICTOR-AMADEUS, King of Sardinia, by Anna-Maria, his wife, dau. of Henrietta, Duchess of Orleans, dau. of King CHARLES I. of England, CHARLES EMMANUEL IV. d. a. p. in 1819, and was succeeded by his brother, VICTOR-EMMANUEL I., King of Sardinia, whose co-representatives are FRANCIS FERDINAND V., ex-Duke of Modena; MARY-THERESA, Duchess of Parma; ANNE, Empress of Austria, and FRANCIS II., ex-King of Naples.

STEWART—EARL OF ARRAN.

By Charter, dated 22 April, 1581.

Lineage.

CAPTAIN JAMES STEWART, of Bothwellmuir (2nd son of Andrew, Lord Ochiltree, whose mother, Lady Margaret Hamilton, was

* BURKE'S Vicissitudes of Families.

Only child of James, 1st Earl of Arran by his 1st wife, Beatrix Drummond) served for some years in the army of the States of Holland, against the Spaniards. Returning to Scotland in 1579, he found means to obtain the favour of JAMES VI., who, in a few days after his appearance at court, appointed him a gentleman of his bedchamber, a privy councillor, captain of his guard, and tutor to the Earl of Arran, who had been declared an idiot. "Captain Stewart immediately commenced an opposition to the Earl of Morton, regent of Scotland; and 30 December, 1580, preferred an accusation against that nobleman before the king in council, at Holyrood House, of being accessory to the death of Lord Darnley; and Morton was, on that accusation, tried, convicted, and executed. Captain Stewart's proceedings in this affair were approved of in council as good service to his Majesty. Captain Stewart had a charter of the Earldom of Arran, the Baronies of Hamilton and Kinniel, and the other estates of the Hamilton family in the co. of Bute, Lanark, Kirkcudbright, Berwick, and Linlithgow, 22 April, 1581; and he obtained a letter of confirmation under the great seal, 28 October, 1581, of new ratifying the old creation of the Earldom of Arran, and creating him and his heirs male Earl of Arran, Lord of Avane and Hamilton." So far we quote from Wood's Douglas. Robertson thus delineates Stewart, Earl of Arran:—"Stewart, Earl of Arran, was remarkable for all the vices which render a man formidable to his country, and a pernicious counsellor to his prince, nor did he possess one virtue to counterbalance these vices, unless dexterity in conducting his own designs, and an enterprising courage superior to the sense of danger, may pass by that name. Unrestrained by religion, regardless of decency, and undismayed by opposition, he aimed at objects seemingly unattainable; but under a prince void of experience, and blind to the defects of those who had gained his favour, his audacity was successful, and honour, wealth, and power were the reward of his crimes." In 1584, Arran succeeded the Earl of Argyll as high chancellor of Scotland, and subsequently procured the appointment of lieutenant of the kingdom, in which character he had a private and confidential conference on the borders with Lord Hunsdon, the relative and envoy of ELIZABETH. For nearly two years after, Arran exercised almost regal authority, and acted with venality and arrogance, until at length the lords whom he had banished, taking up arms, surprised Stirling, 2 November, 1585. Arran, finding that resistance was hopeless, fled to the north, and was deprived of his honour, and declared an enemy to his country by public proclamation. The title of Arran was restored to the Hamilton family, and is still enjoyed by the Duke of Hamilton, and the chancellor's place was given to Sir John Maitland, of Thirlestane. After this, Captain Stewart, as he was now styled, lived privately at Newtown, an estate he possessed in Ayrshire, till 1595, when he was again brought to the king, who held out some hopes of a renewal of royal favour; but the general alarm and disgust were so great, at the reappearance of this ill-omened and wicked man, that he was counselled to withdraw himself in all haste from court, and return to Ayrshire, where he had been permitted to remain unnoticed and in obscurity. As he rode back through Simons-town, near Douglas, in Lanarkshire, accompanied only by a servant or two, he was attacked and slain by Sir James Douglas, of Torthorald, nephew of the Regent, Morton; his head was cut off and carried on the point of a lance in a kind of triumph through the country. The body of this once proud and all-powerful man is said to have been neglected on the waste road, until it was mangled by swine. Captain Stewart m. 6 July, 1581, Lady Elizabeth Stewart, eldest dau. of John, 4th Earl of Athole, and widow 1st, of Hugh, 6th Lord Lovat, and 2ndly, of Robert, Earl of Lennox and March, grand-uncle of King JAMES VI.; by her he had issue,

- i. JAMES (Sir) of Killeith, Lord Ochiltree. (See that title.)
- ii. Henry, grantee from King CHARLES I., of the manor of Corrigan, in Killyman, Ireland, father of a son, William (whose only child, Harry, d. s. p.), and of two daus., Catherine, m. to Henry, Lord Methven; and Barbara, m. to Col. Stuart, who eventually s. to the manor of Corrigan.
- iii. Frederick, who appears to have d. s. p.

The earl d. in 1595, when the earldom reverted to the Crown.

STEWART—LORD AVONDALE.

Lineage.

ROBERT STEWART, 3rd son of ROBERT II., acquired the Earldom of Menteith by his marriage with Margaret, Countess of Menteith, and afterwards succeeding to the Earldom of Fife, became Earl of Fife and Menteith. This nobleman, subsequently regent of Scotland, was one of the first persons honoured with a dukedom in the Scottish peerage. In 1398, the heir apparent to the throne having been created DUKE OF ROTHSAI, the Regent Fife was at the same time raised to the DUKEDOM OF ALBANY. His grace, who fills a conspicuous place in Scottish history, d. in 1419, and was s. by the only son of his 1st marriage,

MURDOCH STEWART, 2nd Duke of Albany, who m. Isabel, eldest dau. and co-heir of Duncan, Earl of Lennox. Previously to the decease of his father, this nobleman was a captive for thirteen years in England, having been made prisoner at the battle of Homildon, in 1402. He s. the late duke in the regency as well as the dukedom, but with talents for such a station of a very inferior order. Within a few short years, he was brought to the block, with his two elder surviving sons, and his father-in-law, the Earl of Lennox (anno 1425), when the Dukedom of Albany reverted to the crown. His grace's next son,

SIR JAMES STEWART, called James the Gross, upon being apprised of the imprisonment of his father by JAMES I., flew to arms, and with the aid of the bishop of Argyll, raising a band of highland freebooters, assaulted and burnt the town of Dumbarton, and put Sir James Stewart, of Dundonald, natural son of ROBERT II., governor of the castle, to the sword, 3 May, 1424. For these acts of violence he was proclaimed a felon, and forced to seek an asylum in Ireland, whence he never afterwards returned, but d. there in 1451. He had issue,

- I. ANDREW, Lord Avondale.
- II. Alexander, d. s. p.
- III. Murdoch, (Sir), knighted by King JAMES III., 1465.
- IV. Arthur, d. s. p.
- V. WALTER, of Morprie, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Arnot, of Arnot, and had issue,

1 Alexander, who d. before 1490, leaving a son,
ANDREW, 2nd Lord Avondale.

2 John.
3 George, of Johnston, ancestor of Stuart of Inchbreck and Lathiers.

1 Margaret, m. to Alexander Cunningham, of Drumquharth.

VI. James.

1. Matilda, m. to Sir William Edmondstone, of Duntreath, Bart.

The statement that Andrew Stewart and his brothers were the children of James More, the younger brother of Walter, and the younger son of Murdoch, Duke of Albany, rests originally on the authority of the learned genealogist, Crawford, whom subsequent writers have adopted as their guide; but Buchanan, Drummond of Hawthornden, and several MSS. in the Harleian Collection, one signed apparently by Segar, Garter, make them children of Walter, Duke Murdoch's eldest son. This latter view is that taken by the Hon. and Rev. A.-G. Stuart in his memoirs of the Stuarts of Castlenuart. Be the fact, however, what it may, certain it is that

ANDREW STEWART, 1st Lord Avondale, was grandson of Murdoch, Duke of Albany. This Andrew was brought over from Ireland by JAMES II., and created, in 1459, Lord Avondale; he was afterwards chancellor of Scotland, and dying s. p. 1488, was s. by his grand-nephew.

ANDREW STEWART, 2nd Lord Avondale, who was son of Alexander, and grandson of Walter of Morprie: he m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Kennedy, of Blairquhan, in Ayrshire, and had issue,

- I. ANDREW, 3rd Lord Avondale.
- II. HENRY, Lord Methven.
- III. James (Sir), of Beath, ancestor of the EARL OF MORAY.
- I. Agnes, m. to John Boswell, of Auchinleck.
- II. Anne, m. to Bartholomew Crawford, of Carse.
- III. Barbara, m. 1st, to Sinclair of Sanday, and 2ndly, to Macleod of Lewes.

The eldest son,

ANDREW STEWART, 3rd Lord Avondale, who, having exchanged his barony with Sir James Hamilton for that of Ochiltree, was ordained to be called LORD STEWART, of Ochiltree, in time to come, by act of parliament, 15 March, 1542-3. His lordship m. Margaret Hamilton, only child of James, 1st Earl of Arran, by his 1st wife, Beatrix, dau. of John, Lord Drummond, and had a son,

ANDREW STEWART, 2nd Lord Stewart, of Ochiltree, commonly called the good Lord Ochiltree, who m. 1st, Agnes, dau. of John Cunningham, of Caprington, and 2ndly, a dau. of the Earl of Glencairn, and had issue,

I. ANDREW, Master of Ochiltree, who m. Margaret, dau. of Henry, Lord Methven, and had issue,

1. ANDREW, 3rd Lord Ochiltree.

2. Josias, of Bonnyton.

1. Anne, m. to Andrew, 1st Lord Jedburgh.

2. Margaret, m. to Sir John Stewart, of Traquair.

3. Marjory, m. to Sir Roger Ashton.

4. Martha, m. to Rutherford, of Hundeleigh.

5. Mary, m. to Sir George Crawford, of Lismorris.

6. Janet, m. to Gilbert Kennedy, of Bargany.

II. JAMES, Earl of Arran.

III. William (Sir), of Monkton.

IV. Henry (Sir).

V. Robert (Sir), of Wester Braco.

I. Isabel, m. to Thomas Kennedy, of Bargany.

II. Margaret, 2nd wife of John Knox.

The good Lord Ochiltree was s. at his decease, in 1592, by his grandson,

ANDREW STEWART, 3rd Lord Ochiltree; a lord of the bed-chamber to JAMES I. of England, who having sold, through pecuniary embarrassment, the Barony of Ochiltree to his cousin, Sir James Stewart, of Killeith, in 1615, and relinquished his title to that gentleman, was created, 7 November, 1619, LORD STUART, BARON OF CASTLE-STUART, co. Tyrone, in the peerage of Ireland. His descendant is the present EARL OF CASTLE-STUART.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st, or, a lion rampant, gu., within a double tressure, flory-counterflory, of the last, for SCOTLAND; 2nd, or, a fesse chequy, arg. and az., in chief a label of three points, gu., for STUART; 3rd, arg., a saltire between four roses, gu., for LENNOX; 4th, or, a lion rampant, gu., the whole within a bordure, compony, of the 2nd and 1st.

STEWART—EARL OF BOTHWELL.

Lineage.

JOHN STEWART, prior of Coldinghame, natural son of JAMES V., by Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Carmichael, m. 4 January, 1561-2, Lady Jean Hepburn, only dau. of Patrick, 3rd Earl of Bothwell, and by her (who m. 2ndly, John, Master of Caithness) was father of

FRANCIS STEWART, created by JAMES VI., in consideration of his descent from the Hepburns, EARL OF BOTHWELL, in 1587. This nobleman, perhaps the most turbulent, the most versatile, and most treacherous of the age, was at length, after several unsuccessful conspiracies against his royal master, finally driven from Scotland, and compelled to seek a refuge in France. Even this retreat he forfeited by his turbulent temper, and banished thence, went successively to Spain and Naples, dying at the latter place in poverty and infamy. His titles fell under the attainder which was passed against him, and his principal possessions were bestowed upon Scott of Buccleuch, and Ker of Cessford. The earl m. Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of David, 7th Earl of Angus, and relict of Sir Walter Scott, of Buccleuch, and had issue,

FRANCIS, who m. Lady Isabel Seton, only dau. of Robert, 1st Earl of Winton, and dowager of James, 1st Earl of Perth, and had issue, a dau., Margaret, and a son, Charles Stewart, b. in 1618, who is stated by Scott, of Scottstarvet, to have been a trooper in the civil wars.

John, commendator of Coldinghame, father of Francis, who is mentioned in Creighton's Memoirs as a private gentleman in the horse-guards of CHARLES II., by whom he was made captain of dragoons. He commanded the cavalry on the left in the action against the Covenanters at Bothwell Bridge. John Stewart had also a dau., Margaret, who m. Sir John Home, of Renton, and was ancestor of Sir CHARLES E. F. STIRLING, Bart., of Glorat, who is heir-general of Hepburn and Stewart, Earls of Bothwell.

Henry.

Elizabeth, m. to the Hon. James Cranstoun.

Margaret, m. to Alan, 5th Lord Cathcart.

Helen, m. to John Macfarlane, of Macfarlane.

STEWART—EARL OF BUCHAN.

Lineage.

The Earldom of Buchan can be traced to the time of WILLIAM THE LION, when

FEROUS, Earl of Buchan, made a grant of a mark of silver annually to the Abbey of Aberbrothwick, founded by that monarch. The only dau. and heiress of this feudal chieftain,

MARJORY, Countess of Buchan, m. circa 1210,

WILLIAM COMYN, Justiciary of Scotland, who then became in her right Earl of Buchan: their son, ALEXANDER COMYN, 2nd Earl of Buchan (of the Comyns), was also Justiciary of Scotland, and one of the six guardians of Scotland in 1286. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Roger de Quinci, Earl of Winchester, and dying 1289, was s. by his son,

JOHN COMYN, 3rd Earl of Buchan, in 1308. This nobleman m. Isabel, dau. of Duncan, Earl of Fife, a lady celebrated for her patriotism and high spirit in placing the crown on the head of ROBERT BRUCE at his coronation at Scone, 29 March, 1306, her brother, Duncan, Earl of Fife, to whom, as the successor of Macduff, that privilege belonged, being then in the English interest. On this account she is denominated by the English writers the most impious of all traitresses. Falling the same year into the hands of EDWARD I., that monarch avenged himself in a manner which sufficiently indicated the importance of the service her ladyship had rendered to Bruce. He issued immediate orders that the chamberlain of Scotland do, in one of the turrets of the castle of Berwick-upon-Tweed, caused to be constructed a cage, strongly latticed with wood, cross-barred, and secured with iron, in which he shall put the Countess of Buchan, and that he do cause her to be so strictly guarded that she may not speak with any one of the Scottish nation, nor with any one else, saving with the woman who shall be appointed to attend her, or with the guard who shall have the custody of her person; and that the cage be constructed so that the countess may have therein the convenience of a decent chamber, &c. In this terrible state of incarceration her ladyship remained until released by EDWARD II., in 1313.

The Earldom of Buchan was next granted (having reverted to the crown by the forfeiture of the Comyns) by ROBERT II. to his 3rd son, by his wife Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Adam Mure, of Rowallan,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, who had also a proportion of the lands of the Comyns. On the demise of this nobleman without legitimate issue, in 1394, the Earldom of Buchan passed to (the eldest son of his brother, Robert, Duke of Albany, by his 2nd wife, Muriella, dau. of Sir William Keith, Grand Marischal of Scotland) his nephew,

JOHN STEWART, EARL OF BUCHAN, b. in 1380. This nobleman, a renowned warrior of his time, was sent to France by the Duke of Albany, in command of 7,000 Scotch troops to aid CHARLES VII. against the English, and gained great glory by his victory over the Duke of Clarence, at Beaugé, in Anjou, 22 March, 1421. In this engagement the Duke of Clarence was slain, having been stunned and unhorsed by Buchan himself with a blow of his mace. For this exploit, CHARLES VII. conferred upon him the sword of constable of France. The earl fell gloriously at the battle of Verneuil, 17 August, 1424, and was thus spared the pain of witnessing the utter ruin of his family, which took place the following year. By his wife, Lady Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas, Duke of Touraine, he left an only child, MARGARET, who m. George, 2nd Lord Seton. Margaret, Lady Seton, was progenitrix of the great families of SETON, EARL OF WINTON and MONTGOMERIE, EARL OF EGLINTON. The Earl of Eglington is now her heir male, and it would seem that her heir general is William Hay, Esq., of Dunse Castle. At the death of the Constable Buchan, his earldom devolved, according to the limitation, upon Murdoch, Duke of Albany, and reverted to the crown by the forfeiture of that nobleman the following year.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, or, a fesse chequy, az. and arg.; 2nd and 3rd, az., three garbs, or, for the EARLDOM OF BUCHAN.

STEWART—EARL OF CAITHNESS.

Lineage.

DAVID STEWART, Earl Palatine of Strathern, eldest son of King ROBERT II., by his 2nd wife, Euphame Rosa, was, by his father created EARL OF CAITHNESS, early in his reign, and is styled Earl Palatine of Strathern, and Earl of Caithness, in several charters. His dau.,

EUPHAME STEWART, Countess Palatine of Strathern, resigned the Earldom of Caithness in favour of her uncle.

WALTER STEWART, Lord Brechin, 2nd son of King ROBERT II., by Euphame Ross, who accordingly obtained from King ROBERT III. a charter of the EARLDOM OF CAITHNESS and regality thereof, by resignation of the Countess Palatine, called Euphame Stewart, Countess Palatine of Strathern, blench, for a reid haulk. He was afterwards created Earl of Athol,* and resigned the Earldom of Caithness in favour of his 2nd son, ALAN STEWART, Earl of Caithness, who obtained from King JAMES I. a grant dated at Perth, 15 May, 1490, of all and whole the Earldom of Caithness, to himself and the legitimate heirs male of his body; which failing, to Walter, his father, and his heirs, but he did not long enjoy that title. Donald Balloch, a relation of Alexander, Lord of the Isles, landing in Lochaber with a considerable force the next year, 1431, and finding Alexander, Earl of Marr, and Alan, Earl of Caithness, stationed at Inverlochy, co. Inverness, to defend the western coast, he attacked and utterly defeated them. In this conflict the Earl of Caithness was killed, as well as many barons and knights, and several of the earl's personal attendants. Lord Caithness had no child, and his earldom, in terms of the charter, reverted to his father, and on his attainder for the murder of his nephew, and benefactor, JAMES I., in 1437, was forfeited, and annexed to the crown.

STEWART—EARL OF CARRICK.

Lineage.

JOHN STEWART, Lord of Kyle, great-grandson of King ROBERT BRUCE, eldest son of Robert, steward of Scotland, Earl of Strathern, had the EARLDOM OF CARRICK conferred on him by his granduncle, King DAVID II., by a charter in the parliament of Seone, 22 June, 1363. After the accession of his father to the throne, he resigned the Earldom of Carrick into his Majesty's hands, and obtained a new charter thereof to him and Annabella, his wife, in life-rent, and to the heirs procreated, or to be procreated betwixt them, in fee, 1 June, 1374. On his succession to the crown of Scotland, by the style of ROBERT III., he conferred the Earldom of Carrick on his eldest son, DAVID, who is designed Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick and of Athayle, in a charter of 14 November, 1398. After the death of the Duke of Rothesay, ROBERT III. granted 10 December, 1404, in free regality to his son and heir, James, steward of Scotland (afterwards King JAMES I.), the whole lands of the stewartry of Scotland, including the EARLDOM OF CARRICK. That earldom has ever since composed part of the inheritance of the princes and steward of Scotland, and is now one of the titles of the Prince of Wales

STEWART—EARL OF CARRICK (IN ORKNEY).

Lineage.

JOHN STEWART, 2nd son of Robert, Earl of Orkney, a natural son of JAMES V., was created a peer of Scotland, by the title of Lord Kinclavin, 10 August, 1607, and EARL OF CARRICK, in Orkney, in 1630. His lordship m. at Chelsea, 26 October, 1604, Lady Elizabeth Howard, dau. of Charles, Earl of Nottingham, relict of Sir Robert Southwell, of Woodrising, in Hertfordshire, and by her, who was buried at Greenwich, 31 January, 1646, had a dau.,

Margaret, m. to Sir John Mennes, Knt., by whom she had one dau., Margaret, who was twice m. Her 2nd husband was Sir John Heath, of Brastede, in Kent. She was buried at

* As Earl of Athol, Walter Stewart was involved in the murder of his nephew, JAMES I., and beheaded at Edinburgh, in April, 1437. He m. Margaret, only dau. and heir of Sir David de Barclay, Lord of Brechin, and had two sons,

DAVID, one of the hostages for the ransom of JAMES I., d. in England, leaving a son, ROBERT (Sir), private chamberlain to JAMES I., who engaging in Sir Robert Graham's conspiracy against his royal benefactor, was apprehended soon after the monarch's assassination, and put to death at Edinburgh.

ALAN, Earl of Caithness.

Brastede, 1676, leaving an only dau., Margaret Heath, who carried the estate of Brastede to her husband, George Verney, Lord Willoughby de Broke; and d. 18 October, 1720, leaving issue.

The earl d. without male issue, in 1652, when his honours appear to have become extinct.

STEWART OR STUART—BARONS DARNLEY, EARLS AND DUKES OF LENNOX, IN SCOTLAND, EARLS OF MARCH, EARLS AND DUKES OF RICHMOND, AND EARL OF LITCHFIELD, IN ENGLAND.

Barony of Darnley, created circa 1460.
Duke of Lennox, created 5 August, 1581.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER, 5th Lord-High-Steward of Scotland, living in the reigns of ALEXANDER II. and ALEXANDER III., m. Jean, dau. and heiress of Angus Macrory, Lord Bute, and had, with one dau. two sons,

JAMES, 7th lord high-steward; from whom the royal family of STUART derived, in a direct male line, down to JAMES V., whose dau. and heiress was MARY Queen of Scots.

And

SIR JOHN STEWART, of Bonkill, who fell at the battle of Falkirk in 1296, leaving by his wife, Margaret, dau. and heiress of Sir Alexander de Bonkill, Alexander, of Bonkyl, ancestor of the Stewarts, Earls of Angus.

ALAN, from whom the Stewarts, Earls of Lennox, descended. Walter, ancestor, through an heiress, of the Earls of Galloway.

James, progenitor of the EARLS OF ATHOL, the STEWARTS OF Durlisdeir, and the Grandtully family.

John.

The 2nd son,

SIR ALAN STEWART, of Dreghorn, had a charter, 4 June, 1330, from his cousin Robert, the Steward of Scotland, of liberty to purchase heritably the lands of Cruckislie, co. Renfrew. He fell at Halidon Hill in 1333, leaving three sons, John (Sir) of Derneley, who d. s. p.; Walter, d. s. p.; and ALEXANDER. The 3rd son,

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, of Derneley, had a charter from DAVID II., 26 December, 1347. He was father of

SIR ALEXANDER STEWART, of Derneley, who m. Janet, dau. and heir of Sir William Keith, of Galstoun, and had issue,

i. JOHN, his heir.

ii. William (Sir), killed at the siege of Orleans, 12 February, 1428-9.

iii. Alexander, of Torbane and Galliston.

iv. Robert.

v. James.

i. Janet, m. 1391, to Thomas de Somerville.

The eldest son,

SIR JOHN STEWART, of Derneley, s. his father before 5 May, 1404. In 1420 he was sent to France with the Scots auxiliaries, and was so highly distinguished at the battle of Beaugé, that Charles, the Dauphin, conferred on him the lands of Aubigny and Concessault. Continuing his gallant services in the French wars, he was slain in an engagement near Orleans, 12 February, 1428-9. He m. 1392, Elizabeth, dau. of Duncan, Earl of Lennox, and had three sons, viz.,

i. ALAN, his heir.

ii. Alexander, d. s. p., m.

iii. John, Lord of Aubigny and Concessault, in France, knight of the order of St. Michael, and captain of 100 men-at-arms, d. 1482, leaving by his wife, Beatrix d'Apecher, an only son, the renowned BERNARD STUART, Chevalier d'Aubigny, so gloriously distinguished by his martial achievements in the service of France, during the campaigns in Italy against Gonsalvo de Cordova; and at various times viceroy of Naples, constable of Sicily and Jerusalem, Duke of Terra Nova, Marquis de Girace and Squillazzo, Comte de Beaumont, D'Arcy and Venassac, Lord of Aubigny, and governor of Melun. He d. in 1508, leaving by Anne de Naumont, his wife, an only dau., Anne, wife of Robert Stuart, of Aubigny, Marshal of France.

The eldest son,

SIR ALAN STEWART OF STUART, of Derneley, was treacherously slain by Boyd, of Kilmarnock, in 1439, leaving by Catherine, his wife, eldest dau. of Sir William Seton, of Seton (which lady m. 2ndly, Herbert, Lord Maxwell), two sons, JOHN, his heir, and ALEXANDER of Galsoun. The elder son,

SIR JOHN STEWART, of Derneley, who s. his father in 1439, was created a lord of parliament, by the title of LORD DERNELEY, most probably at the coronation of King JAMES III., who ascended the throne, 3 August, 1460. Stewart was served heir of Duncan, Earl of Lennox, his great-grandfather, 23 July, 1473, and assumed the title of EARL OF LENNOX. His lordship m. 1438, Margaret, eldest dau. of Alexander, 1st Lord Montgomery, and had issue, MATTHEW, 2nd Earl of Lennox.

Robert, of Aubigny, in France, a highly distinguished military commander in the service of that kingdom was created a Marshal of France by FRANCIS I. He m. 1st, his cousin, Anne, only dau. of Bernard Stuart, of Aubigny; and 2ndly, Jacqueline de Longueville, but d. s. p. 1543.

William, chevalier, Seigneur d'Oyson et de Grey, counsellor and chamberlain of the king, captain of a hundred lances, mentioned as such in 1499.

John, of Henriestoun, rector of Kirkinner, and also of the University of Glasgow. He m. Marion, dau. of Thomas Semple, of Eliotstoun, and had one child, Margaret, m. to John Fraser, of Kuolik, in Ayrshire.

Alexander, described as brother of Matthew, Earl of Lennox, in a charter, 1495, an archer de la garde Ecolesaise in France, 1538.

Alan, of Cardonald, 1496, father of John, who had a son, James, who had two sons, James, of Cardonald, and Alan, made abbot of Crossregal, in 1564, both of whom d. s. p., and the estate of Cardonald went to the son of their sister Margaret, Walter, 1st Lord Blantyre.

Elizabeth, m. to Archibald, 2nd Earl of Argyll.

Marion, m. to Robert, 1st Lord Crichton, of Sanquhar.

Janet, m. to Ninian, 2nd Lord Ross, of Halkhead.

Margaret, m. to Sir John Colquhoun, of Luss.

The eldest son,

MATTHEW STUART, 2nd Earl of Lennox, s. his father, 1494. He and the Earl of Argyll commanded the right wing of the Scottish army, at Flodden Field, 9 September, 1513, and both fell in that disastrous conflict. His lordship m. Elizabeth Hamilton, dau. of James, Lord Hamilton, and niece of JAMES III., and by her had issue,

I. WILLIAM, Master of Lennox, m. Lady Margaret Graham, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Montrose, but had no issue by her, who m. 2ndly, John Somerville, of Cambusnethan.

II. JOHN, 3rd earl.

II. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Hugh Campbell, of Loudoun.

III. Agnes, m. to William Edmonstone, of Dundreath.

The 2nd son,

JOHN STEWART, 3rd Earl of Lennox, one of the most estimable characters of the age in which he lived, who was taken prisoner by the Laird of Pardovan, and murdered in cold blood by Sir James Hamilton, of Finnart, natural son of Arran. His lordship m. Lady Anne Stewart, 8th dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, uterine brother of King JAMES II., and had issue,

MATTHEW, 4th Earl of Lennox.ROBERT, 6th Earl of Lennox.

JOHN, Lord of Aubigny, in right of his wife, the dau. of De la Verrey, Lord of Aubigny. He appears to have lived constantly in France, where he was captain in the Scots gens d'armes and governor of Avignon, and d. in 1567, leaving a son, ESME, Lord of Aubigny, who in 1579, was created DUKE OF LENNOX, by King JAMES VI.

Helen, m. 1st, to William, 6th Earl of Erroll; and 2ndly, to John, 10th Earl of Sutherland.

The eldest son,

MATTHEW STUART, 4th Earl of Lennox, s. his father, 1526. The early part of his life was passed in the service of the crown of France in the wars in Italy, where he served with gallantry and distinction. He returned home at the death of JAMES V.; and after acting a leading part in the political transactions of the time, was constituted, in 1570, Regent of Scotland. This high office he held for little more than a year, being slain 4 September, 1571. His lordship m. Lady Margaret Douglas, dau. of Archibald, Earl of Angus, by Margaret, Queen Dowager of Scotland, sister of HENRY VIII., and by her (who d. at Hackney, 9 March, 1577, in her sixty-second year, and was buried in Westminster Abbey), had four sons and four daus., all of whom d. young, except two sons,

I. HENRY, Lord Darnley, b. at Temple Newsam, co. York, 1545; created DUKE OF ALBANY, Earl of Ross, and Lord Ardmannock, in 1565; m. 29 July, 1565, MARY Queen of Scotland, and was murdered 9 February, 1566-7, leaving one son, King JAMES VI. His last male descendant was CARDINAL YORK (see p. 507).

II. CHARLES, 5th Earl of Lennox.

The Regent Lennox was s. by his only surviving son,

CHARLES STUART, 5th Earl of Lennox, who had four charters, dated 18 April, 1572, for the purpose of conveying to him and to his heirs male the Earldom of Lennox and various other lands belonging to the Darnley family, which had devolved on King JAMES VI. in right of blood, and he became accordingly 5th Earl of Lennox. Dying at London in 1576, aged twenty-one, he was buried in HENRY VII.'s chapel, in Westminster Abbey, as appears from the inscription on his mother's monument there. He m. in 1574, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Cavendish, and sister of William, 1st Earl of Devonshire, by whom he had an only dau.,

LADY ARABELLA STUART, the ill-fated victim of the jealous timidity and state policy of JAMES I. "Her double connexion with the blood royal was equally obnoxious to the jealousy of ELIZABETH and the timidity of JAMES; and they secretly dreaded the supposed danger of her having a legitimate offspring. Yet we find the Scottish monarch, at one time not unwilling to wed his fair cousin to Esme Stuart, whom he had created DUKE OF LENNOX. The banns, however, were forbidden by the English Queen, and the luckless maiden consigned to prison. The hand of the lady remained not long unsought: a curious project of the Pope, favoured, it is said, by HENRY IV., of France, was to marry her to a brother of the Duke of Parma, to set aside JAMES from the succession, and to place the Lady Arabella on the throne. Another aspirant was a son of the illustrious house of Percy; and a fourth, no less a personage than the King of Poland. But JAMES I., from political motives, invariably rejected all matrimonial offers made to his kinswoman; the Lady Arabella submitting with ill grace to this species of tyranny. Every noble youth who sighed for distinction ambitioned her notice; and she was frequently contriving a marriage herself. At length, undeterred by a censure passed on her a short time previously, for listening to a clandestine proposal, she ventured to receive similar overtures from William Seymour, 2nd son of Lord Beauchamp and grandson of the Earl of Hertford; on discovery of which, both parties were summoned before the privy council and reprimanded. Their love, formed in childhood, had been renewed in after years, and appears to have survived all their sorrow and sufferings. To the king's prohibition Seymour submitted. 'But love' (says D'Israeli), 'laughs at privy councils, and the grave promises made by two frightened lovers.' The parties were secretly married in 1610, and the contract came to the knowledge of the king in the July of the following year. They were then separately confined; Arabella at the house of Sir Thomas Parry, at Lambeth, and the bridegroom in the Tower, for 'his contempt in marrying a lady of the royal family without the king's leave.' Their imprisonment does not, however, seem to have been very close or rigorous. The lovers soon effected their escape; Seymour got safe to Flanders, but the Lady Arabella was recaptured and brought back to the Tower, where, 'her bright intellect overthrown and the temple of reason desolate and forsaken,' she lingered in hopeless misery four lonely years, dying 27 September, 1615. Seymour was afterwards permitted to return, and made a figure, as a cavalry commander in the subsequent reign. He was then Marquess of Hertford, and had eventually the Dukedom of Somerset restored to him. His character has been finely described by Clarendon. He loved his studies and his repose; but when the civil wars broke out, he closed his volumes and drew his sword, and was both an active and a skilful general. To his life's latest hour he cherished his romantic passion for the object of his early love; and, though he married again, he christened the daughter of his 2nd wife by the fondly remembered name of Arabella Stuart."

ROBERT STEWART, 2nd son of John, 3rd Earl of Lennox, was created EARL OF LENNOX, by royal charter, dated 15 June, 1578, by which the Earldom of Lennox, the Barony of Torbolton, the lands of Cruckisfee, Derneley, and others, in the shires of Renfrew, Ayr, Dumbarton, and Stirling, were granted to him and the heirs male of his body. "He was bred," says Douglas, "to the church; the first promotion he had was that of provost of the collegiate church of Dumbarton, and after that he was preferred to the episcopal see of Caithness, in 1542; but while he was only elect, taking part with his brother, the Earl of Lennox, against the Earl of Arran, he was deprived of his bishopric, and lived in exile till 1563, when he was again restored, at least to the profits of the see; and complying with the Reformation, he had for his share of the riches of the church, the priory of St. Andrew's given him by the crown. He became 6th Earl of Lennox in virtue of the charter, 1578, but afterwards agreed to accept of the Earldom of March, and Lordship of Dunbar in lieu of the Earldom of Lennox, so that the king might be at liberty to bestow the lands and honours of Lennox upon Esme, Lord of Aubigny. In confirmation of this arrangement, a charter was granted, 15 October, 1582, of the Earldom of March and Lordship of Dunbar, in favour of Robert Stuart, containing a new erection of these lands into an earldom, and creating him Earl of March. After this he lived privately at St. Andrew's, in a studious and retired manner, happily free from any faction till his death, 29 August, 1586, in the seventieth year of his age." He m. Lady Elizabeth Stewart, eldest dau. of John, 4th Earl of Athol, and relict of Hugh, 6th Lord Lovat (who d. in January, 1616-7,) but had no issue by her, who obtained a divorce from him, and m. 6 July, 1581, James Stewart, Earl of Arran. The next in succession was

LOUIS STEWART, Lord of Aubigny, son of John, Lord of Aubigny, 3rd son of the 3rd Earl of Lennox. He was educated in France, and being sent for by King JAMES VI., landed at Leith, 8 September, 1579, and was graciously received. On 5 March, 1579-80, he was created EARL OF LENNOX, and 5 August, 1581, DUKE OF LENNOX, Earl of Derneley, Lord of Aubigny, Torbolton, and Dalkeith. His grace took a prominent part in the affairs of Scotland, especially those affecting episcopacy, and attained such power and influence, that the Earl of Gowrie remarked, that "the realm could not suffer two kings." The duke, after the "raid of Ruthven," had to quit Scotland. He retired to France and d. at Paris, 28 May, 1593. He m. 1572, Catherine de Balsac, youngest dau. of William de Balsac, Seigneur d'Entragues et de Marcoussia, governor of Havre de Grace, mortally wounded at the battle of Renty, in 1555, and by her had issue, LEODVIC, 2nd Duke of Lennox.

EMME, 3rd Duke of Lennox.

Henriet, m. 21 July, 1588, to George, 1st Marquess of Huntly; dying in France, 2 September, 1612, she was buried at Lyons.

Mary, the 2nd wife of John, Earl of Marr.

Gabriella, contracted, in April, 1598, to Hugh, 5th Earl of Eglinton, but the marriage did not take effect. Sir Robert Gordon says she was a nun at Glatteny, in Berry, in France.

The eldest son,

LEODVIC STEWART, 2nd Duke of Lennox, in Scotland, b. 29 September, 1574, held the high office of great chamberlain of Scotland, as well as high admiral, and went as ambassador from JAMES VI. to HENRY IV. of France. He attended his sovereign to England on his accession to the English throne, and was created, by letters patent dated 6 October, 1613, Baron Strington, of Strington, co. York, and EARL OF RICHMOND. He was constituted master of the household, and first gentleman of the bedchamber, invested with the Garter, appointed commissioner to the parliament in 1607, and advanced in 1623, to the dignities of Earl of Newcastle, and DUKE OF RICHMOND. His grace m. 1st, Sophia, dau. of William, Earl of Gowrie, in Scotland; 2ndly, Jean, dau. of Sir Matthew Campbell, of London; and 3rdly, Frances, dau. of Thomas Howard, Viscount Rindon, and widow of Edward, Earl of Hertford, but d. without legitimate issue, 16 February, 1624, when his English honours became extinct, while those of Scotland devolved upon his brother,

EMME STEWART, Lord D'Aubigny, as 3rd Duke of Lennox, K.G. This nobleman had been created by King JAMES I., 7 June, 1619, Baron Stuart, of Leighton Bromswold, and EARL OF MARCH. His lordship m. Katherine, only dau. and heir of Sir Gervase Clifton, Lord Clifton, of Leighton Bromswold, by writ of summons, dated 9 July, 1608, and had surviving issue,

1. JAMES, his successor.

2. George, Lord D'Aubigny, who fell in the king's service at the battle of Edgehill, 23 October, 1642. He m. Catherine, dau. of Theophilus, Earl of Suffolk, and by her (who m. 2ndly, James, Earl of Newburgh,) had issue,

1. CHARLES, created Earl of Litchfield, who s. as 6th Duke of Lennox, and 3rd Duke of Richmond.

2. Katherine, who m. 1st, Henry O'Brien, Lord Ibrackan, son and heir apparent of Henry, 7th Earl of Thomond, and by him (who d. 1678) had an only dau.,

KATHERINE O'BRIEN, Baroness Clifton, who m. Edward Hyde, 3rd Earl of Clarendon, and dying in the lifetime of her mother, left

EDWARD, Viscount Cornbury, d. unm. 1712.

THEODOSIA, who m. John Bligh, Esq., M.P., afterwards created Earl of Darnley. Her ladyship eventually inherited the Barony of Clifton, which had been conferred, by writ, upon her ancestor, Sir Gervase Clifton, and that dignity is now enjoyed by her descendant, the Earl of Darnley.

Catherine, Lady Ibrackan, m. 2ndly, Sir Joseph Williamson.

3. LEODVIC, Seigneur d'Aubigny, canon of the cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris, named cardinal in 1665. He d. in Paris in November of that year, just after the arrival of the courier who brought him the announcement from Rome. He was buried in the church of the Chartreux, where the inscription on his monument runs thus:—"Quicum in cardinalum collegio mox cooptandus est, immaturâ morte peremptus est, anno ætatis 46, r. l., 1665, 3tio id. Novembris."

IV. Bernard, commander of the king's troop of guards, in the civil wars, killed at Rowton Heath near Chester, in 1645.

V. John, general of horse on the royal side, fell at the battle of Brandeney, in 1644.

I. Elizabeth, m. to Henry-Frederick Howard, Earl of Arundel.

II. Anne, m. to Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, son and heir of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas.

III. Frances, m. to Jerome Weston, Earl of Portland.

His grace d. 30 July, 1624, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. His widow, Katherine, m. 2ndly, James, Earl of Abercorn, and was granted by King CHARLES I. a royal letter declaring that, notwithstanding her second marriage, she should retain the title and rank of Duchess of Lennox. The Duke's eldest son,

JAMES STEWART, 4th Duke of Lennox, in Scotland, 2nd Earl of March, in England, was advanced, by letters patent, dated 8 August, 1641, to the DUKEDOM OF RICHMOND, with remainder in default of heirs male of his own body, to his brothers and their heirs male primogenitively. His grace was lord great chamberlain, and admiral of Scotland, lord steward of the household, warden of the Cinque Ports, gentleman of the bed-chamber, and a knight of the Garter. He m. Lady Mary Villiers, only dau. of George, Duke of Buckingham, and relict of Charles, Lord Herbert, and had issue,

EMME, his successor.

Mary, m. Richard Butler, Earl of Arran, and d. s. p., 1667.

The Duke of Richmond and Lennox adhered with unshaken fidelity to the king during the civil wars, and when money was raised upon loans to support the royal cause, he subscribed £40,000, "although there was not a man in England," says Duncan Stewart, "that offered more than £10,000, except Strafford, lord-lieutenant of Ireland, who offered £20,000; and yet at the same time, the duke had not the most considerable or profitable posts about the king, nor was his estate the greatest either; and when he was taken notice of by Sir Philip Warwick for his offer, he smilingly replied, 'I will serve the king in his person, though I carry but his cloak, as well and as cheerfully, as any in the greatest trust'; reflecting upon Hamilton. He paid his last duty to his master, King CHARLES, by putting him in his grave at Windsor." His grace d. 30 March, 1655, and was s. by his son,

EMME STEWART, 5th Duke of Lennox, in Scotland, 3rd Earl of March, and 2nd Duke of Richmond. This nobleman d. in his minority unm., 14 August, 1660, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. His cousin and heir was

CHARLES STEWART, 6th Duke of Lennox, in Scotland, 4th Earl of March, and 3rd Duke of Richmond, K.G. This nobleman, in consideration of his father, George, Lord D'Aubigny's, and his uncle, Bernard Stuart's gallant services in the royal cause, had been created, by King CHARLES I., by letters patent, dated 10 December, 1645, Baron Stuart, of Newberry, co. Berks, and EARL OF LITCHFIELD. His grace m. 1st, Elizabeth, relict of Charles, Viscount Mansfield, and dau. of Richard Rogers, Esq., of Bryanston, co. Dorset; 2ndly, Margaret, widow of William Lewis, Esq., of the Van, and dau. of Lawrence, son and heir of Sir Robert Banaster, Bart. of Papenham, Bucks; and 3rdly, Frances-Theresa, dau. of Walter Stuart, 3rd son of Walter, Lord Blantyre, but d. s. p. December, 1672, at Elsenure, where he resided as ambassador-extraordinary from King CHARLES II., to the court of Denmark. At his lordship's decease, the Barony of Clifton (that created by writ,) devolved upon his only sister, Catherine, Lady Ibrackan, whose grand-dau., and eventual representative, Lady Theodosia Hyde, m. John Bligh, Esq., M.P., afterwards Earl of Darnley, and conveyed the barony to the Bligh family. All his grace's other honours appear to have become extinct, those of England certainly, but there is a question as to the extinction of the Dukedom of Lennox,* and the matter remains as yet undecided.

FRANCES, DUCHESS OF LENNOX, his grace's widow, survived until 15 October, 1702. By her will, she bequeathed a considerable portion of her fortune to Lord Blantyre, who bought with it, the estate of Lethington, near Haddington, which, in grateful remembrance of his benefactress, he named Lennox Love.

* In 1829, John Bligh, Earl of Darnley, presented a petition to the king, claiming the Dukedom of Lennox, in the peerage of Scotland, as heir of line of Charles, 6th Duke of Lennox, and 4th Duke of Richmond, at whose death, in 1672, King CHARLES II. was served his grace's heir. As his Majesty's (legitimate) issue became extinct in 1807 with the Cardinal York, and as that personage was the last heir male of the Stuarts, the Earl of Darnley put forward his claim as heir-general, being descended from Catherine, sister of the duke mentioned above. The petition was referred to the House of Lords, and their lordships have not hitherto decided upon it.

STEWART—EARL OF MARR.

Lineage.

ISABEL, Countess of Marr, grandniece and eventual heir of Thomas, 13th Earl of Marr, m. 1st, Sir Malcolm Drummond, of Drummond, who d. s. p.; and 2ndly, Alexander Stewart, "the Wolf of Badenoch," natural son of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of ROBERT II. The first appearance of this person in life was at the head of a formidable band of robbers in the highlands of Scotland, when storming the Countess of Marr's castle of Kildrummie, he obtained her ladyship in marriage, either by violence or persuasion. The countess subsequently made a free grant of all her honours and inheritance to her said husband; and d. s. p. 1419, when ALEXANDER STEWART, designed, in right of the deceased countess, Earl of Marr and Lord of Garrioch, resigned those honours to the crown, whereupon they were regranted to him, 28 May, 1426, in remainder to his natural son, Sir Thomas Stewart, to revert, in case of failure of male issue of the latter to the crown. His lordship was ambassador to England in 1406, and again in 1407, when he engaged in a tournament with the Earl of Kent. The following year he went to France and Flanders with a noble company, and eminently distinguished himself in the service of the Duke of Burgundy, who employed him to assist in quelling a rebellion of the people of Liege against their bishop, John of Bavaria. The earl commanded the royal army at the battle of Harlaw, against the Lord of the Isles, in 1411; and was appointed ambassador-extraordinary to England in 1416; and soon afterwards warden of the marches. He d. in 1435, and his natural son mentioned above, having predeceased him, the Earldom of Marr, according to the charter, reverted to the crown, when it was claimed, in 1435, by Sir Robert Erskine, of Erskine, as lineal descendant of Lady Elyne Marr, but though the descent was indisputably established, the earldom was not conferred upon the Erskines until it had been enjoyed by four earls of different families, the last of whom was the celebrated Regent Moray, a period of 130 years having elapsed, when at last it was restored, in 1565, by Queen MARY, to JOHN, 5th Lord Erskine, ancestor of the present EARL OF MARR.

STEWART—EARL OF MARR.

Lineage.

The Earldom of Marr was conferred in 1457, on

JOHN STEWART, 3rd son of King JAMES II., but became EXTINCT in 1479, when the unfortunate prince, accused by the king's favourite of plotting by spells and machinations against the sovereign, was bled to death in Craigmillar Castle by order of his brother JAMES III.

STEWART—EARL OF MARR AND GARVIACH.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER STEWART, 3rd son of King JAMES III., was created EARL OF MARR AND GARVIACH, in 1486, but d. s. p., whereupon the title became EXTINCT.

STEWART—LORD METHVEN.

By Letters Patent, dated 1628.

Lineage.

HENRY STEWART, 2nd son of Andrew, Lord Avondale, appearing at court in 1624, made a deep impression on Queen Margaret of England, dowager of King JAMES IV., and wife of Archibald, Earl of Angus. So great indeed was his influence that the Queen Dowager gave him the offices of high chancellor and treasurer, and, having obtained a divorce from Angus, m. him, in March, 1526. JAMES V., incensed at Stewart's presumption, refused for some time his sanction to the match, but at length withdrew his opposition, and Stewart was created a peer of Scotland, as LORD METHVEN, in 1528; the title being derived from the lands of Methven, in Perthshire, which were part of the dower lands of the Queen Dowager. By his royal consort, Lord Methven had an only dau. who d. an infant; but by Lady Janet Stewart, his 2nd wife (eldest dau. of John, 2nd Earl of Athol, and widow of Alexander, Master of Sutherland and of Sir Hugh Kennedy, of Girvanmains), had issue,

HENRY, 2nd Lord Methven.

Joanna, m. to Colin, 6th Earl of Argyll.

Dorothea, m. to William, 1st Earl of Gowrie.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Andrew, Master of Ochiltree; 2ndly, to Uchtred Macdowall, of Garthland.

The only son,

HENRY STEWART, 2nd Lord Methven, s. his father, and was killed at the siege of the castle of Edinburgh by a cannon shot from that garrison, 3 March, 1571-2. Walpole, in his Royal and Noble Authors, notices Lord Methven's Tragedie, 1572, written by Lord Sempill. He m. Jean, eldest dau. of Patrick, 3rd Lord Ruthven, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Andrew, 3th Earl of Rothes) had a son,

HENRY STEWART, 3rd Lord Methven; who m. Catherine, dau. of Henry Stewart, son of James, Earl of Arran, but d. s. p. when the title became EXTINCT. After Lord Methven's death in 1584, the Lordship of Methven was granted to Ludovic, Duke of Lennox, and became eventually (by purchase, in 1664, from the Lennox family,) the property of the Smythes, of Braco.

STEWART—LORD OCHILTREE.

Lineage.

SIR JAMES STEWART, of Killeith, eldest son of Captain Stewart, the well-known Earl of Arran, purchased from Andrew, 3rd Lord Ochiltree, that lordship, and obtained a regnant of the title by charter, dated 7 June, 1615, to himself "Domino Jacobo Stewart of Killeith, milit. et hæredibus suis masculis." He m. and had an only son, WILLIAM, 2nd Lord Ochiltree, who d. under age in 1673. With this William, 2nd Lord Ochiltree, this branch of the family, which had borne the title of Ochiltree for about sixty years, became EXTINCT.

STEWART—LORD OCHILTREE.

(See STEWART, Lord Avondale.)

STEWART—EARL OF ORKNEY.

Lineage.

ROBERT STEWART, abbot of Holyrood House, natural son of JAMES V., conformed to the Protestant faith in 1559, had a grant of the crown lands of Orkney and Zetland in 1565, and was created EARL OF ORKNEY, 28 October, 1581. He m. Lady Janet Kennedy, eldest dau. of Gilbert, 3rd Earl of Cassilis, and had, with four daus., three sons,

PATRICK, his successor.

John, Earl of Carrick; who d. s. p., when that title became extinct.

James (Sir), of Tullay, on whom the Earldom of Orkney was also entailed. He left issue, Captain Robert Stewart, of Eday, who m. the Lady Jane Gordon, dau. of the Earl of Sutherland, and left a son, Captain Robert Stewart, of Eday, who m. Miss Isabella Graem, of Graemshall, and left a dau., Jane, m. to Robert Richan, Esq., of Linklater, head of an ancient and distinguished Danish family which settled in the Orkneys in the 9th century. He left a son, the late Captain William Richan, of Rapness, who left a son, and several daus.

Colonel John Stewart, of Newark, who d. s. p.

He was s. by his eldest surviving son.

PATRICK STEWART, 2nd earl; who was condemned for high treason, and beheaded at the market-cross of Edinburgh, 6

February, 1614. He m. Margaret, dau. of William, 6th Lord Livingstone, and d. s. p.: his estates and honours were forfeited to the crown; the former of which King JAMES VI. granted to Bishop Law.

STEWART—LORD PITTENWEEM.

Lineage.

The lands and baronies belonging to the priory of Pittenweem were erected into a temporal lordship, by act of parliament, in 1606, with limitation to the grantee's heirs and assigns, in favour of FREDERICK STEWART, son of JAMES VI.'s unworthy favourite, William Stewart or Stuart, commendator of Pittenweem, by Isabel, his wife, dau. of Sir Patrick Hepburn, of Waughton, and grandson of Thomas Stewart, of Galatoun, who was great-great-grandson of Alan Stewart, of Derneley. His lordship d. s. p., and the title has not, since his decease, been claimed by an heir general or an assignee.

STEWART—DUKE OF ROSS.

Lineage.

JAMES STEWART, 2nd son of King JAMES III., was named at his baptism, 1476, MARQUESS OF ORMONDE, in 1481, made EARL OF ROSS, Lord of Brechin, Navar, and Ardmannach; and by royal charter, dated 29 January, 1487-8, created DUKE OF ROSS, Marquess of Ormonde, and Earl of Edinlale. This prince, immortalized by Ariosto, in the Orlando Furioso, obtained the archiepiscopal see of St. Andrew's in 1498, and was constituted high chancellor of the kingdom in 1502. His grace d. in 1504, and was buried in the chancel of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

STEWART—LORD ST. COLME.

Lineage.

HENRY STEWART, of St. Colme Abbey, co. Fife, 2nd son of James, Lord Doune, and brother of James, Earl of Moray, was created a peer of Scotland, as LORD ST. COLME, 7 March, 1611. He m. Lady Jean Stewart, dau. of John, 5th Earl of Atholl, and dying 12 July, 1612, left a son and successor.

JAMES STEWART, 2nd Lord St. Colme, a colonel in the service of GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, King of Sweden, who d. s. p. 1642, and his title became extinct. His estates in the cos. of Edinburgh, Fife, Haddington, Perth, &c., which formerly belonged to the abbacy of St. Colme, devolved on the Earl of Moray.

STRABOLGI—EARL OF ATHOL.

(See STRATHBOLGIE.)

STRANGE — BARONS STRANGE, OF KNOKYN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

It is stated, that at Justa, held in the Pake of Derbyshire, at Castle Peverell, where, amongst other persons of note, were present Owen, Prince of Wales, and a son of the King of Scots, there were also two sons of the Duke of Bretagne; the younger of them being named Guy, was called

GUY LE STRANGE, and from him that the several families of Strange subsequently descended. This statement may or may not be true: but it is certain that, in the time of HENRY II. there were three brothers named le Strange, who possessed lands in Shropshire. Those brothers were,

I. GUY LE STRANGE, who had a grant from King HENRY II., to hold by the service of one knight's fee of the manors of Weston and Alwithale, co. Salop, and was sheriff of that shire from the 6th to the 11th of the same reign, and from the 17th to the 25th. He d. before the accession of King JOHN, leaving,

RALPH LE STRANGE, his successor, who d. s. p., when his lands devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs.

Margaret le Strange, m. to Thomas Noell.

Joane le Strange, m. to Richard de Wapenburi.

Matilda, m. circa 1196 Griffin ap Iorwerth, Lord of Sutton, and d. 4 May, 1242. From this marriage the family of KYNASTON derives descent.

II. HAMON LE STRANGE, Lord of Wrockwardine, of whom nothing more can be said than that he gave his whole part of the common woods at Wombrugge, Salop, to the canons of that house, and d. s. p.

III. JOHN LE STRANGE, who, in the 11th King JOHN, possessed the lordships of Nussie and Cheswardine, co. Salop, which he held by grant of HENRY II. In the 14th JOHN he was sheriff of the cos. Salop and Stafford, and in the 3rd HENRY III., he obtained the king's precept to the sheriff of Shropshire, for aid to rebuild part of his castle at Knokyn, and to repair the rest of it. And, having been a liberal benefactor to the canons of Wombrugge, departed this life shortly after, when he was s. by his son—

JOHN LE STRANGE, a person of great note in his time. In the 16th JOHN, his father then living, he was in the wars of Poitou; and in the 15th HENRY III., he obtained a grant of the inheritance of the manor of Wrockwardine, for the yearly rent of £8, to be paid to the king, and his heirs and successors. In the 21st of the same reign he was appointed sheriff of the cos. Salop and Stafford, and constituted governor of the castle of Salop and Bruges. He was afterwards one of the barons marchers, and had command as such to reside in the marches, in order to resist the incursions of the Welsh. In the contest between HENRY III. and the barons, his lordship adhered with great fidelity to the king, and obtained for his loyalty a grant of the lands of Walter de Mucegros, which had been forfeited in that rebellion. By Amicia, his wife, he had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Hamon, of Ellesmere, from whom descended the Stranges, of Blackmere (see STRANGE, Barons Strange, of Blackmere).

He d. in 1269, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN LE STRANGE, Lord of Knokyn. This feudal baron, in the time of his father, was deputy governor of Winchester Castle; and in the 48th HENRY III., he was constituted governor of the castle of Montgomery. He subsequently espoused the baronial cause, and after the triumph of the barons at Lewes, was reinstated in the governorship of Montgomery Castle. In the 3rd EDWARD I., he surrendered to his brother, Robert, his entire right in the manor of Wrockwardine. His lordship m. Joane, one of the daus. and heirs of Roger de Someri, Baron of Dudley, by his 1st wife, Lady Nichola de Albini, sister and co-heir of Hugh, 4th Earl of Arundel, and d. in 1276, when all his lands were seized upon by the crown, but in two years afterwards they were restored to his son and heir,

JOHN LE STRANGE, who, upon paying his relief, had livery thereof. This feudal lord, in the 14th EDWARD I., answered for 300 marks to the king; which sums John, his grandfather, had borrowed from the Cheshire men, to maintain the wars of Wales. He was, subsequently, engaged in the wars of Gascony and Scotland, and, for his good services, was summoned to parliament as BARON STRANGE, of Knokyn, from 29 December, 1299, to 12 December, 1309, and likewise made a knight of the Bath. His lordship m. Maud, dau. and heir of Ebulo de Montibus, Lord of Ketton, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Thomas de Hastang) had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

EBULO, who m. Alice de Laci, dau. and sole heir of Henry de Laci, Earl of Lincoln, and widow of Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster. In right of this lady, Ebulo le Strange bore the title of EARL OF LINCOLN, but he d. s. p., and Alice, his countess, surviving, m. 3rdly, Hugo de Frenes, who was also styled Earl of Lincoln, but he likewise d. s. p. This great heiress d. in the 22nd EDWARD III., and was buried at Berling Abbey, with her 2nd husband, Ebulo le Strange.

Hamon, ancestor of the L'ESTRANGES of Hunstanton, co. Norfolk. SIR NICHOLAS L'ESTRANGE, 3rd Bart. of Hunstanton, d. 1724, leaving by Anne, his wife, dau. of Sir Thomas Wodehouse, of Kimberley, two sons, Thomas and Henry, successive barts., both of whom d. s. p., and two daus., ARMINA, wife of NICHOLAS STYLEMAN, Esq., of Snettisham, and LUCY, wife of SIR JACOB ASTLEY, KNT. Of these co-heiresses, Lucy, Lady Astley, the younger, was ancestor of LORD HASTINGS, and Armine the elder was great grandmother of Henry L'Estrange Styleman, Esq., of Hunstanton, who assumed in 1839, the ancient surname of his ancestors, LE STRANGE (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry). A younger son of the L'Estranges, of Hunstanton, Richard L'Estrange, settled in Ireland, and was ancestor of the L'ESTRANGES of Moystown, King's co., and of the L'ESTRANGES of the co. of Westmeath.

His lordship d. in 1310, and was s. by his eldest son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, 13 June, 1311. This nobleman before and after his accession to the title, was in the Scottish wars. He m. Isolda, dau. and heir of John de Walton, of Walton D'Elville, d. the year after his father, and was s. by his elder son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, 8 January, and 26 July, 1313. His lordship d. in 1324, s. p., and was s. by his brother.

ROGER LE STRANGE, 4th baron, summoned to parliament, from 25 February, 1342, to 10 March, 1349. This nobleman was made a knight of the Bath, in the 20th EDWARD II., and in the reign of EDWARD III. was in the wars of Scotland and France. His lordship m. 1st, Joane, dau. and co-heir of Oliver, Lord Ingham, and 2ndly, a lady, named Maud, in whose right he held the manor of Middleton, in Cambridgeshire. His lordship d. in 1349, and was s. by his son.

ROGER LE STRANGE, 5th baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 September, 1355, to 9 August, 1382, b. 1327. This nobleman was constantly engaged in the wars of Gascony and Brittany, temp. EDWARD III. and RICHARD II. His lordship m. Lady Aliva Fitz-Alan, dau. of Edmund, Earl of Arundel, and dying in 1382, was s. by his son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 6th baron, summoned to parliament, from 20 August, 1383, to 18 July, 1397, b. 1362. This nobleman, in the 10th RICHARD II., was in the garrison of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the next year in the Scottish wars. He m. Maud, dau. and eventually co-heir of Sir John de Mohun, of Dunster, and dying about the year 1398, was s. by his son.

RICHARD LE STRANGE, 7th baron, summoned to parliament, from 25 August, 1404, to 2 January, 1449. This nobleman making proof of his age in the 5th HENRY IV., had livery of all his lands, Maud, his mother, being then dead. He was likewise, maternally, nephew and heir of Philippa, Duchess of York. By his 1st wife, Constance, he had no issue, but by his 2nd, Elizabeth, dau. of Reginald, Lord Cobham, he left at his decease, in 1449, an only son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 8th baron, summoned to parliament, from 28 February, 1466, to 19 August, 1472. This nobleman m. Jaquetta, dau. of Richard Widville, Earl Rivers, and sister-in-law of King EDWARD IV., by whom he left at his decease, 15 October, 1477, an only dau. and heiress.

JOHANNA LE STRANGE, who m.

SIR GEORGE STANLEY, K.B. and K.G., eldest son of Sir Thomas Stanley, 1st Earl of Derby, and conveyed the Barony of Strange, of Knokyn, to the family of her husband, Sir George being summoned to parliament in that dignity, jure uxoris, from 15 November, 1482, to 16 January, 1497. This nobleman was sworn of the privy council, upon the accession of HENRY VII., and the next year he was one of the principal commanders who defeated John, Earl of Lincoln, and his adherents at Stoke. His lordship d. in 1497, his father, the Earl of Derby, then living, leaving issue.

THOMAS, his successor.

James.

Jane, m. to Robert Sheffield, Esq.

Elizabeth.

Lord Strange was s. by his eldest son.

THOMAS STANLEY, as 10th Baron Strange, who s. his grandfather as 2nd Earl of Derby, in 1504; and the Barony of Strange, of Knokyn, merged in the superior dignity, until the decease of

FERDINANDO STANLEY, 5th Earl of Derby, and 13th Baron Strange, in 1594. This nobleman m. Alice, dau. of Sir John Spencer, of Althorp, co. Northampton, and left three daus., viz.,

ANNE, m. 1st, to Grey Bruges, 5th Lord Chandos, and 2ndly, to Mervyn, Earl of Castlehaven.

FRANCES, m. to Sir John Egerton, Knt., afterwards Earl of Brinswater.

ELIZABETH, m. to Henry Hastings, afterwards Earl of Huntingdon.

Amongst these ladies the Barony of Strange, of Knokyn, with that of Stanley, fell into ABERNACE, as both still continue with their representatives.

Arms—Gu., two lions passant, arg.

STRANGE—BARON STRANGE, OF ELLES-MERE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

HAMON LE STRANGE, eldest son of Hamon of Ellesmere, 2nd son of John le Strange, of Knokyn, by Amicia, his wife, having stood firmly by King HENRY III., in his contest with Montfort, Earl of Leicester, was rewarded by a grant from the crown of the manors of Ellesmere and Stretton. He went to the Holy Land, and d. there s. p., having previously given Ellesmere to his brother.

SIR ROGER LE STRANGE, who thus became of Ellesmere, and served the office of sheriff for the co. York, in the 33rd HENRY III., and again in the 56th of the same monarch. In the 4th EDWARD I., he obtained a confirmation of the grant made to him by his brother Hamon, of the castle and hundred of Ellesmere; and in some years afterwards he was made justice of all the forests south of Trent. In the 22nd of the same reign, he had a military summons to march against the French, and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 24 June, 1295, to 26 August, 1296. His lordship m. Maud, widow of Roger de Mowbray, and one of the daus. and co-heirs of William Beauchamp, of Bedford. Dugdale states that he was living in 1303, but "that further he cannot say of him." It is presumed that he d. s. p., when the barony became EXTINCT.

Arms—Same as Strange, of Knokyn.

STRANGE—BARONS STRANGE, OF BLACK-MERE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 13 January, 1308.

Lineage.

This branch of the STRANGES sprang from

ROBERT LE STRANGE, Lord of Chanton, Hants, 3rd son of Hamon le Strange of Ellesmere, who was younger son of John le Strange of Knokyn, by Amicia his wife. He obtained from his brother all that feudal lord's right in the manor of Wrockwordine, and marrying Allanore, sister and co-heir of William de Blancheminster, alias Whitechurch, acquired the manor of Whitechurch, in Shropshire. He d. in the 4th EDWARD I., and was s. by his elder son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, designated of Blackmere, by reason that his manor house of Whitechurch was situated close to a mere, so called from the dark colour of its waters. This John d. soon after attaining majority, and was s. by his brother.

FULK LE STRANGE, who, having been engaged in the wars of Scotland and France, temp. EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., was summoned to parliament as BARON STRANGE, from 13 January, 1308, to 13 September, 1324. In the 12th EDWARD II. his lordship obtained pardon for adhering to Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and in four years afterwards he was constituted seneschal of the Duchy of Aquitaine. He m. Allanore, dau. and co-heir of John Giffard, of Brimsfield, and in her right acquired one-third part of the manor of Thornhagh, in Nottinghamshire. His lordship d. in 1324, and was s. by his son.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament as BARON STRANGE, of Blackmere, from 6 September, 1330, to 20 April, 1343. This nobleman in the 4th EDWARD III., was made governor of Conway Castle: he was afterwards in the wars of Scotland and France, and attained the high military rank of Banneret. His lordship m. Ankaret, dau. of William le Boteler, of Wemme, and sister and co-heir of Edmund le Boteler, Clerk, and dying in 1349, had (with a dau. Eleanor, m. Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthven,) an elder son.

FULK LE STRANGE, 3rd baron, who dying in minority, and s. p., 23rd EDWARD III., was s. by his brother.

JOHN LE STRANGE, 4th baron, summoned to parliament 3 April, 1360. His lordship m. Lady Mary Fitz-Alan, sister of Richard, Earl of Arundel, and had issue.

JOHN, his successor.

ANKARET, m. to Sir Richard Talbot.

He d. in 1361, and was s. by his son.

(See TALBOT, Barons Talbot).

Arms—Same as Strange, of Knockyn.

STRATHBOGIE—EARLS OF ATHOL AND BARONS STRATHBOGIE.

Earldom, created temp. ALEXANDER I.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 14 March, 1322.

Lineage.

This Earldom of Athol was as ancient as the time of King ALEXANDER I., to whose foundation charter of the Monastery of SCONE A.D. 1115, Madach, 1st Earl of Athol, son of King DONAL BASE, was a witness. This Madach, is styled by Torfaeus, the Danish Historian, as "Omnium Scoticarum principum facile nobilissimus." From Madach, the Earldom of Athol passed by descent through heiresses to ADA, COUNTESS OF ATHOL, dau. and heiress of Ferelith, Countess of Athol, by her husband, David de Hastings. Ada m. JOHN DE STRATHBOGIE, and in 1253, she and her husband confirmed the grant made by Ferelith, to the Monastery of Cupar, for the soul of Sir David de Hastings. The son and heir of Ada, and John de Strathbogie, was,

DAVID DE STRATHBOGIE, Earl of Athol, in Scotland, who, by Isabel de Chilham, one of the co-heirs of Richard de Chilham, of Chilham Castle, in Kent, and Rose de Dover, his wife, had issue,

JOHN DE STRATHBOGIE, Earl of Athol, who in the 32nd EDWARD I., upon the death of Joane, widow of Richard de Dover, had livery of the manor of Lesnes, in Kent, which descended to him through his mother. "It is reported" says Dugdale, "that, in 1306, King EDWARD I., being victorious in Scotland, taking much to heart the slaughter of John Comyn, and the crowning of ROBERT DE BRUS King of that realm, exercised a sharp revenge upon all whom he could discover to have had a hand therein; and that thereupon this John de Asceles (for so he is called) fled the country; but being driven back from sea by contrary winds, was taken, carried to London, and sentenced to death in Westminster Hall. In respect, however, of his descent from royal blood, he was not drawn as traitors usually are, but set on horseback, and hanged upon a gibbet fifty feet high, his head fixed on London Bridge, and his body burnt to ashes." Being thus executed for treason, all his lands in Scotland were conferred by the crown upon Ralph Monthermer, Earl of Gloucester; but those lands were soon after recovered by purchase, and the recovery received the confirmation of the king, by the deceased nobleman's son and heir.

DAVID DE STRATHBOGIE, who, pursuing a different course to that of his father, and taking an active part in favour of the English interests, against BRUCE, had a grant, from the crown, of the manor and honour of Chilham, in Kent, and was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, by King EDWARD II., in the same year, 1322, and from that period to 3 December, 1326. "David, 11th Earl of Athol" (we quote Alexander Sinclair), "was restored by EDWARD I., yet was made high constable by King ROBERT BRUCE in 1311, but joining Balliol's party, he was forfeited and expelled in 1315. By King EDWARD II., he was summoned to parliament as Earl of Athol, 1322. By his grandmother he had Chilham in Kent, and by his wife, Joan Cumyn, he became co-heir to her brother John, Lord of Badenoch, another banished Scotch grandee, and also shared in a still greater succession in this way: Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, the Jew, half-nephew of King HENRY III., and governor of Scotland just before Bannockburn, was murdered attending EDWARD II.'s Queen Isabel in France, in 1323, leaving no children, but having estates in twenty-five counties in England, out of forty, besides Wales and Ireland. John Cumyn was nephew, and one of the nearest heirs of these vast properties, and he d. two years after, in 1325-6, also without issue, leaving only two sisters, his heirs, Elizabeth, the eldest, being wife of David, 11th Earl of Athol." By his said wife Joan, dau.

of John Comyn, Lord of Badenoch, eldest sister and co-heir of John Comyn, of Badenoch, and one of the co-heirs of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, the earl left a son and heir,

DAVID DE STRATHBOGIE, 12th Earl of Athol, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 25 January, 1330, to 24 July, 1334. This nobleman, at the decease of his father was but nineteen years of age, when Henry de Beaumont paid 1000 marks for his wardship and marriage; notwithstanding which, he stood in such fair esteem with the king, that in the 1st EDWARD III., although he had not then attained majority, he was allowed to do homage, and had livery of his lands. He subsequently inherited estates from his uncle, John Comyn; and lands also as one of the co-heirs of Aymer, Earl of Pembroke. His lordship, in the Scottish wars, was at one time engaged against the English monarch, and at another in his favour; he eventually, however, fell fighting under King EDWARD's (III.) banner, "Thus perished" (says Wood's Douglas) "in the twenty-eighth year of his age, David de Strathbogie, of royal descent, nobly allied, and possessing estates above the rank of a subject. He died seized of the manors of Gainsborough, in Lincolnshire, Bulindon in Buckinghamshire, Posewyke, West Lexham, Styvely, and Rockham in Norfolk; Mitford Castle, and other lands, in Northumberland." He m. Katherine Beaumont, dau. of Henry, styled Earl of Buchan, and was s. 3 November, 1336, by his only son,

DAVID DE STRATHBOGIE, 3rd Baron Strathbogie, and 13th Earl of Athol, aged three at his father's death; summoned to the parliament of England from 20 January, 1366, to 6 April, 1369. He was afterwards in the wars of France under the Black Prince. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and had issue,

ELIZABETH, b. 1361, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Percy (jure uxoris) of Athol, Knt., 2nd son of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, by whom (who d. in Spain, in 1383) she had issue,

Sir Henry Percy, of Athol, governor of Alnwick for his grandfather, the earl; he escaped the ruin of his family and d. in 1433; he m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Brewse, of Gower, and widow of Robert, Lord Scales, and left two daus., his heirs, viz.,

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Thomas, Lord Burgh, and 2ndly, to Sir William Lucy. The co-heirs general of Elizabeth, Lady Burgh, are Archdeacon Thomas Thorp, Henry-William Lord Berners, and Hubert de Burgh, Esq., of West Drayton.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Henry, Lord Grey, of Codnor, and 2ndly to Sir Richard Vere, Knt.

Her ladyship m. 2ndly, Sir John Scrope, Knt.

PHILIPPA, m. 1st, to Sir Ralph Percy, who d. s. p., younger brother of Sir Thomas, and 3rd son of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and 2ndly, to Sir John Halsham.

His lordship d. 10 October, 1375, when the Barony of Strathbogie fell into ABEYANCE between his daus., as it still continues with their representatives.

Arms—Pale of six, or and sa.

STRYVELIN—BARON STRYVELIN.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

In the 9th EDWARD III.,

SIR JOHN DE STRYVELIN was in the garrison of Edinburgh Castle, and in the 16th of the same monarch he was constituted one of the commissioners, with the bishop of Durham, Ralph, Lord Nevill, and others, to treat of peace with the Scots. He was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 25 February, 1342, to 8 January, 1371; and he was in the famous expedition made into France in the 20th EDWARD III. Lord Stryvelin d. s. p. 15 August, 1378, whereupon the barony became EXTINCT. On this failure of issue to Sir John Stryvelin, Baron Stryvelin, certain lands, that he died possessed of, descended to Sir John Middleton and CHRISTIAN DE STRYVELIN, his wife, but the relationship of Christian to Sir John is not shown. Certain it is that she was not his daughter and consequently she could not succeed to the barony.

Arms—Arg., on a chief, gu., three round buckles in fess, or.

This Ralph was s. by his son, another

RALPH DE SUDELEY, who m. Isabel, dau. of Roger Corbet, of Chadealey, and was s. by his son,

BARTHOLOMEW DE SUDELEY. This feudal lord was sheriff of Herefordshire, and governor of the castle of Hereford, in the latter end of the reign of HENRY III. He m. Joane, dau. of William de Beauchamp, of Elmley, and sister of William, 1st Earl of Warwick, and dying in 1274, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE SUDELEY, an eminent soldier in the reign of EDWARD I., and lord chamberlain to that king. He was in the French and Scottish wars, and had summons to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 16 May, 1321. He m. a dau. of William, Lord Saye and dying 1336, left

JOHN DE SUDELEY, his grandson (son of Bartholomew de Sudeley, by his wife, Maud Montfort, of Beaudesert,) his next heir. This John m. Eleanor, dau. of Robert, Lord Scales, and dying in the 14th EDWARD III., left issue,

JOHN, who d. unm. 1367.

Joane, m. to William Boteler, of Wempe, and had a son,

THOMAS, who obtained Sudeley Castle.

Margery, m. Sir Robert Massey, Knt., and d. s. p.

Eventually the barony vested in

SIR RALPH BOTELEK, K.G., of Sudeley Castle, brother of John Boteler, who d. s. p., and son of Thomas Boteler, whose mother was JOANE DE SUDELEY as above. This Ralph Boteler becoming a person of eminence, temp. HENRY VI., was created, by letters patent, 10 September, 1441, BARON SUDELEY. This nobleman, being a strenuous Lancastrian, excused himself from coming to parliament after the accession of EDWARD IV., by the reason of his advanced age, and had so much favour shown him, that he obtained letters patent of exemption from the duty during life. He was afterwards, however, attached and brought prisoner to London; when it is stated, that as he was departing from his seat, he cast a lingering look upon Sudeley Castle, and exclaimed, "Sudeley Castle, thou art the traitor, not I." This castle he is said to have built out of the spoils he had obtained in the wars of France. Leland tells us, "The Lord Sudeley that builded the castle was a famous man of war in King HENRY's the fifth and sixth dayes, and was an admiral (as I have heard) on sea; whereupon it was supposed and spoken that it was partly builded ex spoliis Gallorum; and some speake of a towre in it called Portmure's Towre, that it should be made of a ransom of his." From its present remains, it would seem that Fuller does not exaggerate when in his quaint phraseology he declares, "It was of subjects' castles the most handsome habitation, and of subjects' habitations the strongest castle." These relics, however, would rather indicate its having been a superb castellated mansion than a baronial fortress.* He m. Alice, dau. and heir of Sir William Deincourt, but, as he left no issue, at his decease in 1473, the Barony became EXTINCT, and his estates devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs, namely,

ELIZABETH, m. to Sir John Norbury.

SUTTON—BARONS DUDLEY.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

Sir William Dugdale commences his account of the SUTTON family by the following observations: "In the time of Queen ELIZABETH, when Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick, and Robert, his brother, Earl of Leicester (sons to John Dudley, some time Viscount L'Isle, Earl of Warwick, and lastly, Duke of Northumberland), powerful men in their days, did flourish, the most learned and expert genealogists of that age, spared not their endeavours to magnify this family, whence those great men did, by a younger son, derive their descent; some deducing it from Sutton, of Sutton, in Holderness; some from the Suttons, of Sutton Madoc, in Shropshire; but others from Sutton, of Sutton-upon-Trent, near Newark; whence the Suttons, of Aram (near at hand), are descended. Of which opinion was the right learned and judicious Robert Glover, then Somerset Herald; and Henry Ferrers, of Badsley Clinton, co. Warwick, Esq. (a person likewise much versed in those studies), all of them giving probable reasons for those their various conjectures. But, that these Suttons, of Dudley, did spring from Hugh de Sutton, most of them do agree."

HERVEY DE SUTTON, Lord of Sutton-upon-Trent, near Tuxford, co. Notts, gave the church of Sutton to the canons of Radford, near Worksop, Notts. He had issue,

I. ROBERT, heir apparent, d. abroad, s. p.

II. Richard, who had issue; Agnes, m. Gilbert de Muschamp, and had issue; Margery, m. Stephen de Coverham, and had issue; Alice; Mary, m. Guichard de Charrons, and had issue; Elizabeth, mother of William de Cauntton.

III. ROWLAND, of whom we treat.

The 3rd son,

ROWLAND DE SUTTON, m. Alice, dau. of Richard de Lexington, and sister and co-heir of Robert, Baron Lexington, and Henry, bishop of Lincoln, and had two sons,

I. WILLIAM, of whom presently.

II. Robert, ancestor of ROBERT SUTTON, created BARON LEXINGTON, of Aram, 21 November, 21st CHARLES I.

The elder son,

WILLIAM DE SUTTON, d. 62nd HENRY III., seized of the manor of Worksop, co. Notts, leaving by Matilda, his wife, a son and heir,

ROBERT DE SUTTON, Lord of Worksop, who m. Johanna, who had lands at Ekering and Allerton, in dower, 2nd EDWARD I. He d. 1st EDWARD I., seized of the manor of Theydon ad Montem, Essex, and the manors of Aston and Byfeld, co. Northampton, leaving a son and heir,

RICHARD DE SUTTON, m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Roderic, the son of Griffin, Lord of the Castle of Shokelach, in Cheshire, by Beatrix, his wife, dau. and co-heir of David de Malpas, and was father of

SIR JOHN DE SUTTON, Knt., who m. Margaret, dau. of Roger de Somerie, and elder sister and co-heir of John de Somerie, Lord Dudley, by whom the Sutton family acquired the castle of Dudley, and other considerable estates (refer to Somerie, Baron Dudley). This Sir John Sutton passed away by deed, bearing date at Westminster, 19 October, in the 19th EDWARD II., all his right and title to the castle and manor of Dudley, with other lands, to Hugh le Despenser, son of Hugh, Earl of

* Sudeley Castle, afterwards the residence of Lord Seymour, of Sudeley, and his wife Queen Katharine Parr, was granted by Queen MARY, to Sir John Brydges, of Cockerley, who also took title from it as LORD CHANDOS, of Sudeley. From the family of Brydges, Sudeley passed to that of Pitt, and was eventually purchased by Messrs. John and William Dent, of Worcester.

Winchester. But the grant thus made being extorted from him while in prison, and in fear of being put to death, it was cancelled upon the accession of EDWARD III., and the property restored. Sir John was s. by his son,

JOHN DE SUTTON, who was summoned to parliament as BARON SUTTON, of Dudley, 25 February, 1342. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of John de Cheriton, Lord of Powis, and dying in 1359, was s. by his only son,

JOHN DE SUTTON, 2nd baron. The wardship of this nobleman, he being in minority at his father's decease, was granted to Richard, Earl of Arundel, and sold by him to Sir Philip le Despenser, in the 5th RICHARD II., for 350 marks. He m. twice; by his 1st wife, Margaret, dau. of Roger de Mortimer, Baron of Wigmore, he had no issue, but by his 2nd wife, Johanna, he had two sons,

- i. JOHN, of whom presently.
- ii. Thomas.

The 2nd Lord Dudley d. 1376, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE SUTTON, 3rd baron, m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Philip le Despenser; and 2ndly, Constance, dau. of Sir Walter le Blount, Knt., of Barton, co. Derby, and Belton, co. Rutland, and by her had,

- i. JOHN, of whom presently.
- ii. Thomas, father of Thomas, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Robert Goddard, and had a dau., Elizabeth, m. Sir A. Billesey, Knt.

He d. in 1407. His elder son,

JOHN DE SUTTON, 4th baron, K.G., carried the standard at the solemn obsequies of HENRY V.; and, being also a knight in the 2nd HENRY VI., bore the title of BARON OF DUDLEY, at which time he was in the garrison of the castle of Ghisnes, under its governor, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and continued there for some time. In the 6th of the same reign he was constituted lieutenant of Ireland for the term of two years; and for his good services was summoned to the parliament, then held at Reading, 15 February, 1440: in which year he was likewise appointed one of the commissioners to negotiate a truce with the Duke of Burgundy, or his ambassadors; and in the 27th of the same reign, being then one of the lords of the king's council, he was employed as ambassador to the same prince, to treat with him, and certain commissioners from the Flemings, touching a freedom of trade between England and the Low Countries. His lordship being a staunch Lancastrian, was made prisoner in two years after at Gloucester, by Richard, Duke of York, and sent to the castle of Ludlow. He was, subsequently, wounded at Bloreheath, and obtained from King HENRY VI., to whom he was treasurer, various grants of divers lordships, as also of the stewardship of Montgomery, Chirbury, &c., for life, to be executed either personally or by deputy. But, notwithstanding his fidelity to his royal master, he so far acquiesced in the rule of EDWARD IV., that he had a discharge from that prince of all the debts he owed the crown, and he afterwards obtained other immunities from the same king. Towards the latter end of HENRY VI.'s reign, he was invested with the Garter, and he had summons to parliament regularly from 18th of that king to the 3rd HENRY VII. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Berkeley, of Beverstone, and widow of Sir Edward Cheriton, Knt., Lord Powis, by whom he had issue,

- i. EDMUND (Sir), who m. 1st, Joice, dau. of John Lord Tiptoft, and aunt and, in her issue, co-heir of Edward, Earl of Worcester, and had issue,

EDWARD, who s. his grandfather.
Joice, m. to Sir E. Bensted.

He m. 2ndly, Matilda, dau. of Thomas, Lord Clifford, by whom he had,

Thomas, who m. Grace, dau. and co-heir of Lancelot Threlkeld, of Yewwith, Esq., and had issue, 1 Richard Sutton, alias Dudley, of Yewwith, m. Dorothy, dau. of Edward Sandford, of Askam, and had Edmund, Robert, Elizabeth, Anne, Johanna, Jane, and Grace. 2 John Dudley, of Newington, m. the dau. of — Gardener, and had a dau. and heir; 3 Thomas; 1 Elizabeth, m. to Alan Thacksted; 2 Winifred, m. to Anthony Blencowe, Esq., of Blencowe, and 3 Lucy, m. to Albany Fetherston, Esq., Richard, in holy orders.

Oliver.

Robert, s. p.

George, in holy orders.

Joice, m. to William Middleton, Esq., of Stockeld, co. York.

Margaret.

Alice, m. to Sir John Ratcliffe, of Ordsal, Lancashire.

Dorothy, m. 1st, to Sir John Musgrave, Knt.; and 2ndly, to Richard Wrottesley, Esq., of Wrottesley.

Sir Edmund Sutton d. s. p.

- ii. John, who assumed the surname of DUDLEY, and became ancestor of the Dudleys, Earls of Warwick. He m. Elizabeth, one of the daus. and co-heirs of John Bramshot, Esq., of Bramshot, and was father of

EDMUND DUDLEY, the notorious minister of HENRY VII. (see Dudley, Earls of Warwick.)

iii. William, bishop of Durham.

i. Margaret, m. to Sir John Longueville, of Little Billing, co. Northampton. Knt.

ii. Jane, m. to Thomas Maynwaring, of Ightfield.

iii. Eleanor, m. to Henry Beaumont, of Woodsop, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1487, and was s. by his grandson,

EDWARD SUTTON, 6th baron, K.G., summoned to parliament from 12 August, 1492, to 3 November, 1529. This nobleman was elected a knight of the Garter in the beginning of HENRY VIII.'s reign. He m. Cecillie, dau. of Sir William Willoughby, Knt., and had issue,

i. JOHN, his successor.

ii. Geoffrey, m. Eleanor Talbot, and had a son, Thomas, of Russels.

iii. Thomas.

iv. Arthur.

i. Elizabeth.

ii. Alice.

iii. Eleanor, m. to Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, ancestor of the present Duke of Beaufort.

iv. Joyce, m. to Sir John Leighton, Knt. of Wattlesborough.

v. Johanna, m. to Sir Thomas Fiennes, Knt., son and heir apparent of Thomas, Baron Dacre.

vi. Margaret, m. to John Grey, Baron Powys.

vii. Catherine, m. to Sir George Grealey, of Drakelow, co. Derby, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1531, and was s. by his son,

JOHN SUTTON, 7th baron, but never summoned to parliament. "It is reported," writes Dugdale, "by credible tradition, of this John, Lord Dudley, that, being a weak man of understanding, whereby he had exposed himself to some wants, and so became entangled in the usurer's bonds, John Dudley, then Viscount L'Isle, and Earl of Warwick (afterwards Duke of Northumberland), thirsting after Dudley Castle (the chief seat of the family), made those money merchants his instruments to work him out of it: which, by some mortgage, being at length effected, this poor lord became exposed to the charity of his friends for subsistence; and spending the remainder of his life in visits amongst them, was commonly called Lord Quoniam." His lordship m. Lady Cicely Grey, dau. of Thomas, Marquess of Dorset, and had issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

George.

Dorothy.

Henry.

Elizabeth.

He d. 1553, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR EDWARD SUTTON, 8th baron, summoned to parliament, from 12 November, 1554, to 15 October, 1586. This nobleman, when Sir Edward Sutton, was in the expedition made into Scotland in the 1st EDWARD VI., and was appointed governor of Hume Castle upon the surrender of that fortress to the English. His lordship afterwards enjoyed so much favour from Queen MARY, that her Majesty restored to him, by letters patent, Dudley Castle, and other lands of great value, which had vested in the crown, by the attainder of John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland. Her Majesty constituted him likewise lieutenant of the castle of Humpnes, in Picardy, for life. Lord Dudley m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of John Bydges, Lord Chandos, of Sudley, by whom he had an only dau.,

Agnes, m. 1st, Francis Throckmorton, Esq., and 2ndly, Thomas Wylmer, Esq., barrister-at-law.

He m. 2ndly, Lady Jane Stanley, dau. of Edward, Earl of Derby, by whom he had two sons,

EDWARD, his successor.

John, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Whorwood, of Compton, and had a son and heir, Whorwood.

His lordship m. 3rdly, Mary, dau. of William, Lord Howard of Effingham, but by her (who m. 2ndly, Richard Mompesson) had no issue. He d. in 1586, and was s. by his son,

EDWARD SUTTON, 9th baron, summoned to parliament, from 19 February, 1593, to 3 November, 1639. This nobleman m. Theodosia, dau. of Sir James Harrington, Knt., of Exton, by Lucy Sydney, his wife, and had issue,

FERDINANDO (Sir), who was made a knight of the Bath at the creation of Henry, Prince of Wales, in 1610. He m. Honora, dau. of Edward, Lord Beauchamp, eldest son of Edward, Earl of Hertford. Of this marriage, Mr. Perry writes, in a letter to Sir Ralph Winwood, dated London, 17 July, 1610, "Sir Ferdinando Dudley, heir to the Lord Dudley, was yesterday married to my Lord Beauchamp's only daughter, who hath £5000 in present to her marriage, and shall have £5000." Sir Ferdinando d. s. p., leaving an only dau. and heir, FRANCES, who s. her grandfather.

Mary, m. to Alexander, Earl Hume, in Scotland.

Anne, m. to Meinhardt, Count Schouberg, and was mother of the celebrated General Frederick, Duke of Schomberg, K.G., who fell at the Boyne, in 1690.

Margaret, m. to Sir Miles Hobart, K.B.
Theodosia.

Lord Dudley having lavished a great portion of his property on a concubine, and his children by her, and having thus involved himself and the estates of the family very much in debt, was obliged, according to Dugdale, in order to extricate them, to bestow the hand of his grand-dau., and heiress, FRANCES SUTTON, upon Humble Ward, the only son of William Ward, an opulent goldsmith in London, and jeweller to the queen. His lordship d. 1643, and was s. by his grand-dau.,

FRANCES WARD (wife of the above-mentioned Sir Humble Ward, Knt., who was created by King CHARLES I., 23 March, 1644, Lord Ward, of Birmingham), as Baroness Dudley. This lady had issue,

I. EDWARD, who s. his father as Lord Ward, in 1670.

II. William, who m. Anne, dau. and sole heir of Thomas Parke, Esq., of Willingsworth, co. Stafford, by whom he acquired that and other estates, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Frances, m. to Robert Pigot, Esq., of Chetwynd, Salop.

Jane, m. to Daniel Jevon, Esq.

Rebecca, d. unm.

Mr. Ward was s. by his son,

WILLIAM WARD, Esq., of Willingsworth, M.P. for co. Stafford, temp. Queen ANNE and King GEORGE I. He m. Mary, dau. of the Hon. John Grey, of Enville Hall, and had issue,

I JOHN, of Sedgley Park, co. Stafford, who inherited the Barony of Ward, at the decease of William, 5th baron, in 1740, and was grandfather of John-William Ward, late Earl of Dudley.

2 William, rector of Himley, ancestor of the present EARL OF DUDLEY.

III. Humble, d. young

I. Honora, m. to William Dilke, Esq., of Maxtocke Castle, co. Warwick.

II. Frances, m. to Sir William Noel, Bart., of Kirkby Mallory, co. Leicester.

III. Theodosia, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Brereton, and 2ndly, to Charles Brereton.

Her ladyship d. in 1697, and was s. by her eldest son,

EDWARD WARD, 2nd Lord Ward, of Birmingham, as (11th successor to the Barony of Dudley, and) 10th Baron Dudley. His lordship m. Frances, dau. of Sir William Brereton, Bart., of Handford, in Cheshire, and sister and sole heir of Sir Thomas Brereton, by whom he had issue,

I. John, who d. young, in 1675.

II. WILLIAM, m. Frances, dau. of Thomas Dilke, Esq., of Maxtocke Castle, co. Warwick, and had issue,

I EDWARD, who s. his grandfather.

2 WILLIAM, successor to his nephew.

3 FRANCES, m. 1706, to William Lea, Esq., of Hales-Owen-Grange, co. Salop, and had issue, FERDINANDO-DUDLEY LEA, of whom hereafter, as 14th Baron Dudley, upon the decease of William, 13th baron, in 1740.

William Lea, d. unm.

ANNE, m. to William Smith, Esq., of Ridgeacre, co. Salop.

FRANCES, m. to Walter Woodcock, Esq.

Mary, m. to Dr. Hervey, a physician, of Stourbridge.

Catherine, m. to Thomas Jordan, of Birmingham.

Elizabeth, m. to the Rev. Benjamin Briscoe.

III. Ferdinando, d. unm. 1717.

I. Catherine, m. to the Hon. John Grey, of Enville Hall, and was mother of Harry Grey, 3rd Earl of Stamford.

II. Lettice, d. young.

III. Humbletta, m. to Thomas Porter, Esq.

His lordship d. in 1701, and was s. by his grandson,

EDWARD WARD, 11th Baron Dudley, and 3rd Lord Ward. This nobleman m. Diana, dau. of Thomas Howard, Esq., of Ashted, co. Surrey, and dying 28 March, 1704, was s. by his posthumous son,

EDWARD WARD, 12th Baron Dudley, and 4th Lord Ward, at whose decease, unm., 6 September, 1731, the honours reverted to his uncle,

WILLIAM WARD, 13th Baron Dudley, and 5th Lord Ward. This nobleman d. also unm., 21 May, 1740, when the Barony of Ward, of Birmingham, passed to his kinsman, JOHN WARD, Esq., of Sedgley Park (refer to WILLIAM, 2nd son of Frances Ward, Baroness Dudley), and the Barony of Dudley devolved upon his nephew (revert to FRANCES, dau. of William Ward, eldest surviving son of Edward, 2nd Lord Ward, and 10th Baron Dudley), FERDINANDO-DUDLEY LEA, Esq., as 14th Baron Dudley (15th in succession, one of the inheritors being a baroness). This nobleman d. unm. in 1757, and his brother having pre-deceased him, also unm., the Barony of Dudley fell into ABEYANCE amongst his lordship's sisters, as it still continues with their descendants. Of those ladies, the eldest, ANNE, wife of William Smith, Esq., of Ridgeacre, was great grandmother of FERDINANDO-DUDLEY-LEA SMITH, Esq., of Halesowen Grange, co. Salop, senior co-heir of the Barony of Dudley; the second, FRANCES, wife of Walter Woodcock, Esq., had, with two sons, who d. s. p., six dau., and eventually co-heirs, viz., MARY, m. Benjamin Smart; FRANCES, m. Joseph Green, and d. s. p.; ELIZABETH, m. John Green, and had issue; ANNE, m. William Wilmot; SARAH, m. to the Rev. Thomas Hughes, and had issue; and Katherine, d. s. p.

The youngest sister and co-heir of Ferdinando-Dudley Lea, 14th Lord Dudley, was ELIZABETH, wife of the Rev. Benjamin Briscoe, rector of Stanton, co. Worcester, by whom she had a son, the Rev. WILLIAM-LEA BRISCOE, LL.D., J.P. for the co. Wilts.

The following extract from the author's work, the Fictitious Families, may not be deemed irrelevant here:—

"The Barony of Dudley, at the death, in 1757, of Ferdinando-Dudley Lea, 14th baron, fell into abeyance amongst his lordship's sisters. One of these sisters, Frances, became the wife of Walter Woodcock, Esq., 'Justice Woodcock,' as he was called, to whose descendants Dame Fortune has been most chary in the distribution of her favours. Their dau. Anne, became the wife of William Wilmot, and another dau., Mary, was married to Benjamin Smart. Some seventeen or eighteen years ago, the traveller on the Dudley road, on reaching the toll-gate of Cooper's Bank, and depositing the usual fees of the pike in the hands of that inflexible personage, the toll-bar keeper, little dreamt that the poor man following this lowly occupation was next brother of one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Dudley! But so it was: George Wilmot, the toll-bar keeper of Cooper's Bank, was a descendant of the very Loris Dudley, whose proud castle towered in the distance; and when he died on Christmas day, 1846, his remains were borne from the turnpike-gate to Dudley, and deposited by the ashes of his kindred. One nephew, Daniel-Sinclair Wilmot, filled the office of second clerk of the customs at Bristol, and another, John K. Wilmot (son of his eldest brother, Pynson), at this moment one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Dudley, is residing in an humble station, at No. 1, Cleveland Grove, Mile End.

"At Oatenfield Farm, Halesowen, in Worcestershire, another and a senior co-heir of the barony resides, Joseph Smart, a worthy farmer; and at the town of Halesowen, his only brother, Robert Smart, carries on the business and trade of grazier and butcher.

"Mr. Joseph Smart has in his possession an ancient and curious family record, tracing his descent from the old Lords Dudley, and setting forth his royal line through the Suttons, the Seymours, the Greys, and the Brandons from HENRY VII., and Elizabeth of York. After which comes the following curious inventory:—'An account of jewels and gold rings in the possession of Walter Woodcock, Esq., in an oak chest, at Dovehouse Fields, in the parish of Salop: 1. a mourning ring, with inscription engraved within it, 'Edward, Lord Dudley Ward, obt. 6 Sept. 1731, aged 27;' also three gold ear-rings, apparently diamonds, supposed to have been his said lordship's mother's Lady Dudley Ward, of Dudley Castle, and by her given to her daughter, Frances Ward, who married with William Lea, of the Grange, Halesowen, by whom she had issue;' and then follows the genealogy of her descendants to the present day.

"Where can we find a more striking contrast than this mournful tale of the Barony of Dudley? The history of that famous title speaks in its first chapter of chivalry, warlike achievement, and magnificent hospitality in the ancient castle from which the barony took its name. The last chapter tells the story of the Halesowen farmer, the custom-house clerk, and the toll-bar keeper, all resident within range of that very castle."

SWILLINGTON—BARON SWILLINGTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 3 December, 1326.

Lineage.

Of this family, which assumed its surname from a lordship in the west riding of Yorkshire, was

ADAM DE SWILLINGTON, who, in the times of EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., was in the Scottish wars, and in the latter reign obtained charter for free warren, in all his demesne lands at Swillington, Thorpe-Pyton, and Thorpe o' the Hill, co. York, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 3 December, 1326, but afterwards siding with the Earl of Lancaster against the Spencers, he was fined 1,000 marks. On the accession of EDWARD I., however, matters being changed, that judgment was reversed by parliament, and his lordship marched again into Scotland. Moreover, the next year he had another charter for free warren in his demesne lands, and had summons to parliament, to 5 March, 1328, but nothing further is known of his lordship or his descendants.

SIR THOMAS-RICHARD-SWYNNERTON DYER, Bart.

SYDNEY—BARONS SYDNEY, OF PENSHURST, VISCOUNTS L'ISLE, EARLS LEICESTER.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 May, 1603.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 4 May, 1605.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 2 August, 1618.

Lineage.

This family, anciently seated at Cranleigh, in Surrey, and at Kynghesham, in Sussex, derived its descent from

SIR WILLIAM SYDNEY, chamberlain to King HENRY II. with which monarch he came into England from Anjou. From this Sir William lineally sprang,

NICHOLAS SYDNEY (son of William Sydney, of Stoke D'Abernon), who m. Ann, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Brandon, Knt., cousin of Charles, Duke of Brandon, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM SYDNEY, who in the 3rd HENRY VIII., being then one of the esquires of the king's house, accompanied Thomas, Lord D'Arcy into Spain, for the assistance of the Spaniards against the Moors; and when other persons of rank received the dignity of knighthood at the hands of King FERDINAND, excused himself from partaking thereof. The next year he was captain of one of the ships of war employed against the French, and came into action off the coast of Brest. In the 5th of the same reign, Sir William (then a knight) was a chief commander at the battle of Flodden Field; and the next ensuing year he accompanied the Duke of Suffolk, the Marquess of Dorset, and other persons of distinction to Paris, there to make proof of their skill in arms against the Dauphin of France, and nine other select persons, whom he had chosen for his assistants at those solemn justs, there held in the month of November for all comers, being gentlemen of name and arms. The English noblemen and gentlemen landed at Calais, arrayed in green coats and hoods, that they might not be known. Sir William was subsequently one in the second band of the English at the justs held before the courts of HENRY VIII. and FRANCIS I., on the field of the Cloth of Gold. He was also chamberlain and steward to King HENRY, and in the 15th of that monarch, accompanying the Duke of Suffolk into France, he shared in the glory then acquired by the English arms. After this, on the attainder of Sir Philip Vane, he had a grant of the honour of Peshurst, and manor of Enfield, with the park of Peshurst, and other manors and lands in Kent. Sir William m. Anne, dau. of Hugh Pagenham, Esq., and by her (who d. 22 October, 1544,) had issue,

HENRY (Sir), his successor.

Frances, m. to Thomas Ratcliffe, Earl of Sussex, whom she survived, and founded Sydney-Sussex College, at Cambridge.

Agnes, m. to Sir William Fitz-Williams, Knt.

Mary, m. to Sir William Dorney, Knt., of Ascop.

Lucy, m. to Sir James Harrington, Knt.

He d. in the 7th EDWARD VI., and was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY SYDNEY, K.G., who had been ambassador to France four years before, and the next year was constituted cup-bearer to the king for life. In the 2nd and 3rd PHILIP and MARY, he was made vice-treasurer, and general governor of all the revenues of the crown in Ireland, and he was soon afterwards invested with the temporary government of that kingdom as lord justice during the absence of the lord-deputy, the Earl of Sussex. In the 2nd ELIZABETH he was appointed lord-president of Wales, and in the 5th, sent upon a confidential mission into France. In 1564 (6th ELIZABETH), he was made a knight of the Garter, and in some years afterwards, was thrice constituted lord deputy of Ireland. He d. 1586. This eminent person m. Lady Mary Dudley, dau. of John, Earl of Northumberland, and sister of Robert, Earl of Leicester, by whom he had issue,

PHILIP, the accomplished SIR PHILIP SYDNEY, whom Camden describes as "the great glory of his family, the great hope of mankind, the most lively pattern of virtue, and the glory of mankind." He was a soldier and a scholar, illustrious in letters and in arms, but more illustrious still by his deeds of benevolence and humanity. He was mortally wounded in September 1586, at the battle of Zutphen, in Guelderland, and d. 16 October following. Sir Philip Sydney m. Frances, dau. and heir of Sir Francis Walsingham and by her (who m. 2ndly, Robert, Earl of Essex; and 3rdly, Richard, Earl of Clanricarde,) he left an only dau.,

Elizabeth, m. Roger, 5th Earl of Rutland, and d. s. p.

ROBERT (Sir), of whom presently.

Thomas (Sir), d. s. p.

Mary, m. Henry, Earl of Pembroke, K.G., and d. 25 September, 1621. To this lady Sir Philip Sydney dedicated his "Arctura," and Ben Jonson wrote her epitaph.

The 2nd son,

SIR ROBERT SYDNEY, s. as next heir male upon the death of his elder brother, Sir Philip. This gallant person, like his predecessors, acquired renown in arms, first under his uncle, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, in the Netherlands, and afterwards with Sir Francis Vere, when he shared in the victory achieved at Turnholt, in Brabant, anno 1597. For these services, he was, on the accession of King JAMES I., elevated to the peerage as BARON SYDNEY, of Penshurst, co. Kent, by letters patent, dated 13 May, 1603, and on 24 July, in the same year (it being the day of the King and Queen's coronation), he was appointed lord chamberlain to the queen. The next year he was created VISCOUNT L'ISLE. In 1616 he was installed a knight of the Garter, and raised 2 August, 1618, to the EARLDOM OF LEICESTER, the ceremony of creation being performed in the hall of the bishop's palace at Salisbury. His lordship m. 1st, Barbara, dau. and heir of John Gamage, Esq., of Coyty, Glamorganshire, and had issue,

William (Sir), who d. unm., s. p.

ROBERT (Sir), made knight of the Bath at the creation of Henry, Prince of Wales, s. his father.

Mary, m. to Sir Robert Wroth, Knt.

Elizabeth-Catherine, m. to Sir Lewis Mansel, Bart., of Margam. Philippa, m. to Sir John Hobart, Knt., eldest son of Sir Henry Hobart, Knt., lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, from whom the Earls of Buckinghamshire descend.

Barbara, m. 1st, to Sir Thomas Smythe, afterwards Viscount Strangford; and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Colepepper.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Smith, widow of Sir Thomas Smith, Knt.; he d. in 1626, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR ROBERT SYDNEY, K.B., 2nd Earl of Leicester. This nobleman, who lived to the age of eighty years and eleven months, was esteemed of great learning, observation, and veracity. He m. Lady Dorothy Percy, dau. of Henry, 9th Earl of Northumberland, and had issue, PHILIP, Viscount L'Isle, his successor.

ALGERNON, the celebrated patriot, who suffered death by decapitation on Tower Hill, 7 December, 1683, as a participator in the Rye House Plot. Of this eminent person Burnet writes, "he was too rough and boisterous in his temper to bear contradiction; he seemed to be a Christian, but in a particular form of his own: for Christianity he thought was to be like a divine philosophy of the mind, without all public worship, or any sign of a visible church. Stiff he was in all republican principles, and such an enemy to every thing that looked like monarchy, that he opposed Cromwell after he was made PROTECTOR; but he had studied the history of government in all its branches; had a knowledge of mankind, and of their tempers; and could insinuate himself into people that would hearken to his notions with a wonderful dexterity."

Robert d. in 1674.

HENRY, created Earl of Romney.

Dorothy (Waller's "Sacharissa"), m. 1st, to Henry, Earl of Sunderland, and 2ndly, to Robert Smythe, Esq., of Bound.

Lucy, m. to Sir John Pelham, Bart.

Anne, m. to the Rev. Joseph Cuthbert.

Isabella, m. to Philip, Viscount Strangford.

His lordship d. in 1677, and was s. by his eldest son,

PHILIP SYDNEY, 3rd Earl of Leicester. This nobleman was, in the life-time of his father, a zealous republican, and during the Commonwealth one of the Protector's council, with a salary of £1000 a-year. He had been from his youth trained up a diplomatist, attending on his father to the States-General, and the courts of Denmark and France. His lordship m. Lady Catherine Cecil, dau. of William, Earl of Salisbury, and had issue,

ROBERT, Viscount L'Isle, summoned to parliament in his father's life-time, by writ addressed "ROBERTO SYDNEY, de Penshurst, Clere," 11 July, 1659.

Dorothy, m. to Thomas Cheeke, Esq.

The earl d. in March, 1697-8, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT SYDNEY, 4th Earl of Leicester. His lordship m. Lady Elizabeth Egerton, dau. of John, Earl of Bridgewater, and had issue, PHILIP, Viscount L'Isle, his heir.

John, who s. as 6th earl.

Joseph, 7th earl.

Thomas, who m. Mary, dau. of Sir Robert Reeve, Bart., and left two daus., co-heirs, viz.,

MARY, m. to Sir Brownlow Sherard, Bart. and d. s. p.

ELIZABETH, m. to William Perry, Esq., of Warrington, co. Gloucester. This lady succeeded eventually as sole heiress to Penshurst, and the other estates of the Sydneys. She claimed, in 1782, the Barony of Sydney, of Penshurst, under the presumption that Robert, Earl of Leicester, her grandfather, having been summoned in 1689, in the life-time of his father, in that nobleman's barony, a barony in fee had been created, but the claim was dismissed by the House of Lords. Mrs. Perry left an only dau. and heiress.

ELIZABETH-JANE SYDNEY, who became the 2nd wife of Sir Bysshe Shelley, Bart., of Castle Goring, and had, with junior issue,

JOHN SHELLEY, who assumed, in 1793, the additional surname of SYDNEY, and having inherited the Sydney estates, was created a baronet, as SIR JOHN SHELLEY SYDNEY, of Penshurst Place, Kent; he m. 1799, Henrietta, dau. of Sir Henry Munro, Bart., and dying in 1849, was s. by his son, Sir Philip-Charles Sydney, G.C.H., who had been created a peer as Lord de L'Isle and Dudley, 13 January, 1835. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Harcourt Masters.

Catherine, m. to William Barker, Esq. Frances

His lordship d. in 1702, and was s. by his eldest son,

PHILIP SYDNEY, 5th earl, who m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Sir Robert Reeve, of Thwaite, in Suffolk, but d. without surviving issue, in 1705, when the honours devolved on his brother,

JOHN SYDNEY, 6th earl. This nobleman was constituted in 1717, warden of the Cinque Ports and governor of Dover Castle; and on the revival of the order of the Bath, he was elected one of the knights. His lordship d. unm. in 1737, and was s. by his only surviving brother, JOSCELYNE SYDNEY, 7th earl. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Lewis Thomas, Esq., of Glamorganshire, with which lady his lordship had long pending disputes regarding her misconduct, but he never obtained a divorce. He d. 7 July, 1743, when the estates devolved upon (the dau. of his brother, Colonel Thomas Sydney) his niece, ELIZABETH, who had m. Robert Perry, Esq., and all the estates were conveyed by her dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH-JANE SYDNEY PERRY to the Shelleys; while all the honours of the house of Sydney became EXTINCT; his lordship having d. s. p.*

* By a trial at bar on a writ of right, at Westminster, 11 February, 1782, for Penshurst Place, park, and premises, in the co. Kent, it appeared that this Joscelyne, Earl of Leicester, never was divorced from his wife, the said Elizabeth Thomas; and that she had a child, a son, John Sydney, the demandant at the trial aforesaid; which John, therefore, in the eye of the law, was to be considered as a legitimate person, and as such, well entitled to the inheritance of the honours of the family. But with respect to the inheritance of the estates demanded by him, he failed to establish a better right than the tenant in possession. This (according to the statement at the trial) arose from his avowment, that his father, Earl Joscelyne, was possessed thereof in fee, and not as tenant for life, which was the fact, as opened by the tenant; and further contended, that even had he been possessed thereof in fee, then by his will the earl had given them away to a third party. The event of this trial going to admit the legitimacy of the demandant, embraces an important question, as to the absolute extinction of the honours.—HANKS. The John Sydney, referred to by Hanks, as "the demandant at the trial," m. Elizabeth, dau. of the Rev. John Apsley, D.D., and d. 1812, leaving, 1 PAUL ALGERNON; 2 John-Apsley; 3 Richard-Chase; 4 Philip, d. s. p.; 5 William-Robert (Sir), Knt., of Bournebridge Lodge, Berkshire; 6 James-Waller, and several daughters.

Anne, m. to John Brett, Esq., of Rathdoony, co. Sligo.

His lordship d. 1642, and was s. by his eldest son,

THEOBALD TAAFFE, 2nd viscount; who was advanced to the EARLDOM OF CARLINGFORD, 26 June, 1662. This nobleman espoused zealously the royal cause during the civil wars, and had his estate sequestered by Cromwell. After the Restoration, he obtained, however, a pension of £800 a-year; and upon being advanced in the peerage, received a grant of £4000 a-year, of the rents payable to the crown out of the retrenched lands of adventurers and soldiers during such time as the same remained in the common stock of reprisals, and out of forfeited jointures, mortgages, &c. The earl was s. at his decease, 1677, by his eldest surviving son by his 1st wife, Mary, dau. of Sir Nicholas Whyte, of Leitlip.

NICHOLAS TAAFFE, 2nd earl and 3rd viscount, who fell at the battle of the Boyne, in the command of a regiment of foot under King JAMES, and as he left no issue the honours devolved upon his brother,

FRANCIS TAAFFE, 3rd earl, the celebrated Count Taaffe of the Germanic empire. This nobleman, who was sent in his youth to the city of Olmutz to prosecute his studies, became first, one of the pages of honour to the Emperor FERDINAND, and soon after obtained a captain's commission from Charles, 5th Duke of Lorraine, in his own regiment. He was subsequently chamberlain to the Emperor, a marshal of the empire, and councillor of the state and cabinet. His lordship was so highly esteemed by most of the crowned heads of Europe, that when he succeeded to his hereditary honours, he was exempted from forfeiture by a special clause in the English act of parliament, 1st WILLIAM and MARY; and in the acts passed in Ireland, 9th of the same reign, to hinder the reversion of divers outlawries and attainders, it was provided, that nothing therein contained should extend to attain or convict of high treason, Nicholas, Earl of Carlingford, or his brother, &c., &c. The earl d. s. p. in August, 1704, when the honours devolved upon his nephew.

THEOBALD TAAFFE, 4th earl (son of the Hon. Major John Taaffe, who fell before Londonderry, in the service of King JAMES, by Lady Rose Lambert, dau. of Charles, 1st Earl of Cavan). This nobleman m. Amelia, youngest dau. of Luke, 3rd Earl of Fingall; but d. s. p. in 1733, when the Earldom of Carlingford EXPIRED, while the viscounty and barony passed to his lordship's next heir male, NICHOLAS, Count Taaffe of the Germanic empire, as 6th Viscount Taaffe. JOHN TALBOT, of Richard's Castle, who d. in the 12th RICHARD II., s. p., leaving his sisters, amongst whom the estates were divided, his heirs, viz.,

ELIZABETH, m. to Sir Warine Archdeken, Knt.

PHILIPPA, m. to Sir Matthew Gournay, Knt.

ELEANOR, m.

Lord Talbot d. in 1306, and was s. by his elder son,

GILBERT TALBOT, who was in the expedition made into Scotland in the 26th EDWARD I.; and having been implicated in the murder of Piers Gaveston, obtained a pardon, in the 7th EDWARD II. In the 16th of the same reign, he was constituted governor of the town and castle of Gloucester, but being afterwards engaged in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, against the power of the Spencers, he was compelled, in order to save his life and preserve his estates, to enter into a recognisance to pay £200, and also £2,000 more, with one tun of wine. Upon the accession of EDWARD III., however, that obligation was cancelled. Moreover, being then a banneret, he became so active for the king in all his military affairs, that there was due to him £116 3s. 8d. for the service of himself and his men-at-arms. In the 4th EDWARD III., he was constituted justice of South Wales, and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, in the same year, and from that period to the 17th (1343). His lordship m. Anne, dau. of William Boteler, of Wempe, and dying in 1346, was s. by his son,

RICHARD TALBOT, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 5 June, 1331, to 22 October, 1355, by writ directed to "Ricardo Talbot de Castro Goderich," co. Hereford. This nobleman m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of John Comyn, of Badenoch, by Joane, his wife, sister and co-heir of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke; and in her right, claiming (anno 1331) certain lands in Scotland, and adhering to Edward Balliol, who then preferred pretensions to the crown, would have entered that kingdom by land, but was prevented by King EDWARD III., whose sister, Joane, had been married to David Bruce, the son of ROBERT, King of Scotland. He invaded it, however, by sea, at the head of 300 armed men, and soon after achieved a great victory over the Scots at Gleddesmore; but he was subsequently made prisoner, and had to pay 2,000 marks for his redemption. In the 11th EDWARD III., his lordship was appointed governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed, as also justice there, and of all other the king's lands in Scotland. The same year being a banneret, he had an assignation of £200 of the tenth, then given in parliament, out of the city of Bristol, for his better support in the governorship of Berwick. In four years afterwards he was again in the wars of Scotland, and subsequently (20th EDWARD III.) in the expedition made into France; at which latter period he laid the foundation of the priory of Flanesford, within his lordship of Goderich Castle; and at this time too, he obtained from the king a grant for a prison at Goderich Castle, for punishing malefactors. His lordship d. in 1356, and was s. by his elder son,

GILBERT TALBOT, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 14 August, 1362, to 8 August, 1356. This nobleman served under the Black Prince, in the wars of France; and in the 1st RICHARD II., he was in the king's fleet at sea, with Michael de la Pole, admiral for the north. His lordship m. 1st, Petronille, dau. of James, Earl of Ormonde, by whom he had,

RICHARD, who having m. Ankaret, sister and eventually sole heir of John, Baron Strange, of Blackmere, was summoned to parliament in the lifetime of his father, from 3 March, 1364, to 17 December, 1387, by writ directed to "Ricardo Talbot de Blackmere."

Elizabeth, m. to Henry, Lord Grey de Wilton.

Lord Talbot m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Stafford. He d. in 1387, and was s. by his son,

SIR RICHARD TALBOT, Lord Talbot, of Blackmere, as 4th Baron Talbot, summoned to parliament, in 1387 (the same writ in which he was also designated of "Blackmere"), as TALBOT, of Goderich Castle, and from that period to 1393. His lordship was in the wars of Scotland, and attained the rank of banneret. In the 15th RICHARD II., he succeeded to the lands of the family of Hastings, Earls of Pembroke, derived through his great grandmother, Joane de Valence, sister and co-heir of Aymer, Earl of Pembroke, and wife of John Comyn, of Badenoch. By Ankaret le Strange, the heiress of Blackmere, he had four sons,

GILBERT his successor.

JOHN, of whom hereafter, as successor to the barony.

Richard, archbishop of Dublin.

Thomas, of Wrockwardine, co. Salop.

His lordship d. in 1396, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR GILBERT TALBOT, 5th baron, summoned to parliament, from 25 August, 1404, to October, 1417. This nobleman, as heir to the Earls of Pembroke, claimed to carry the great spurs at the coronation of HENRY V.; soon after which he was constituted justice of Chester, and he was subsequently engaged in the French wars. In the 4th of the same reign his lordship was appointed guardian and captain-general of the Marches of Normandy, and he was likewise a knight of the Garter. He m. 1st, Joan, dau. of Thomas, of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, by whom he had no issue. His lordship m. 2ndly, Beatrix, a Portuguese lady, widow of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, and illegitimate dau., it is stated, of JOHN I., King of Portugal, by whom he had a dau., ANKARET. He d. in 1419, and was s. in the Baronies of Talbot and Strange, of Blackmere, by his dau.,

ANKARET TALBOT, at whose decease, in minority, anno 1431, those honours reverted to her uncle.

SIR JOHN TALBOT, as 6th Baron Talbot, who having m. Maud de Nevill, eldest dau. and co-heir of Thomas, 5th Lord Furnivall, had been summoned to parliament as LORD TALBOT, of Furnival, from 26 October, 1409, to 26 November, 1421. This is the renowned SIR JOHN TALBOT, one of the most illustrious characters in the whole range of English history. In 1412 he was appointed chief justice of Ireland, and in two years afterwards constituted lord lieutenant of the same kingdom. He subsequently distinguished himself in the wars of HENRY V., but his splendid reputation was acquired under the Regent (John Plantagenet, Duke of Bedford, temp. HENRY VI.), when his name alone became terrible to the soldiers of France, owing to the numerous victories he had achieved. His lordship was attacked, however, by the Maid of Orleans, near Patay, in 1429, when, his army being entirely routed, he was taken prisoner. This defeat of Lord Talbot was followed by the loss of divers places of importance to the English. His lordship was detained in captivity for no less than four years, but obtained at length his freedom by the payment of a large sum of money, and in exchange for Ambrose de Lore, an eminent captain of the French. Again taking the field, and again becoming renowned for his triumphs, he was granted, in consideration of those eminent services, 20 May, 1442, the EARLDOM OF SHREWSBURY, "nomen et honorem comitis Salop." After this, we find him reconstituted lord lieutenant of Ireland, and made a peer of that kingdom (anno 1446), as Earl of Waterford, having at the same time the city of Waterford, with the castles, honour, land, and Barony of Dungarvan granted to him, and the heirs male of his body, as well as the great office of Lord High Steward or Great Seneschal of Ireland. In a few weeks afterwards, his son, Sir John Talbot, was appointed lord chancellor of that kingdom. His lordship was now far advanced in life, but the English interests declining in France, he was once more induced to place himself at the head of the army there, and his courage and conduct restored for some time, at least, its glory. He was appointed lieutenant of the Duchy of Aquitaine, having under him as captains of his men-at-arms and archers, his son, John Talbot, Viscount L'Isle, Sir John Hungerford, Lord Molineux, Sir Roger Camoys, Sir John L'Isle, and John Beaufort, the bastard of Somerset. Marching immediately to the place of his government he took the city of Bordeaux, and placed a garrison in it; and thence proceeded to the relief of Chastillon, where an engagement with the French army ensued, which terminated in the total defeat of the English, and the death of their gallant general, who was killed by a cannon ball. Thus fell sword in hand John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, at the great age of eighty, 20 July, 1453 (Eng. p. m.), after having won no less than forty pitched battles, or important encounters. His remains were conveyed to England, and interred at Whitchurch, co. Salop, where a noble monument was erected in the south wall of the chancel, with this epitaph:

"Orate pro anima prenobilis domini, domini
"Johannis Talbot, quondam Comitis Salopie, domini
"Furnivall, domini Verlon, domini Strange de
"Blackmere, et Marescalli Francie, qui obiit in
"Beilo apud Burdeus, vii Julii, MCCCCLIII."

By the heiress of Furnivall, his lordship had issue,

Thomas, who d. in France, v. p.

JOHN, his successor, 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury, K.G.

Christopher (Sir).

The earl m. 2ndly, the Lady Margaret Beauchamp, dau. and co-heir of Richard, Ea 1 of Warwick, and had,

JOHN, created Baron and Viscount L'Isle (see that dignity).

Humphrey (Sir), Marshal of Calais, d. s. p. in 1492.

JAMES (Sir), of Penyard, Herts.

Joane, m. to James, 1st Lord Berkeley.

Elizabeth, m. to John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

At the period of his lordship's advancement to the Earldom of Shrewsbury, the Barony of Talbot, with those of Strange, of Blackmere, and Furnivall merged in that dignity, and so continued until the decease of

GILBERT TALBOT, 7th Earl of Shrewsbury, and 12th Baron Talbot, in 1626, when all three fell into ABEYANCE amongst his daus. and co-heirs, viz.,

Mary, m. to William, 3rd Earl of Pembroke, and d. s. p.

Elizabeth, m. to Henry Grey, 8th Earl of Kent, and d. s. p.

ALATHEA, m. to Thomas Howard, who had been restored in 1603 to the Earldoms of Arundel and Surrey, and created Earl Marshal in 1621.

At the decease of Mary and Elizabeth, the two elder co-heirs, as stated above, without issue, the ABEYANCE of the Baronies of Talbot, Strange, and Furnivall terminate, and those dignities then vested in the 3rd co-heir, ALATHEA, widow of Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, and thenceforward they merged in the Earldom of Arundel, and Dukedom of Norfolk, until the decease of

EDWARD HOWARD, 9th Duke of Norfolk, in 1777, s. p., when the Baronies of Talbot, Strange, of Blackmere, and Furnival, fell again into ABEYANCE between his grace's nieces, the two daus. and co-heirs of his brother, Philip Howard, Esq., namely, WINIFREDE HOWARD, who m. William, Lord Stourton.

ANNE HOWARD, who m. Robert-Edward, Lord Petre.

And so the said baronies remain between the present Lords Stourton and Petre.

TALBOT—BARON L'ISLE, OF KINGSTON L'ISLE, CO. BERKS, VISCOUNT L'ISLE.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 26 July, 1443.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 30 October, 1452.

Lineage.

The Hon. JOHN TALBOT, eldest son of John Talbot, the 1st and great Earl of Shrewsbury, by his 2nd wife, the Lady Margaret Beauchamp, dau. and co-heir of Richard, 12th Earl of Warwick, and great grand-dau. of Warine, 2nd Baron L'Isle (see L'Isle, Barons L'Isle), was created BARON L'ISLE, of Kingston L'Isle, co. Berks, by patent,* dated 26 July, 1443, limiting the dignity to the said John and his heirs and assigns for ever, being tenants of the manor of Kingston L'Isle, and was advanced to the dignity of VISCOUNT L'ISLE, 30 October, 1452. This nobleman, who served under his gallant father in France, was slain with that heroic personage at Chaatillon, anno 1453. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of Sir John or Sir Thomas Chedder, of Chedder, co. Somerset, and widow of Richard Stafford, Esq., and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Edward Grey (2nd son of Edward, Lord Ferrers, of Groby), who was created Viscount L'Isle (see Grey, Viscount L'Isle).

Margaret, m. to Sir George Vere, Knt., and d. s. p.

The viscount was s. by his son,

THOMAS TALBOT, 2nd Baron and Viscount L'Isle. This nobleman having a great contest with William, Lord Berkeley, of Berkeley Castle, concerning certain lands which he claimed in right of his grandmother, Margaret Beauchamp, Countess of Shrewsbury, lost his life by an arrow shot through the mouth, in a skirmish between the parties, at Wotton-under-Edge, in Gloucestershire, 20 March, 1469. His lordship m. Lady Margaret Herbert, dau. of William, Earl of Pembroke, but as he left no issue, his sisters became his co-heirs. The Viscounty of L'Isle EXPIRED at his lordship's decease. "But," says Nicolas, "it is a very doubtful point into what state the barony then fell. In the third report of the lords' committee on the dignity of a peer of the realm, the case is most ably stated, and to it he (Nicolas) refers in support of the following conclusions: first, that the patent to John Talbot, in 1443, did not (though evidently intended so to do) affect the barony created by the writ to Gerard L'Isle, in 31st EDWARD III., and which, consequently, still remained in abeyance, but created a new barony, descendible according to the provisions of the patent: and secondly, with respect to the extremely difficult question, 'in whom is that barony now vested?' it is to be observed that,

* This patent, NICOLAS, in his Synopsis, terms one of the most extraordinary on record—and he proceeds. "The patent recites as a fact, that 'Warine de L'Isle, and his ancestors, by reason of the lordship and manor of Kingston L'Isle, had, from time whereof the memory of man was not to the contrary, the name and dignity of Baron and Lord L'Isle, and by that name had sat in parliament, &c., as other barons of the realm had;' an assertion satisfactorily proved by the lords' committee on the dignity of a peer of the realm, in their third report, to have been entirely without foundation; for not only had the said manor never been held in capite by the crown, but a period of above sixty years had elapsed, viz., from 23rd EDWARD I. to 31st EDWARD III., after writs of summons were generally issued, before the family of L'Isle, tenants of the manor of L'Isle, were ever summoned to parliament. Many arguments might be adduced to support the conclusion stated in the text relative to this dignity, but they are rendered useless, by the statement of the case in the report of the Lords' committee just cited, page 191, et seq., and by the opinions of the great legal authorities, Coke and Blackstone. It is therefore sufficient to remark, that this singular creation probably arose from the powerful influence possessed by the Earl of Shrewsbury, in a reign when more anomalies connected with dignities are to be found than under any preceding or subsequent monarch."

according to the high authority of Lord Chief Justice Coke and of Justice Blackstone, John Talbot, and his heirs, under the patent, had only a base or qualified fee in that dignity, and 'that the instant he or his heirs quitted the seignior of this manor the dignity was at an end.' On the death of Thomas, 2nd viscount (continues Nicolas), in 1469, without issue, his two sisters became his heirs, viz., Margaret, the wife of Sir George Vere, Knt., and Elizabeth, Lady Grey, when it is presumed the Barony of L'Isle became suspended, for although the said Elizabeth was possessed of the manor, she was not sole heir of John Talbot, her father, and consequently had not the two constituent qualifications necessary to entitle her to the dignity. On the death of her sister, Lady Vere, however, s. p., she appears to have become legally seized of the barony, as is recited in the patent granted to her husband."

TALBOT—DUKE OF SHREWSBURY.

By Letters Patent, dated 30 April, 1694.

Lineage.

CHARLES TALBOT, Lord Talbot, b. 24 July, 1660, s. his father as 12th Earl of Shrewsbury, 16 March, 1667, and, in 1681, was constituted lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the co. Stafford, but was dismissed from both offices by King JAMES II. At the coronation of that monarch, the earl bore the Curtance or pointless sword; and, the same year, was appointed colonel of the 6th regiment of horse: but disgusted with the proceedings of the court he resigned soon after his military rank, and went over to the Prince of Orange, to whom he tendered his purse and sword: Burnet states that Lord Shrewsbury was one of the nobles in whom the Prince placed the utmost confidence, and by whose advice he was upon all occasions principally guided. Thus promoting the Revolution, when that measure was accomplished by the elevation of WILLIAM and MARY to the throne, his lordship was immediately sworn of the privy council, and made principal secretary of state. In March, 1694, he was elected a knight of the Garter, and the next month created Marquess of Alton, and DUKE OF SHREWSBURY. In 1695 and 1697 his grace was one of the lords justices during the temporary absences of the king; and in 1699 he resigned the seals as secretary of state, but was constituted soon after lord chamberlain of the household—an office which he subsequently held in the reign of Queen ANNE; and was also (anno 1713) appointed by her Majesty lord lieutenant of Ireland. On the accession of King GEORGE I. the duke was made groom of the stole and privy purse, and sworn a member of the new privy council. He was subsequently declared lord chamberlain of his Majesty's household, while his duchess was appointed one of the ladies of the bedchamber to Caroline, Princess of Wales. His grace m. Adelhida, dau. of the Marquess of Pallotti, in Italy, descended maternally from Sir Robert Dudley, son of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, the celebrated favourite of Queen ELIZABETH, but d. s. p. 1 February, 1717-18, when the honours he had inherited passed to the heir-at-law, and the Marquessate of Alton and Dukedom of Shrewsbury became EXTINCT.

This, the great Duke of Shrewsbury, is thus described by Macaulay. "His person was pleasing, his temper singularly sweet, his parts such as, if he had been born in a humble rank, might well have raised him to civil greatness. All these advantages he had so improved that, before he was of age, he was allowed to be one of the finest gentlemen and finest scholars of his time."

COLONEL RICHARD TALBOT (the youngest son), was by patent, dated 20 June, 1686, created Baron of Talbot's-town, Viscount of Baltinglass, and EARL TYRCONNELL, with remainder in tail male to his nephews; and subsequently, 20 March, 1689, advanced to the dignity of MARQUESS and DUKE OF TYRCONNELL, by JAMES II., in whose service as chief governor of Ireland he died, and for his attachment to whom, his honours were attainted in 1691. "Of Richard Talbot, Duke of Tyrconnell (says an eloquent writer), much ill has been written, and more believed; but his history, like that of his unfortunate country, has only been written by the pen of party, steeped in gall, and copied servilely from the pages of prejudice by the lame historians of modern times, more anxious for authority than authenticity. Two qualities he possessed in an eminent degree—wit and valour; and if to gifts so brilliant and so Irish be joined devotion to his country, and fidelity to the unfortunate and fated family with whose exile he began life, and with whose ruin he finished it, it cannot be denied that in his character the elements of evil were mixed with much great and striking good. Under happier circumstances, the good might have predominated, and he whose deeds are held even by his own family in such right estimation, might have shed a lustre on his race by those talents and heroism which gave force to his passions and celebrity to his errors." His grace m. Frances (the "Belle Jenyns" of the court of CHARLES II.) eldest dau. and co-heir of Richard Jenyns, Esq., of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire, widow of George, Count Hamilton, and sister to Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough. Her ladyship, after the duke's death, was permitted to erect a house, still standing, in King-street, Dublin, as a nunnery for poor Clares, and in this obscure retirement, burying all the attractions and graces which once so adorned the court of England, she d. at the age of ninety-two, and was interred in St. Patrick's Cathedral, 9 March, 1730. By Tyrconnell she had two daus., of whom Charlotte, was m. to the Prince de Vintimiglia, and had issue two daus., the one m. to M. Verac, and the other to the Prince Belmonte; but both dying s. p., Richard-Wogan Talbot, Baron Talbot de Malahide, became heir-general to the Duke of Tyrconnell, as descendant and sole heir of FRANCES, the duke's niece.

TALBOYS—BARON TALBOYS.

By Writ of Summons, dated in 1529.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE KYME, Baron Kyme, son of Philip, Baron de Kyme, d. in 1338, s. p., when his estates, including the lordship of Kyme, in Lincolnshire, devolved upon his sister,

LUCY DE KYME, who had m. Robert de Umfravill, Earl of Angus, and had issue,

GILBERT, Earl of Angus, who d. 1391, leaving an only son,

ROBERT, d. s. p., v. p.

Elizabeth, who m. Gilbert Burdon or Baradon, and had a dau. and heir,

ELEANOR or ELIZABETH BARADON.

This

ELEANOR or ELIZABETH BARADON, b. 1341, inherited Kyme and the other lands through her mother, and married HENRY TALBOYS (æt. thirty, A.D. 1365): from them lineally descended,

SIR GEORGE TALBOYS (æt. twenty-eight, A.D. 1495), who, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir William Gascoigne, had issue,

GILBERT, of whom presently.

William, a priest, 33rd HENRY VIII.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Christopher Willoughby, Knt.

Cecilia, m. 1st, to William Ingleby, Esq., of Ripley, co. York, and 2ndly, to John Torney, Esq., of Kainely.

Anne, m. 1st, to Sir Edward Dymoke, Knt., and 2ndly, to Sir Robert Carr, Knt.

Sir George d. 21 September, 1538, and was s. by his son,

GILBERT TALBOYS, of Kyme, who was summoned to parliament as BARON TALBOYS, of Kyme, by King HENRY VIII., in 1536. His lordship m. Elizabeth,* dau. of Sir John Blount, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Edward Clinton, 1st Earl of Lincoln,) he had two sons, George and Robert, who both d. s. p., s. p., and an only dau.,

ELIZABETH TALBOYS, who m. 1st, Thomas Wimbish, Esq., and 2ndly, Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick, but had no issue.

At the decease of his lordship in 1580, the barony devolved upon his dau.,

ELIZABETH WIMBISH, and her husband, Mr. Wimbish, claimed the dignity jure uxoris, when it was solemnly decided, in the presence of King HENRY VIII., "That no man, husband of a baroness, should use the title of her dignity, until he had a child by her, whereby he should become tenant by the courtesy of her barony." Her ladyship, as stated above, m. 2ndly, the Earl of Warwick, but d. s. p., when the Barony of Talboys became extinct; while the estates passed to the heirs general, and in the division the manor of Kyme fell to the Dymokes, of Scrivelsby, co. Lincoln, from whom, after a considerable time, it was sold to strangers.

Arms—Arg., a saltier, gu., on a chief of the 2nd, three escallopes of the 1st.

TATTESHALL—BARONS TATTESHALL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

Amongst the companions in arms of the CONQUEROR, were two staunch friends, and as Dugdale calls them, sworn brothers in war, but not otherwise allied,

EUDO and PINSON, on whom, in requital of their gallant services, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR conferred large grants of land, whereof Tatteshall, with the hamlet of Thorpe, and town of Kirkeby, co. Lincoln, were a part; Eudo to hold his proportion of the king, and Pinson his of St. Cuthbert, of Durham. The former,

EUDO, seated himself at Tatteshall, and from him lineally descended,

ROBERT DE Tatteshall, who, in the 10th HENRY III., had custody of Bolsover Castle, and the next year was governor of that of Lincoln. In four years afterwards he had license to build a castle at his manor of Tatteshall. This feudal lord m. 1st, Amabil, dau. and eventual co-heir of William de Albini, Earl of Arundel and Sussex, with whom he acquired the castle and manor of Buckenham, in Norfolk. He m. 2ndly, a dau. of John de Grey, and had with her the manor of Scondebury, Berks, held of the king by serjeanty, viz., the service of falconry. He d. in 1249, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE TATTESHALL, who, in the 28th HENRY III., on levying the aid for making the king's eldest son knight, paid £50 for the twenty-five knights' fees, which he held, and in the 42nd of the same reign, received command to attend the king at Chester, well fitted with horse and arms, to oppose the incursions of the Welsh. In the baronial wars, Robert de Tatteshall, sided at first with the king, and was in the royal army at the battle of Lewes, but afterwards joining the opposite party, he fought at the battle of Evesham. In the reign of EDWARD I., he became, however, eminently distinguished in the Welsh, Scotch, and French wars, and was summoned to parliament as BARON TATTESHALL, from 24 June, 1295, to 26 August, 1296. His lordship m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of Ralph Fitz-Ralph, feudal Lord of Middleham, co. York, by whom he acquired a considerable accession of property, and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

Emma, m. to Sir Osbert de Cayly, and had issue,

Sir Thomas Cayly, Lord of Buckenham, in right of his mother.

* This lady, after the death of her 1st husband, had an illegitimate child by King HENRY VIII., HENRY FITZROY, created DUKE OF RICHMOND.

Joan, m. to Sir Robert Driby, and left a dau. and heiress,
 Alice, m. to Sir William Bernake, whose dau., and the eventual heiress of her brother, Maud Bernake, m. Sir Ralph de Cromwell.
 Isabel, m. to Sir John Orreby.

The baron d. in 1272, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE TATTESHALL, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 6 February, 1299, to 13 September, 1302. This nobleman is supposed, on strong presumptive evidence, to have had a younger brother John de Tatteshall, ancestor of the Tatteshalls of Wanstede and Little Waltham, Essex, and of Finchampstead, Berks. The 2nd Lord Tatteshall served in the Scotch and French wars, and dying in 1303, was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE TATTESHALL, 3rd baron, at whose decease in minority, the barony fell into ABEYANCE, between Sir Thomas Cayly, son of Emma Tatteshall, by Sir Osbert de Cailly.

Joan de Tatteshall, m. to Sir Robert Driby.

Isabel de Tatteshall, m. to Sir John Orreby.

As it still continues with their descendants, while the estates passed thus:

To Sir Thomas Cayly, the castle of Buckenham, with a fourth part of that manor, and half the parks thereunto belonging, and other lands in co. Norfolk; from this Sir Thomas Cayly's uncle, Sir Hugo de Cayly of Owhy, the existing Baronets Cayly, of Brompton, co. York, deduce their descent.

To Lady Driby, the castle and manor of Tatteshall, and other estates in co. Lincoln.

To Lady Orreby, the manor of Tybenham, and a part of the manor of Buckenham, with other lands in co. Norfolk.

Arms—Chequy, or and gu., a chief, ermine.

THORPE—BARON THORPE.

Lineage.

JOHN DE THORPE was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 11 June, 1309, to 10 October, 1325. Dugdale does not mention this Baron, but Banks endeavours to identify him with John de Thorpe, Lord of Creke, co. Norfolk, who left issue.

THORPE—BARON THORPE.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE THORPE was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 16 July, 1381, to 12 September, 1390. Nothing further, with any degree of accuracy, is known of this nobleman, or his descendants. He is not mentioned at all by Dugdale.

THWENG—BARONS THWENG.

By Writ of Summons, dated 22 February, 1307.

Lineage.

Of this family, anciently Lords of Kilton Castle, in Yorkshire, was

SIR ROBERT DE THWENG, who, in the 22nd HENRY III., was deputed by the other barons to repair to Rome, and to lay at the foot of the pontifical throne, a complaint of the nobles of England, regarding some encroachment upon their ecclesiastical rights, by the holy see. He was s. by his son,

MARMADUKE DE THWENG. This feudal lord had a military summons to march into Scotland, 42nd HENRY III., when the Scots had risen in rebellion against their king, the son-in-law of the English monarch. He m. Emma, sister and heir of Duncan Darell, and left a son,

ROBERT DE THWENG, Lord of Kilton, who m. the widow of Sir John de Oketon, and was s. by his eldest son,

MARMADUKE DE THWENG, Lord of Kilton, who m. Lucia, one of the sisters and co-heirs of Peter de Brus, of Skelton (see Bruce, of Annandale), and acquired thereby considerable estates in the co. York. In the 22nd EDWARD I., this Marmaduke had summons amongst the other great men of that time, to repair with all speed to the king, and to afford him his advice touching the most important affairs of the realm. He had subsequently a military summons to march against the French. He had three sons, viz.,

- I. ROBERT, his heir.
- II. MARMADUKE, successor to his brother.
- III. EDWARD, who m. Alice, dau. and heir of Walter Helmesley, of Over Helmesley, co. York, and became ancestor of the THWENGs of Upper Helmesley, whose male representative, MARMADUKE THWENG, Esq., of Upper Helmesley, b. in 1560, left a dau. and heiress, MARGERY, m. 1st, to George Wilmer, Esq., of Stratford-le-Bow; and 2ndly, to the Hon. Henry Fairfax.

The eldest son,

ROBERT DE THWENG, Lord of Kilton, left an only dau.,

LUCY, who m. 1st, William le Latimer, jun., Baron Latimer (see that title), but being divorced from him, as there mentioned, m. 2ndly, Bartholomew de Fancourt; and 3rdly, Robert de Everingham.

He was s. at his decease by his brother, as next heir male,

MARMADUKE DE THWENG, one of the most eminent soldiers of the period in which he lived, who, being highly distinguished in the wars of Scotland, was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 22 February, 1307, to 18 September, 1322. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of William de Ros, of Igmanthorpe, co. York, and had issue,

- I. WILLIAM, his successor.
- II. ROBERT, } both priests, successively barons.
- III. THOMAS, }
- I. LUCIA m. to Sir Robert de Lumley, and her son,

SIR MARMADUKE DE LUMLEY, assumed the arms of Thweng. His son,

SIR RALPH DE LUMLEY, was summoned to parliament as BARON LUMLEY, in 1344, but, on his attainder, his honours expired. The attainder was, however, repealed in the reign of EDWARD IV. (see LUMLEY).

- II. MARGARET, m. to Sir Robert de Hilton, Knt.
- III. KATHERINE, m. to Sir Ralph D'Aubenie

His lordship d. in 1323, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE THWENG, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament 30 December, 1324. He m. Katherine, dau. of Thomas, Lord Furnival, of Hallamshire, and dying s.p. in 1341, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE THWENG, who, doing homage in the same year, had livery of his lands. This baron was in holy orders, and d. of course unm. in 1344, when he was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE THWENG, also a clergyman. This baron being rector of the church at Lytham, founded a chantry of twelve priests and four clerks, in the parochial church there, to pray for the good estate of himself, and Henri, Lord Percy, and for the souls of their ancestors; likewise for the souls of Robert de Thweng, and Maud, his wife; Marmaduke de Thweng, and Lucy, his wife, &c., &c. His lordship d. in 1374, when his estates devolved upon the heirs of his sisters, and the Barony of Thweng fell into ABEYANCE amongst them, as it still continues with their representatives.

TIBETOT—BARONS TIBETOT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 10 March, 1308.

Lineage.

In the 1st year of HENRY III.,

HENRY DE TIBETOT, being in arms for the king, had a grant in conjunction with Thomas Bortetel, of the possessions lying in the cos. York and Lincoln, of Adam Painel, who fought on the other side, and dying in the 34th of the same reign, was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE TIBETOT, who, in the 50th HENRY III., was made governor of the castle of Porchester, and having attended Prince Edward to the Holy Land, was high in favour, after he had ascended the throne, as EDWARD I., being then constituted governor of Nottingham Castle, justice of South Wales, and governor of the castles of Carmarthen and Cardigan. In the 13th of the same reign, he had a grant from John, the son of Gerard de Rodes, to himself, his wife, and his son, in fee, of the manors of Langar and Berneston, in Nottinghamshire. In the 30th, being then the king's lieutenant for Wales, he fought and defeated Rees ap Meredith, in a great battle, wherein 4,000 Welshmen were slain, and Rees himself having been made prisoner, was conveyed to York, and there executed. Robert de Tibetot was subsequently in the wars of Gascony and Scotland. He m. Eve, dau. (or granddau.) of Pain de Chaworth, and had issue,

PAIN, his successor.

Hawyse, m. to John Clavering, son of Robert Fitz-Roger.

Eve, m. to Robert, son of Robert de Tatshall.

He d. in the 26th EDWARD I., and was s. by his son,

PAIN DE TIBETOT, who, serving in the Scottish wars, during the latter part of the reign of EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament as a Baron, upon the accession of EDWARD II., from 10 March, 1308, to 26 November, 1313. He was subsequently justice of the forests beyond Trent, and governor of the castle of Northampton. His lordship, who had made several campaigns into Scotland, fell eventually at the battle of Strivelin, anno 1314. He m. Agnes, dau. of William de Ros, of Hamlake, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE TIBETOT, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament, from 1 April, 1335, to 20 January, 1366. This nobleman was in the wars of France and Scotland, and was constituted governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed in the 20th EDWARD III. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Bartholomew, Lord Badlesmere, and co-heir of her brother, Giles, Lord Badlesmere, by whom he acquired a great accession of landed property (including Castlecombe, Wilts) and had issue,

- I. ROBERT, his successor.
- II. John, d. s.p.

The 2nd Lord Tibetot m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Robert Aspill, and widow of Sir Thomas Wauton, and had by her a son, Pain (Sir), from whom the EARLS OF WORCESTER of this family descended.

He d. in 1367, and was s. by his elder son,

ROBERT DE TIBETOT, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament, from 24 February, 1368, to 8 January, 1371. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of William Deincourt, Lord Deincourt, and by her (who m. 2ndly, John Cheyne) had issue, MARGARET (who inherited Langar, Notts), m. to Roger, 2nd Lord Scrope, of Bolton: the heir-general of this Margaret is HENRY-JAMES JONES, Esq.

MILICENT (who inherited the manors of Castlecombe, Wilts, and Oxenden, Gloucestershire), m. to Stephen le Scrope, brother of the above Roger: the heir-general of this co-heiress is EMMA PHIPPS, wife of GEORGE-POULETT SCROPE, Esq., of Castlecombe, Wilts, and only child of the late William Scrope, Esq., of Castlecombe.

ELIZABETH (who inherited Nettledsted, co. Suffolk), m. to Philip le Despencer, the younger: the heir-general of this co-heiress, Elizabeth, is LORD WENTWORTH.

Lord Tibetot d. in 1372, when his lands devolved upon his dau. as co-heiress, and in the division thereof, Langar fell to the eldest (and was conveyed by her to the SCROPE, whence it passed through an illegitimate dau. of Emanuel Scrope, Earl of Sunderland, to the family of HOWE), Castlecombe devolved on the second, and the manor of Nettledsted fell to the Despenchers, from whom it passed by marriage to the Wentworths, afterwards summoned to parliament under the title of "Wentworth of Nettledsted." The Barony of Tibetot, or Tiptoft, fell into ABEYANCE amongst these three co-heiresses of Robert, 3rd Lord Tibetot, as it still continues with their representatives.

Arms—Arg., a saltier engrailed, gu.

TIBETOT, OR TIPTOFT—BARONS TIBETOT, OR TIPTOFT, EARLS OF WORCESTER.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 7 January, 1426.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 16 July, 1449.

Lineage.

SIR PAIN DE TIBETOT, youngest son of John, 2nd Lord Tibetot, m. Agnes, sister of Sir John Wrothe, Knt., of Enfield, Middlesex, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE TIPTOFT, who, in the 1st HENRY IV., being retained in the service of that king, during his life, had, in consideration thereof, a grant of 100 marks per annum, payable out of the issues of the co. Cambridge; and in six years afterwards, upon the attainder of Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marshal and Nottingham, had, in conjunction with Ralph de Rochford, a grant from the king, of all the apparel pertaining to the body of that earl, and all his harness, for peace and war, as well for great horses called coursers, as saddles for tilts and tournaments. In the 8th of the same reign, upon the rebellion and forfeiture of Owen Glendower, he obtained all the lands of Rhys ap Griffith (an adherent to Owen), lying within the principality of South Wales, and the same year he was constituted chief butler of England. He was, subsequently, made treasurer of the household, and in the reign of HENRY V. he was seneschal of Aquitaine, president of the king's exchequer in Normandy, and treasurer of that duchy. In the 3rd HENRY VI., he was appointed chief steward of the king's castles and lordships throughout Wales and the Marches, and the next year he had summons to parliament as a Baron. (Dugdale says he bore the title of Lord Tiptoft and Powys, but he was never summoned by any other writ than that addressed "Johanni Tiptoft, Chl'r.") His lordship m. 1st, Philippa, dau. of Sir John Talbot, and sister and co-heir of Sir John Talbot, of Richard's Castle, co. Hereford, Knt., and widow of Sir Matthew de Gournay, Knt., but by her had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Joyce, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Edward Cheriton, Lord Powys, by whom he acquired a considerable estate, and had issue,

John, his successor.

Philippa, m. to Thomas, Lord Ros; one of the heirs-general of this Philippa, is the present LORD DE ROS.

Joune, m. to Sir Edmund Ingoldthorpe (refer to Neville, Marquess of Montacute, for the co-heirs of this Joune).

Joyce, m. to Edmund Sutton, son and heir-apparent of John, Lord Dudley (see SUTTON).

Lord Tiptoft d. in 1443, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE TIPTOFT, 2nd baron, who was created just as he had attained majority, 16 July, 1449, EARL OF WORCESTER. In 1457 his lordship was lord deputy of Ireland, and in the 1st EDWARD IV. he was constituted justice of North Wales for life. He was soon after made constable of the Tower of London, and the next year, being then treasurer of the exchequer, he assisted the king at the siege of Bamburgh Castle, held at the time by the Duke of Somerset, and other Lancastrians. His next great appointment was that of chancellor of Ireland, and in the 7th of the same reign being deputy of that kingdom to George, Duke of Clarence, he resided there for the protection of the realm. In three years afterwards he was constituted lieutenant of Ireland; as also constable of England, and again treasurer of the exchequer. At this time on his coming to Southampton, the king caused him to sit in judgment upon several of the Lancastrian party, who had then been made prisoners at sea, and the execution of twenty of those persons followed. Besides all this, it is further memorable of this nobleman, that having been bred a student at Balliol College, Oxford, and attained to an eminent degree in learning, he went to Jerusalem, and sojourned there for some time, whence he travelled into other countries, and returning through Italy, proceeded to Rome, for the express purpose of visiting the library at the Vatican. Here he made, it is said, so eloquent an oration to Pope Pius II., that it drew tears from the eyes of his holiness. His lordship translated into English Publius Cornelius and Caius Flaminius; and wrote several learned Tracts, of which Bale makes mention. In Walpole's Royal and Noble Authors, he is also noticed with high commendation. Being a staunch Yorkist, the earl, upon the temporary restoration of HENRY VI., was placed in danger, and forced to conceal himself from his enemies, but being at length found in the upper branches of a high tree, he was conveyed to London, and being adjudged to suffer death, was beheaded on Tower Hill, anno 1470, when all his honours became FORFEITED. His lordship m. 1st, Cecily, dau. of Richard, Earl of Salisbury, and widow of Henry Beauchamp, Duke of Warwick, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Greyndour, by whom he had a son, John, who d. in infancy. He m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Hopton, Esq., and widow of Sir Roger Corbet, Knt., of Moreton Corbet, co. Salop, by whom he had an only son,

EDWARD DE TIPTOFT, at whose decease W.M., in 1485, the Earldom of Worcester became EXTINCT, while the Barony of Tiptoft fell into ABEYANCE amongst his aunts (see children of the 1st lord), as it still continues with their representatives.

TICHBORNE—BARON FERRARD.

By Letters Patent, dated 26 September, 1715.

Lineage.

SIR HENRY TICHBORNE (4th son of Sir Benjamin Tichborne, 1st Baronet, of Tichborne, Hants), b. 1581, governor of the castle of Lifford, was knighted by King JAMES I. at Tichborne, 29 August, 1623; and being appointed, at the outbreak of the rebellion of 1641, to a command in Ireland, he gained great renown by his successful defence of the town of Drogheda. In consideration of these services, he was sworn of the privy council, and 12 May, 1642, made one of the lords justices of Ireland, in the place of Sir William Parsons. Lord Clarendon refers to the appointment in these words:—"Sir Harry Tichborne being a man of so excellent a fame, that though the parliament was heartily angry at the removal of the other, and knew this would never be brought to serve their turn, yet they had nothing to object against him." By King CHARLES II., Sir Henry was constituted field-marshal of his forces in Ireland, which post he held till his death, 1667, at the age of eighty-five. He was buried at Drogheda. He m. Jane, dau. of Sir Robert Newcomen, Bart., and by her (who d. about 1664) he had five sons and three daus., viz.,

- I. BENJAMIN, a captain of horse in the service of CHARLES I., killed by the rebels at Belruddery, co. Dublin, in the twenty-first year of his age.
- II. WILLIAM, his successor.
- III. Richard, major of the horse-guards in Ireland, d. W.M.

TOUCHET—BARON TOUCHET.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

WILLIAM TOUCHET, supposed to have been a kinsman of the Lords Audley (although the arms he bore were different), having distinguished himself in the wars in Gascony and Scotland, was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 3 November, 1306, but of his lordship nothing further is recorded.

TOUCHET—EARLS OF CASTLEHAVEN.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 September, 1616.

Lineage.

JAMES, THE 4th LORD AUDELEY, was twice married, 1st to Joan, dau. of Roger Mortimer, Earl of March; and 2ndly, to Isabella, dau. of William Malbank. By his 1st wife he had a son, Nicholas Audeley, who s. him as Lord Audeley, and two daus., Joan and Margaret. Margaret, m. Sir Roger Hillary, and survived her brother; and Joan, m. Sir John Touchet, and d. in the lifetime of her brother, leaving her grandson, John Touchet, her heir. James, Lord Audeley, had issue by Isabella, his 2nd wife, a son, Thomas Audeley, who d. s. p. 24 January, 1385, and an only dau., Margaret, who m. Fulk, Lord FitzWarine. Lady FitzWarine d. in the lifetime of her brother, Nicholas, leaving her grandson, Fulk, Lord FitzWarine, her heir. James, the 4th Lord Audeley, d. in April, in the 9th RICHARD II., 1396, and was s. by his only son, Nicholas, the 5th Lord Audeley. Nicholas, the 5th Lord Audeley d. s. p. in July, in the 15th RICHARD II., 1392. His surviving sister, Dame Margaret Hillary, and his grandnephew John Touchet, were his heirs of the whole blood, and the said Dame Margaret Hillary and John Touchet together with Fulk, Lord FitzWarine were the heirs of line, and the heirs of James, Lord Audeley, and his ancestors Lords Audeley, and the Barony of Audeley fell into ABEYANCE between the said Dame Margaret Hillary, John Touchet, and Fulk, Lord FitzWarine. The manor of Heleigh and other estates had been entailed upon Nicholas, the 3rd Lord Audeley, the father of James, the 4th Lord Audeley, and the heirs of his body, and upon the decease of Nicholas, the 5th Lord Audeley they descended in purparty upon Dame Margaret Hillary, John Touchet, and Fulk, Lord FitzWarine. John Touchet was twenty years of age, and Fulk, Lord FitzWarine three years of age at the time of the death of Nicholas, the 4th Lord Audeley.

John Touchet came of age in the 16th of RICHARD II., 1393. The abeyance of the Barony of Audeley was determined in his favour in or prior to the 5th HENRY IV., 1403, and he was summoned to parliament 20 October in that year. Dame Margaret Hillary, the eldest dau. of James, Lord Audeley, and the senior co-heir of Nicholas, Lord Audeley, was then living, and 12 June, 1404, 5th HENRY IV. (the 5th year of his reign having commenced 30 September, 1403), she obtained the king's release in respect of certain demands made against her as the executrix of her late husband Sir Roger Hillary. (Memoranda Roll, 5th HENRY IV., ro. 7). Fulk, Lord FitzWarine, the other co-heir of the Lords Audeley, d. in the 9th HENRY IV., and from him there are many descendants now in existence. John Touchet, in whose favour the abeyance of the Barony of Audeley was determined in the 5th HENRY IV., d. in the 10th HENRY IV. His widow survived until the 24th HENRY VI., and in the king's writ, directing an inquisition to be taken after her decease, she is described as Elizabeth Audeley, who was the wife of John Touchet, late Lord Audeley, and in the inquisition she is described in the same manner, and her son is spoken of as James Touchet, knight, Lord Audeley; and in a proceeding in parliament in the 9th HENRY V., John, Lord Audeley is styled "John Touchet, Chevalier, Jaziz 'Seigneur de Audeley,'" and his son as "James, Seigneur de Audeley." (Inquisition, 25th HENRY VI., No. 33, Rolls of Parliament, v. 4, p. 164). The Lords Audeley of the family of Touchet at all times after the determination of the abeyance held the place and precedence of the original Lords Audeley. These remarks on her descent of the Barony of Audeley, we derive from a very learned House of Lords' paper, "The additional case on behalf of Sir Charles Robert Tempest, of Broughton, co. York, Bart."

SIR GEORGE TOUCHET, Knt., the 18th Baron Audley, of Heley, was created 6 September, 1616 (old style), Baron Orier, and EARL OF CASTLEHAVEN, in the peerage of Ireland. His lordship m. Lucy, dau. of Sir James Mervyn, Knt., of Fonthill, Wilts; d. 20 February, 1616 (old style), and had issue,

- I. MERVYN, of whom presently.
- II. Ferdinando, K.B., m. the widow of Sir John Rodney, of Pilton, co. Somerset.
- III. Anne, m. to Edward Blount, Esq., of Harleston, co. Derby.
- IV. Elizabeth, m. 1st, Sir John Stawel, of Stawel, co. Somerset, K.B., and 2ndly, Sir Thomas Griffin, of Dingley, co. Northampton, Knt.
- V. Mary, m. to Sir Thomas Thynne, of Longleat, co. Wilts.
- VI. Christian, m. to Sir Henry Mervyn, of Petersfield, co. Southampton, Knt., admiral of the fleet.
- VII. Eleanor, m. 1st, to Sir John Davis, Knt., the king's attorney in Ireland; and 2ndly, Sir Archibald Douglas, Knt.

The son,

MERVYN TOUCHET, 2nd Earl of Castlehaven, and also Lord Audley. This nobleman being accused of certain high crimes, and by virtue of a commission of oyer and terminer, thereupon arraigned, had sentence of death passed upon him, and was executed accordingly on Tower hill, 14 May, 1631. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Benedict Barnham, alderman of London; and 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Ferdinando, Earl of Derby, and widow of Grey Bridges, Lord Chandos. By his 1st wife, he had issue,

- I. JAMES, his heir.
- II. George, a Benedictine monk at Douay.
- III. MERVYN, successor to his brother.
- IV. Lucy, m. 1st, John Anketell, of Compton, in Wiltshire, and of Newmarket, co. Cork; and 2ndly, to Gerald FitzMaurice, brother of Lord Kerry.
- V. Dorothy, m. to Edmund Butler, Viscount Mountgarret.
- VI. Frances, m. to Richard Butler, brother of James, Duke of Ormonde.

The eldest son,

JAMES TOUCHET, obtained a new patent, 3 June, 1631, creating him Lord Audeley, and EARL OF CASTLEHAVEN. His lordship during the civil wars of Ireland, commanded under the Duke of Ormonde; and in 1642, being chosen general of the Irish forces, acted against Cromwell and the parliamentarians. On the subjugation of the kingdom by Cromwell, his lordship withdrew into France, whence he returned to England at the Restoration, and obtained a special act of parliament, in 1678, restoring to him the honour, dignity, place and precedence, as Lord Audley, enjoyed by his ancestors, but forfeited by his father, with remainder, in default of issue of his own body, to his brother, Mervyn Touchet, 3rd son of the late lord (passing over George, a Benedictine monk, his next brother), and the heirs of his body, and in default of issue of the said Mervyn, to the daus. (his sisters) of the deceased lord. The earl m. Elizabeth, dau. of Grey Bridges, Lord Chandos; but d. s. p., 11 October, 1684, when his lordship's honours devolved upon his brother,

MERVYN TOUCHET, 4th Earl of Castlehaven. His lordship m. Mary, 3rd dau. of John, 10th Earl of Shrewsbury, and relict of Charles Arundel, Esq., and d. in 1686, having had issue,

- I. JAMES, 3rd earl.
- II. John, m. Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Thomas Saville, Earl of Sussex, by whom he had a dau. Mary, who m. Cadwallader, Lord Blaney.
- III. Eleanor, m. to Sir Henry Wingfield, Bart., of Easton, Suffolk.
- IV. Mary, d. unm.
- V. Anne, d. unm.

The elder son,

JAMES TOUCHET, 5th Earl of Castlehaven, m. Elizabeth Bard, a co-heiress, and was s. at his decease, 12 August, 1700, by his only child,

JAMES TOUCHET, 6th Earl of Castlehaven; who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, Lord Arundell, of Wardour, and had issue,

JAMES, his heir.

JOHN TALBOT, successor to his brother.

Mary, m. in November, 1749, to Captain Philip Thicknesse, lieutenant-governor of Landguard Fort (younger brother of Ralph Thicknesse, Esq., of Barterley, co. Stafford), by whom she had GEORGE, who s. as Baron Audley, and other children.

His lordship d. in November, 1740, and was s. by his son,

JAMES TOUCHET, 7th Earl of Castlehaven, also Lord Audley, who d. unm. 8 May, 1769, and was s. by his brother,

JOHN TALBOT TOUCHET, 8th Earl of Castlehaven and also Lord Audley; who d. s. p. 22 April, 1777, when the earldom EXPIRED. The Barony of Audley, however, having been (although twice FORFEITED, in 1397 and in 1631,) fully restored by act of parliament, belongs to the Extant and not the Extinct Peerage. Being a barony in fee, it descended to the son of the earl's deceased sister, the Hon. Mrs. Thicknesse, wife of Captain Philip Thicknesse, lieutenant governor of the fort at Landguard Point, namely,

GEORGE THICKNESSE, who thus became BARON AUDLEY. See BURKE's Extant Peerage.

TOWNSHEND — BARONESS OF GREENWICH.

By Letters Patent, dated 28 August, 1767.

Lineage.

JOHN CAMPBELL, 2nd Duke of Argyll, b. 10 October, 1680, having, as lord high commissioner, given the royal assent, in the parliament of Scotland, to the introduction of the act of union with England, 21 September, 1706, was created by Queen ANNE, 26 November following, Baron Chatham, and EARL OF GREENWICH, in the peerage of England. In the next year, his grace made the campaign under the Duke of Marlborough, and distinguished himself at Ramillies, at the siege of Ostend, and in the attack of Menin; but his highest military reputation was acquired in 1708, at the battle of Oudenarde, where he commanded a division of the army, comprising 20 battalions, which was the first brought into action, and which maintained its ground, against a great disparity of numbers. On his return to England he was sworn of the privy council, and subsequently commanded in chief, as lieutenant-general, the English forces under General Schuylenberg, at the attack of the city and citadel of Tournay. In 1710, the duke was installed a knight of the Garter. In 1712 he was constituted commander-in-chief of all the land forces in Scotland, and captain of the company of foot, in Edinburgh Castle. At the death of Queen ANNE, his grace was one of the seven lords justices, in whom the government was vested, under the act of parliament, until the arrival of King GEORGE I. from Hanover. After which he was again appointed general and commander-in-chief of the forces in Scotland, and in that capacity, suppressed the rebellion of 1715, by his victory of Dunblain, and his subsequent proceedings. For all these eminent services, he was advanced to a British dukedom, 30 April, 1718, as Duke of GREENWICH, and declared lord steward of the household. He was subsequently master-general of the ordnance, and in 1735-6, was constituted field-marshal of all his Majesty's forces.

His grace m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John Brown, Esq., and niece of Sir John Duncombe, Knt. (lord mayor of London, in 1708), but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Thomas Warburton, Esq., of Winnington, in Cheshire, and had five daus., viz.,

- iii. Jane, d. young, January, 1735.
- iv. Elizabeth, m. to the Right Hon. James Stewart Mackenzie, brother of John, Earl of Bute.
- v. Mary, m. to Edward, Viscount Coke, heir-apparent of Thomas, Earl of Leicester, but d. s. p.

This illustrious nobleman, commonly called "The great Duke of Argyll," who was as conspicuous for patriotism and eloquence in parliament, as he had been for valour and conduct in the field, d. 4 October, 1743, when his Scottish honours devolved upon his brother, and those of England became EXTINCT. The duke has been immortalized by Pope. There is a fine monument to his memory by Roubiliac, on which is chiselled, the personification of History, employed in writing the following lines:—

Britons, behold! if patriot worth be dear,
A shrine that claims thy tributary tear.
Silent that tongue—admiring senates heard;
Nerveless that arm—opposing legions fear'd.
Nor less, O Campbell, thine the power to please,
And give to grandeur all the grace of ease,
Long from thy life, let kindred heroes trace
Arts, which ennoble still the noblest race.
Others may owe their future fame to me,
I borrow immortality from thee.

His eldest dau.,

LADY CAROLINE (Countess of Dalkeith), who had m. 1st, Francis, Earl of Dalkeith, eldest son of Francis, Duke of Buccleugh, and was then the wife of the Right Hon. John Townshend, first lord of the treasury, and chancellor of the exchequer, was created 28 August, 1767, a peeress in her own right, as BARONESS GREENWICH, with the degree of Baron in remainder to the heirs male of her body, by the said John Townshend. TREGOZ—BARON TREGOZ.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

ROBERT DE TREGOZ, a feudal lord, was sheriff of Wiltshire, in the 3rd RICHARD I., and in three years afterwards was in an expedition then made into Normandy. He m. Sibel, dau. of Robert de Ewyas, and in the 7th JOHN, upon collecting the scutage of that king's reign, answered 38 marks for nineteen knights' fees, belonging to the honour of the said Robert de Ewyas. He was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE TREGOZ, who had a military summons to march against the Welsh, in the 42nd HENRY III., but joining the baronial banner in the same reign, he fell at the battle of Evesham, leaving by Julia, his wife, dau. of William, Lord Cantelupe, two sons, viz.,

JOHN, his heir.

Henry, of Goring, summoned to parliament.

The elder son,

JOHN TREGOZ, doing his homage in the 52nd HENRY III., had livery of his lands; and had such favor from the king, notwithstanding his father's treason, that he was acquitted of 50 marks of the £100 then due for his relief. After which, 10th EDWARD I., he attended the king in an expedition then made into Wales, and in the 22nd of the same reign, being in the campaign of Gascony, he had permission for his wife and family to reside in the castle of Devizes, and to have fuel for their fires there. He was subsequently in the Scottish wars, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron 6 February and 10 April, 1299. His lordship m. Mabel, dau. of Fulk, Lord Fitzwarren, and had issue,

CLARICE, m. to Roger de la Warre, and left a son,

- Charles-Henry, b. 21 September, 1801, d. unm. 18 September, 1823.

His lordship d. 14 December, 1837, and was s. by his only surviving son, ARTHUR HILL-TREVOR, 3rd viscount, M.A., F.A.S., M.R.I.A., and M.R.S.L., a representative peer, b. 9 November, 1798, m. 10 September, 1821, Sophia, 4th dau. of Colonel Gorgee-Marcus D'Arcy-Irvine, of Castle Irvine, co. Fermanagh, and d. s. p. 11 August, 1862, when his honours became EXTINCT. Brynkinallt and his other estates devolved on his kinsman, Lord Arthur Edwin Hill (only surviving brother of the Marquess of Downshire), who has assumed, by royal license, the additional surname and arms of TREVOR.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, party per bend sinister, erm. and erminois, a lion rampant, or, for TREVOR; 2nd and 3rd, sa., on a fesse, arg., between three leopards passant-guardant, or, spotted of the field, three escallops, gu., for HILL.

TRUSSEL—BARON TRUSSEL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 February, 1342.

Lineage.

Of this very ancient Warwickshire family, was

RICHARD TRUSSEL, who fell at the battle of Evesham, 4th HENRY III., as also,

WILLIAM TRUSSEL, of Cublesdon, co. Stafford (which manor the Trussels acquired by Roese, dau. and heir of William Pandolf, who had married into the family). This William was father of another

WILLIAM TRUSSEL, who m. Maud, dau. and heir of Warine Mainwaring, and from him descended

SIR WILLIAM TRUSSEL, who m. Bridget, dau. of William Kene (by Elizabeth, dau. of William Chichele, and niece of Henry Chichele, archbishop of Canterbury, temp. HENRY VI.), and was father of

SIR EDWARD TRUSSEL, K.B., m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Dun, and had,

John, d. s. p. 1499.

ELIZABETH TRUSSEL, m. in the time of HENRY VIII., John Vere, Earl of Oxford.

But the principal branch of the family remaining, according to Dugdale, was that some time resident at Cublesdon, of which was

WILLIAM TRUSSEL, who, in the 22nd EDWARD I., A.D. 1294, received command to repair to the king, to consult upon the important affairs of the realm; and had subsequently a military summons to march into Gascony. He was s. by (his supposed nephew) another

WILLIAM TRUSSEL, who, in the 15th EDWARD II., A.D. 1322, being one of the adherents of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, was exiled in consequence, but returned in five years afterwards with Queen Isabel and Prince Edward, at the head of a considerable force, against the power of the Spencers, one of whom being brought afterwards to trial, had judgment passed upon him by this William, who was at that time in such estimation with the commons in convention assembled, as to be chosen their organ to pronounce the deposition of the unfortunate EDWARD II., which duty he executed in the following words:—"Ego Will. Trussell, vice omnium de Terrâ Angliæ et totius parliamenti procurator, tibi Edwardo reddo homagium prius tibi factum et extunc diffido te, et privo omne potestate regis et dignitate." On the accession of EDWARD III., 1327, he was constituted escheator-general on the south of Trent, but soon after, being opposed as strongly to the influence of Mortimer as he had previously been to that of the Spencers, he was again obliged to fly the kingdom, and to remain in exile until the favourite's fall; when, returning, he was re-invested with the escheatorship. In the 13th EDWARD III., he was admiral of the royal navy, from the mouth of the Thames westward; and in two years afterwards, being then a knight, he was in the expedition made into Flanders, and the same year in the Scottish campaign. In the 16th, A.D. 1342, being in the great expedition made into France, he was summoned to parliament as a Baron, and constituted admiral of all the fleet, from the mouth of the Thames to Berwick-upon-Tweed, his lordship's residence being then at Cublesdon. For the two following years he continued employed in the French campaigns, and two years afterwards he sat in judgment with Sir William Thorpe, chief justice of the Court of King's Bench, at the Tower of London, upon the Earls of Fife and Monteith, when the latter nobleman was hanged, drawn, and quartered, but the former spared. His lordship appears to have had but one summons to parliament, and the barony at his decease, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg. fretée, gu., on each joint a bezant.

NOTE.—Besides the above, there was another

WILLIAM TRUSSEL, who, in the 37th EDWARD III., 1363, was at the battle of Poitiers, in the immediate retinue of the Black Prince, and for his services, obtained from that gallant personage, a grant of £40 per annum for life, to be paid out of the exchequer at Chester. This William m. Idonea, sister of Edward de Boteler, and left an only dau., MARGARET TRUSSEL, who m. Fulk de Pembridge, and d. s. p.

TUDOR—EARLS OF RICHMOND.

By Letters Patent, dated 23 November, 1452.

Lineage.

EDNYFED VYCHAN AP KENDRIG, Lord of Brynffeni, in Denbighland, and Krigeth in Ednoydd, chief counsellor, chief justice, and general of LLEWELYN AP IORWERTH, King of North Wales, was one of the most prominent historical characters of the period. Commanding in the wars between Llewelyn, Prince of North Wales, and JOHN, King of England, he attacked the army of Ranulph, Earl of Chester, and achieving a signal victory, killed three chief captains and commanders of the enemy, whose heads he laid at the feet of his sovereign. For this exploit he had conferred on him new armorial ensigns emblematic of the occasion, which continue to be borne by the LLOYDS of Plymog, and other families derived from him.

540

He m. twice, 1st, Tangwystyl, dau. of Llowarch ap Bran, Lord of Menai, in Anglesey, cotemporary with Owen Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales, and by her had issue,

I. Angharad, m. Einion Vychan ap Einion, of Plas-y-nant, in Llanganhafal, co. Anglesey.

II. Gwennllian, m. Llewelyn the Great, Prince of North Wales.

Ednyfed Vychan m. 2ndly, Gwennllian, dau. of Rhys ap Griffith, Lord of South Wales, representative of the sovereign princes of South Wales, by whom he had issue,

I. GRONO AP EDNYFED VYCHAN, Lord of Tref-Gastel.

II. Griffith ap Ednyfed Vychan, of Henglawdd, father of Sir Rhys Griffith, Knt., whose son, SIR GRIFFITH LLWYD, received from EDWARD I. the honour of knighthood on bringing him intelligence of the birth of his son, Edward of Carnarvon.

The eldest son of Ednyfed Vychan, by Gwennllian, his 2nd wife,

GRONO AP EDNYFED VYCHAN, Lord of Tref-Gastel, in Anglesey, chief counsellor of Llewelyn ap Griffith, Prince of North Wales, m. Morfydd, dau. of Meurig ap Ithel, Lord of Gwent, and had, with junior issue,

TUDOR AP GRONO, of Penmynydd, who built the priory of Bangor, and did homage for his lands to EDWARD I. at Chester. By Angharad, his wife, dau. of Ithel Vychan, of Englefeld, in Flint, he left at his decease in 1311, an only son,

GRONO AP TUDOR, captain of twenty archers in Aquitaine, 43rd EDWARD III. He m. Gwerryll, dau. of Madoc ap David, Baron of Hendwr, co. Merioneth, and d. in 1331. The eldest son of this marriage,

SIR TUDOR AP GRONO, Knt., of Penmynydd, who d. in 1367, m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir (with her elder sister, Eleanor, wife of Griffith Vychan, Lord of Glyndwrwy, and mother of OWEN GLENDOWER) of Thomas ap Llewelyn Lord of South Wales, representative of the sovereign princes of South Wales, by Eleanor Goch, his wife, dau. and heir of Philip, Lord of Iscoed in Cardigan, by Princess Catherine, dau. and heir of Llewelyn, last Prince of North Wales. Of this alliance there was, with other issue, a son,

MEREDITH AP TUDOR, who m. Margaret, dau. of David Vychan ap David Llwyd, of Anglesey, and was father of

SIR OWEN TUDOR, who m. Queen Katherine of Valois, widow of King HENRY V. of England, and dau. of CHARLES VI. of France, by whom he had issue,

I. EDMUND, of whose line we now treat.

II. JASPER, created Earl of Pembroke. (See next article).

I. Tacina, m. to Sir Reginald Grey, Lord Grey, of Wilton.

Sir Owen Tudor, who was taken prisoner at the battle of Mortimer's Cross, fighting for the Red Rose, was beheaded in 1461. His elder son,

EDMUND TUDOR, surnamed of Hadham, having been b. at that place in co. Bedford, was created by his half-brother, King HENRY VI., 23 November, 1452, EARL OF RICHMOND, with precedence of all other earls; and the same year he had a grant from the king, in fee, of the mansion-house of Baynard's Castle, in the city of London. He m. the Lady Margaret Beaufort, dau. and heiress of John, Duke of Somerset, and great-granddau. of John of Gaunt, by his last wife Catherine Swineford. It has been discovered, that in the original patent of legitimacy to the BEAUFORTS, the children of John of Gaunt, born before wedlock, of his last wife, Catherine Swineford (which, as it was ratified by parliament, parliament alone could alter), the exception of inheritance to the crown does not occur; the words "excepta dignitate regali," being inserted only by the caution of HENRY IV., in his confirmation ten years after. The Earl of Richmond d. in 1456, and his remains were interred in the cathedral of St. David's in Wales, with the following epitaph:—

"Under this marble stone here inclosed, resteth the bones of the noble Lord, Edmund, Earl of Richmond, father and brother to kings; the which departed out of this world in the year of our Lord, 1456, the 3rd of the month of November; on whose soul, almighty Jesus have mercy, Amen."

The Countess of Richmond having outlived her husband, m. 2ndly, Henry, a younger son of Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, and 3rdly, Thomas, Lord Stanley, afterwards Earl of Derby; but had issue by neither. Her ladyship provided in her last will, dated 6 January, 1503, for two perpetual readerships in divinity, the Margaret Professorships of Divinity, one at each of the universities; and she founded the school at Cambridge, called Christ's Church; she also left provision for "a perpetual preacher of the word of God," in the same university. This exemplary lady d. 29 June, 1509.

At the death of the Earl of Richmond in 1456, he was s. by his son,

HENRY TUDOR, 2nd Earl of Richmond, then but fifteen weeks old. This noble infant being removed by his uncle, Jasper, Earl of Pembroke, into Brittany, remained there during the whole of EDWARD IV.'s reign, under the protection of Francis, Duke of Provence, notwithstanding various efforts made by the English monarch to obtain possession of his person. At one time, Polydore Virgil relates, the duke, confiding in the pledge of EDWARD, to marry the young earl to his dau., Elizabeth, and thus unite for ever the red and white roses, had actually delivered him up to the English ambassadors, and that they had conveyed him to St. Malo, on his way to England, but were detained by the earl's falling ill of a dangerous fever. In the interim, one John Chenet, who had great influence in the ducal court, flew to the presence of the duke, and feelingly depicted the perils in which he had placed this last scion of Lancaster. To which his highness replied, "Hold thy peace, John, there is no such danger at all; for King EDWARD resolves to make him his son-in-law." But to this Chenet instantly returned: "Believe me, most illustrious duke, he is already very near death; and if you permit him to be carried one step out of your dominions, no mortal man can preserve him from it." At which the duke, being not a little troubled, immediately despatched Peter Landose, his third treasurer, to St. Malo, with orders to bring the earl back. Peter, on hastening thither, is said to have detained the ambassadors with a long speech, while his servants conveyed the object of his care to a sanctuary in the city, whence he was soon after conducted in safety to his former residence. The subsequent contest between the Earl of Richmond and RICHARD III., our historians and poets have so minutely detailed, that it would be idle to pursue the subject here, further than to record the simple fact, that the victory of Bosworth placed the crown of England on the head of Richmond, and terminated the wars of the Roses. Upon the earl ascending the throne as HENRY VII., the Earldom of Richmond merged in the crown.

TUDOR—EARL OF PEMBROKE, DUKE OF BEDFORD.

Earldom, 6 March, 1453.

Dukedom, 27 October, 1485.

Lineage.

JASPER TUDOR, surnamed of Hatfield, the place of his birth, 2nd son of Sir Owen Tudor, by KATHERINE, Queen Dowager of King HENRY V. (see preceding article), was advanced by his half-brother, HENRY VI., in the parliament held at Reading, anno 1453, to the EARLDOM OF PEMBROKE, at the same time that his brother, EDMUND, of Hatfield, was made Earl of Richmond. This nobleman being afterwards one of the main pillars of the cause of Lancaster, was attainted and forced to fly when EDWARD IV. obtained the crown, and the Earldom of Pembroke was then conferred upon William Herbert, Lord Herbert, of Chepstow. Joining, subsequently, with the Earl of Warwick, he had a principal part in the temporary restoration of HENRY VI., and at that period he had the good fortune to find his nephew, Henry, Earl of Richmond, in the custody of William Herbert's (Earl of Pembroke) widow, and presenting the boy to King HENRY, that monarch is said prophetically to have exclaimed—"This is he who shall quietly possess, what we and our adversaries do now contend for." The total overthrow of the Lancastrians at Barnet Field, and the re-establishment of EDWARD upon the throne again, however, broke down the fortunes of Jasper Tudor, and forced him, after some hair-breadth escapes, to seek an asylum for himself and his nephew, at the court of Brittany. Here, during the remainder of the reign of EDWARD IV., protection was afforded them, and here, in the reign of RICHARD III., they planned the enterprise which led to the triumph of Bosworth. Upon the accession of his nephew, as HENRY VII., Jasper Tudor was created DUKE OF BEDFORD at the Tower of London, 27 October, 1485. He was next sworn amongst the chief of the privy council, and constituted one of the commissioners to execute the duties of high steward of England at the king's coronation. His grace was afterwards appointed justice of South Wales, and lord-lieutenant of Ireland for two years; he likewise obtained considerable grants from the crown, and was invested with the Garter. Upon the insurrection of the Earl of Lincoln in behalf of the Pretender Simnell, the Duke of Bedford was nominated joint commander with the Earl of Oxford, of the forces sent to oppose the Simnellites, and he ever enjoyed the entire confidence of the king. He m. Catherine, 6th and youngest dau. of Richard Wydeville, Earl Rivers, and widow of Henry, Duke of Buckingham, by whom (who m. after his decease Sir Richard Wingfield, K.G.) he had no issue. He left, however, an illegitimate dau., Helen, who m. William Gardiner, citizen of London, and was mother of Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester. He d. 21 December, 1495, when the Earldom of Pembroke and the Dukedom of Bedford became EXTINCT.

TUDOR—DUKE OF YORK.

By Letters Patent, dated 31 October, 1494.

Lineage.

HENRY TUDOR, 2nd son of King HENRY VII., was created 31 October, 1494, DUKE OF YORK, but at the death of his elder brother, Arthur, he s. to the Dukedom of Cornwall, and was created Prince of Wales. His royal highness subsequently ascended the throne as HENRY VIII., when all his honours merged in the crown.

TUDOR—DUKE OF SOMERSET.

By Letters Patent, anno 1499.

Lineage.

EDMUND TUDOR, 3rd son of King HENRY VII., was created, in 1499, DUKE OF SOMERSET. He d. however, under five years of age, in 1499, when the dukedom became EXTINCT.

TUFTON—BARONS TUFTON AND EARLS OF THANET.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 1 November, 1626.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 5 August, 1628.

Lineage.

The surname of this family, TOKETON, as originally written, was derived from a place of that name in Kent, of which its remote ancestors were feudal lords.

NICHOLAS TUFTON, of Northiam, co. Sussex, m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of John Heaver, of Cranbrook, in Kent, and dying 31 December, 1538, was s. by his son,

JOHN TUFTON, Esq., of Hothfield, co. Kent, sheriff of that shire, 4th Queen ELIZABETH, who m. Mary, eldest dau. of Sir John Baker, of Sissinghurst, chancellor and under-treasurer of the exchequer, and left at his decease, 10 October, 1567, a dau., Cecily, m. to Sir Thomas Sonder, and an only son,

SIR JOHN TUFTON, Knt., of Hothfield, high sheriff of Kent, 18th Queen ELIZABETH, who was created a Baronet, 19 June, 1611. Sir John m. 1st, Olympia, dau. and heiress of Christopher Blower, Esq., of Sileham, in Kent, and had three daus., viz., Anne, m. to Francis Tresham, Esq., of Rushton; Elizabeth, d. young; and Margaret, m. to Sir Thomas Carill, Knt., of Benton and Shipley, co. Sussex. He m. 2ndly, Christian, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Humphrey Brown, Knt., one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, by whom he had six sons and four daus. He d. 2 April, 1624, and was s. by his eldest son.

SIR NICHOLAS TUFTON, Knt. This gentleman, being amongst those who met King JAMES I. at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on his coming into England, received the honour of knighthood from that monarch, 13 April, 1603, and was elevated to the peerage, 1 November, 1626, in the dignity of Baron Tufton, of Tufton, co. Sussex, and created EARL OF THANET, 5 August, 1628. His lordship m. Lady Frances Cecil, dau. of Thomas, 1st Earl of Exeter, and had issue to survive,

JOHN, his successor.

Cecil, father of Sir Charles Tufton, Knt., of Twickenham.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Edward Dering, Bart.

Dorothy, m. to Sir Ralph Asheton, Bart.

Mary, m. to Sir Edward Blashopp, Bart.

Diana, m. to Sir Robert Curzon, of Water Pery, co. Oxon, Knt.

Christian, m. to William Milward, of Chilcote, co. Derby, son and heir of Sir Thomas Milward, of Eaton, co. Derby, Knt.

He d. 1 July, 1632, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

JOHN TUFTON, 2nd earl, who m. 21 April, 1629, Lady Margaret Sackville, eldest dau. and co-heiress of Richard, 3rd Earl of Dorset, by Anne, Baroness Clifford, only dau. and heiress of George, Earl of Cumberland, and had issue, NICHOLAS, JOHN, RICHARD, THOMAS, successively Earls of Thanet: Sackville; and George, buried at Raynham, 1670; Anne, d. young; Margaret, m. to George, Lord Coventry; Frances, m. to Henry Drax, Esq., of Boston, co. Lincoln; Cecilie, m. to Christopher, Lord Hatton; Mary, m. to William, son and heir of Sir William Walter, of Saresden, co. Oxon, Bart.; Anne, m. to Samuel Grimston, son and heir of Sir Harbottle Grimston, Bart., master of the Rolls. This nobleman was obliged to compound for his estate with the sequestrators of the rebel parliament at no less a sum than £9000, which, it is observable, is the largest compromise in the list of 1654. His lordship d. 6 May, 1664. His eldest son, NICHOLAS TUFTON, 3rd earl, b. 7 August, 1631, m. 11 April, 1664, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Richard Boyle, Earl of Burlington, by whom (who d. in 1726) he had no issue. In 1655, the earl was committed by Cromwell to the Tower, but soon afterwards released. He was, however, re-committed, in 1656, and detained for nearly two years. In 1678 he inherited the Barony of Clifford at the decease of his mother, but d. s. p. 24 November, 1679, when all his honours devolved upon his brother,

JOHN TUFTON, 4th earl, b. 7 August, 1633, who had previously s. his mother, one of the co-heiresses of the Earl of Dorset, in the estates of Clifford, Westmoreland, and Vesey; and his cousin, Lady Alathia Hungerford, wife of Edward Hungerford, Esq., and only dau. and heiress of James, Earl of Northampton, by Isabella, youngest dau. and co-heiress of his grandfather, Richard, Earl of Dorset, whereby he became possessed of the whole inheritance of his grandmother Anne, only dau. and heiress of George, Earl of Cumberland, who m. 1st, Richard, Earl of Dorset, and after his decease, Philip, Earl of Montgomery and Pembroke. The Earl of Thanet dying unm., 27 April, 1680, all his honours and estates passed to his brother,

RICHARD TUFTON, 5th earl, who d. unm., 8 March, 1683-4, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS TUFTON, 6th earl. This nobleman m. in 1684, Lady Catherine Cavendish, dau. and co-heiress of Henry, Duke of Newcastle, by whom he had three sons, who d. in infancy, and five daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

CATHERINE, m. to Edward Watson, Viscount Sondes, heir-apparent of Lewis, Earl of Rockingham, and had issue, LEWIS, 2nd Earl of Rockingham; THOMAS, 3rd Earl of Rockingham; Edward, d. unm.; CATHERINE, m. to Edward Southwell, Esq., of King's Weston, and her son, EDWARD SOUTHWELL, inherited, in 1776, the Barony of DE CLIFFORD.

ANNE, m. to James, 5th Earl of Salisbury.

MARGARET, m. to Thomas Coke, Earl of Leicester, and was declared, in 1734, BARONESS CLIFFORD.

MARY, m. 1st, to Anthony Grey, Earl of Harold, and 2ndly, to John, 1st Earl Gower.

ISABELLA, m. 1st, to Lord Nassau Paulet, and 2ndly, to Sir F. Blake-DeLaval, K.B.

His lordship claimed the Baronies of Clifford and Vesey, in right of inheritance from his grandmother, and that of CLIFFORD was confirmed to him by the House of Lords, 12 December, 1691, when he assumed the additional title of Baron Clifford, which barony at his decease, in 1729, fell into abeyance between his daus. and co-heirs, and so continued until the crown, in 1734, interposed in favour of Margaret, Countess of Leicester, his lordship's 3rd dau.; but at her ladyship's decease without issue, in 1775, it relapsed into abeyance between her sisters, which abeyance the crown again terminated, in 1776, in favour of Edward Southwell, as stated above. The Earl of Thanet's other honours reverted to his nephew,

SACKVILLE TUFTON, Esq., as 7th earl (eldest surviving son of the Hon. Col. Sackville Tufton, of the guards, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and sole heir of Ralph Wilbraham, Esq., of Newbottle, co. Northampton, 2nd son of Sir Thomas Wilbraham, Bart). This nobleman m. in 1722, Lady Mary Savile, youngest dau. and co-heiress of William, Marquess of Halifax, by whom he had surviving issue,

SACKVILLE, his successor.

Mary, m. to Sir William Duncan, Bart., one of the royal physicians, and d. in 1806.

Charlotte, d. in 1803.

His lordship d. 4 December, 1753, and was s. by his son,

SACKVILLE TUFTON, 8th earl, b. 1733; m. 30 August, 1767, Mary, dau. of Lord John Sackville, and granddau. of Lionel, 1st Duke of Dorset, and sister of John-Friderick, the 3rd duke, by whom he had,

SACKVILLE, his successor.

CHARLES, who s. his brother.

HENRY, last earl.

Elizabeth, d. 16 September, 1849.

Caroline, m. 26 July, 1792, to Joseph-Foster Barham, Esq., M.P., who d. 28 September, 1832. Lady Caroline Barham d. 3 November in the same year, leaving with other issue, the late John-Foster Barham, Esq., of Treown, co. Pembroke, M.P., and the present Rev. CHARLES-HENRY BARHAM, of Treown.

His lordship d. 10 April, 1786, and was s. by his eldest son,

SACKVILLE TUFTON, 9th earl, b. 30 June, 1769; m. 28 February, 1811, Anne-Charlotte de Bojnovitz, a noble lady of Hungary, who d. s. p. in 1819. His lordship d. in January, 1825, when the honours of the family devolved upon his next brother,

CHARLES TUFTON, 10th earl, b. 10 September, 1770, who dying unm., 20 April, 1832, was s. by his only surviving brother,

HENRY TUFTON, 11th Earl, b. 2 January, 1775. His lordship, who was lord lieutenant of Kent, and hereditary sheriff of the co. Westmoreland, d. unm., 12 June, 1849, when the title became EXTINCT. His nephew and representative is the Rev. Charles Henry Barham, of Treown.

TYES—BARON TYES.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

In the time of King HENRY III.,

HENRY DE TYES held Shireburne, in Oxfordshire, by the grant of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 6 February, 1299, to 26 August, 1307. In the 28th EDWARD I., his lordship had free warren in all his demesne lands at Shireburne and Allerton, both in the co. Oxford. He d. in 1308, and was s. by his son,

HENRY DE TYES, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 8 January, 1313, to 15 May, 1321. This nobleman was in the wars of Scotland, and for several years adhered faithfully to King EDWARD II., but afterwards joining in the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, he was taken prisoner at Boroughbridge, and being conveyed to London, was there beheaded for high treason, in 1321. His lordship d. s. p., leaving his sister,

UFFORD—BARONS UFFORD, EARLS OF SUFFOLK.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 13 January, 1308.

Earldom, by Creation in Parliament, dated 16 March, 1337.

Lineage.

Of this family, says Sir William Dugdale, which afterwards arrived to great honour, I have not seen anything memorable, until the 53rd HENRY III., when Robert, a younger son of John de Peyton, of Peyton, co. Suffolk, (assuming his surname from the lordship of Ufford, in that shire, became

ROBERT DE UFFORD. This Robert was justice of Ireland in the reign of HENRY III., and again in the reign of EDWARD I. He m. Mary, widow of William de Say, and dying in the 26th of the latter king, was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT DE UFFORD, Knt., who was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 13 January, 1308, to 19 December, 1311. His lordship was in the expedition made into Scotland, in the 34th EDWARD I. He m. Cecily, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Sir Robert de Valoines, Knt., Lord of Walsham, and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

John, archbishop of Canterbury, d. 1348.

Ralph, justice of Ireland in the reign of EDWARD III. (see Ufford, Baron Ufford).

Edmund.

He d. in 1318, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT DE UFFORD, 2nd baron, K.G., summoned to parliament from 27 January, 1332, to 14 January, 1337. This nobleman was in the wars of Gascony in the reign of EDWARD II., and he obtained, in the beginning of EDWARD III.'s reign, in requital of his eminent services, a grant for life of the town and castle of Orford, co. Suffolk, and soon after, further considerable territorial possessions, also by grant from the crown, in consideration of the personal danger he had incurred in arresting, by the king's command, MONTIMER, and some of his adherents, in the castle of Nottingham. His lordship was solemnly advanced in the parliament to the dignity of EARL OF SUFFOLK, 16 March, 1336, "habendum sibi et hæredibus suis." Whereupon he was associated with William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and John Darcy, steward of the king's household, to treat with David Bruce, of Scotland, touching a league of peace and amity. And the same year, going beyond sea on the king's service had an assignation of £300 out of the exchequer, towards his expenses in that employment, which was in the wars of France; for it appears that he then accompanied the Earl of Derby, being with him at the battle of Cagant. After which time he was seldom out of some distinguished action. In the 12th EDWARD III., being in the expedition made into Flanders, he was the next year one of the marshals when King EDWARD besieged Cambray; and his lordship within a few years subsequently was actively engaged in the wars of Brittany. In the 17th of this reign the Earl of Suffolk was deputed to the court of Rome, there to treat in the presence of his holiness, touching an amicable peace and accord between the English monarch and Philip de Valois, and he marched the same year with Henry of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, to the relief of Loughmaben Castle, then besieged by the Scots. Soon after this he was made admiral of the king's whole fleet northward. For several years subsequently his lordship was with King EDWARD in France, and he was one of the persons presented by that monarch with harness and other accoutrements for the tournament at Canterbury, in the 22nd year of his reign. In seven years afterwards we find the earl again in France, with the Black Prince; and at the celebrated battle of Poitiers, fought, and so gloriously won in the following year, his lordship achieved the highest military renown by his skill as a leader, and his personal courage at the head of his troops. He was subsequently elected a knight of the Garter. His lordship m. Margaret, sister of Sir John Norwich, and widow of Sir Thomas Cailly, and had issue, ROBERT, summoned to parliament 25 February, 1342, by writ directed "Roberto de Ufford le Fitz;" he m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard, son of Richard, Earl of Arundel, and d. v. p., s. p.

WILLIAM, his successor.

Cecilie, m. to John, 3rd Lord Willoughby de Eresby; whose co-heirs-general are Lord Willoughby de Eresby and the Marquess of Cholmondeley.

Catherine, m. to Robert, Lord Scles (see SCALES).

Margaret, m. to William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby (see FERRERS).

The earl's last testament bears date in 1368, and he d. in the following year. Amongst other bequests, he leaves to his son, William, "the sword, wherewith the king girt him, when he created him earl; as also his bed, with the eagle entire; and his summer vestment, powdered with leopards." His lordship was s. by his only surviving son,

WILLIAM DE UFFORD, 2nd Earl of Suffolk, K.G., who had been summoned to parliament, as a Baron, in the lifetime of his father, 4 December, 1364, and 20 January, 1366. This nobleman was in the French wars at the close of EDWARD III.'s reign, and in the beginning of that of RICHARD II. In the 50th EDWARD he was constituted admiral of the king's whole fleet northward. At the breaking out of Jack Straw's insurrection, 4th RICHARD II., his lordship understanding that the common people contemplated forcing him into their ranks, and thus to represent him as one of their leaders, hastily arose from supper, and pursuing an unfrequented route, reached the king at St. Albans, with a wallet over his shoulder, under the assumed character of servant to Sir Roger de Bois; but afterwards, being chosen by the Commons in parliament assembled, to represent to the lords certain matters of importance to the public welfare, the earl while ascending the steps to their lordships' house, suddenly fell down dead, to the amazement and sorrow of all persons, rich and poor, 15 February, 1381. His lordship m. 1st Joane, dau. of Edward de Montacute, and grand-dau. maternally, of Thomas, of Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, and 2ndly, Isabel, dau. of Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and widow of John le Strange, of Blackmere, but as he left no issue, the Earldom of Suffolk and the Barony of Ufford fell into ABREYANCE, between his sisters and heirs, (refer to children of Robert, 1st earl), as it still continues amongst their representatives.

UFFORD—BARON UFFORD.

By Writ of Summons, dated 3 April, 1360.

Lineage.

SIR RALPH DE UFFORD, brother (according to Dugdale and Nicolas,) of Robert, 1st Earl of Suffolk, having served in the wars of France and Flanders, in the martial reign of EDWARD III., obtained large grants of land from that monarch, in the co. Berks and Dorset. Subsequently (20th EDWARD III.) being justice of Ireland, we are told "he landed in that realm, with a great number of men-at-arms and archers." This distinguished person m. 1st, Maud, widow of William de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, and dau. of Henry Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, by whom he had an only dau.,

MAUD, buried before 21st EDWARD III.

He m. 2ndly (says Dugdale), Eve, dau. and heiress of John de Clavering, and widow of Thomas de Audeley, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, of whom presently.

Edmund (Sir), who inherited the estates of the family at the decease of his brother. Sir Edmund m. Sybil, dau. of Robert or Simon Pierpont, and had issue,

Robert (Sir), who m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir Thomas Felton, Knt., and left issue three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Ellis, m. to Richard Bowet, Esq.

Sybil, a nun at Barking.

Joan, m. to William Bowet, Esq., brother of Richard, and left one dau. and heiress, Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, son of Thomas, 7th Lord Dacre.

Ralph de Ufford d. in 1346, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN DE UFFORD, who was summoned to parliament as BARON UFFORD, 3 April, 1360, but d. s. p. the following year, when the dignity became EXTINCT, while his estates passed to his brother, Sir Edmund Ufford, Knt.

Dugdale, followed by Nicolas, is the authority for this pedigree; but Vincent maintains that John de Ufford, summoned to parliament in 1360, was son of Thomas, a younger son of Robert de Ufford, by Mary de Say, his wife, and that Eve de Clavering was the wife of the said Thomas, and not of Ralph. UGHTRED—BARON UGHTRED.

By Writ of Summons, dated 30 April, 1343.

Lineage.

Of this family, which was of great antiquity in the co. York, was

ROBERT UGHTRED, Lord of Scarborough, who, in the 28th EDWARD I., obtained a charter for free warren, in all his demesne lands in that shire. He d. 3rd EDWARD II., and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS UGHTRED, K.G., who became a person of great note in his time, and was celebrated in the Scottish wars temp. EDWARD II. and EDWARD III. In the 10th of the latter reign, he was made admiral of the king's whole fleet to the northward, and for some years afterwards he was again in the Scottish wars, when he attained the rank of banneret, and was constituted governor of Perth. He was subsequently in the wars of Flanders, and had summons to parliament as a Baron, from 20 April, 1343, to 4 December, 1364. His lordship d. in 1365, leaving by Margaret, his wife, a son and heir,

SIR THOMAS UGHTRED, who does not appear from the existing enrolments to have been summoned to parliament as a Baron. Sir Thomas, like his father, was a military man, and became eminent likewise in the wars of Scotland. In the 50th EDWARD III. he was made constable and chamberlain of Lochmaben Castle, and he was afterwards engaged in the wars of France. He d. 3rd HENRY IV., and was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS UGHTRED (son of William), who had m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Goddard, Knt., by Constance, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Sutton, of Holderness; and had issue, according to Banks, two sons, ROBERT and THOMAS (Sir), of whom the elder was ancestor of the UGHTREDS, of Kexby, co. York.

UMFRAVILL—BARONS UMFRAVILL, EARLS OF ANGUS.

Barony, by Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Earldom, by Writ of Summons, dated 26 January, 1297.

Lineage.

In the 10th year of his reign, WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR granted the forest, valley, and lordship of Riddesdale, in Northumberland, to his kinsman,

SIR ROBERT DE UMFRAVILL, Knt.,* otherwise Robert with the lion, Lord of Tours and Vian, to hold, by the service of defending that part of the country for ever, from enemies and wolves with the sword which King WILLIAM had by his side when he entered Northumberland. By this grant he had likewise authority for holding, governing, exercising, hearing, and judging, in all the pleas of the crown, as well as others occurring within the precincts of Riddesdale. The next of this family we will mention is

RICHARD DE UMFRAVILL, a feudal lord who appears, in the 7th RICHARD I., to have pledged his lands of Turney, to Aaron, a Jew, for a debt of £22 6s. In the 8th King JOHN he obtained the right of preventing all persons from grazing, hunting, or cutting down timber in the forest of Riddesdale; and in nine years afterwards, the times being then turbulent, he delivered up his four sons in hostage, with his castle of Prudhoe, as guarantee for his loyalty, upon the condition, that if he transgressed, the said castle became forfeited, and that he should himself be dealt with as a traitor; notwithstanding which, no sooner did the barons take up arms, than he appeared amongst them, when his lands were seized and granted to Hugh de Baliol. In the reign of King HENRY III., however, he made his peace, and had restitution of the castle of Prudhoe, &c., but he was nevertheless far from enjoying the confidence of that monarch, as we find the king soon after issuing a precept to the sheriff of Northumberland, directing a jury of twelve knights to be empanelled, to inspect certain buildings at the castle of Herbotil, which this Richard de Umfravill was then erecting, and to demolish all that bore the appearance of fortifications. His son,

GILBERT DE UMFRAVILL, Lord of Prudhoe, Redesdale, and Harbottle, Northumberland, according to Matthew Paris, "a famous baron, guardian and chief flower of the north," m. in 1243, Maud, Countess of Angus, and d. in 1245, leaving his son and heir "of tender years," which son and heir,

GILBERT DE UMFRAVILL, was committed to the guardianship of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, in consideration of 10,000 marks paid by that nobleman to the king. This Gilbert attained majority in the 43rd HENRY III., and in six years subsequently we find him in arms with the barons, but he made his peace prior to the battle of Evesham, and obtained then some immunities from the crown. In the 20th EDWARD I. he was governor of the castle of Forfar, and the whole territory of Angus, in Scotland, and appears to have borne the title of Earl of Angus, in right of his mother. He was summoned to parliament, however, in three years afterwards, as BARON UMFRAVILL only, but in the 25th of the same reign, and from that period to the 1st EDWARD II., his writ of summons was addressed "Gilberto de Umfravill, Comiti de Anggoe." But this dignity the English lawyers refused to acknowledge (Angus not being within the kingdom of England,) until he had openly produced the king's writ in public court, by which he was called to parliament, under the title of EARL OF ANGUS. In the 27th EDWARD I., his lordship was constituted one of the king's commissioners for manning and fortifying the castles within the realm of Scotland, and to appoint wardens of the Marches. The next year he founded a chantry for two priests, to celebrate divine service daily in the chapel of our lady, within the castle of Prudhoe. The earl m. Lady Agnes Comyn, dau. of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, d. in 1308, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

ROBERT DE UMFRAVILL, summoned to parliament as Earl of Angus, from 4 March, 1309, to 30 December, 1324. This nobleman distinguished himself in the lifetime of his father in the Scottish wars, and soon after his accession to the title he was joined in commission with William, Lord Ros, of Hamlake, and Henry, Lord Beaumont, in the lieutenancy of Scotland. In the 11th EDWARD II., his lordship was appointed one of the commissioners to treat with Robert de Brus and his partisans for a truce between both realms. The earl m. 1st, Lucy, dau. of Philip, and eventually heiress of her brother, William de Kyme, by whom he had issue,

GILBERT, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. Gilbert Burdon, or Baradon, and had an only dau. and heiress, ELIZABETH, or ALIANORE, heiress to her uncle, Earl Gilbert, m. to Henry Talboys, from which marriage the Lord Talboys descended.

His lordship's 2nd wife, was named Alianore, but of what family is not mentioned; by this lady (who m. 2ndly, Roger Mauduit,) he had issue,

Robert (Sir), who d. s. p.

Thomas (Sir), of Harbottle Castle, m. Joane de Roddam, d. 1386, and left issue,

1 Thomas (Sir), b. 1364, d. 1391, who, by Agnes, his wife, left issue,

Gilbert (styled "Earl of Kyme," probably from the tenure of the castle of Kyme), d. s. p., being slain at Beaugé, 1421.

Elizabeth, m. Sir William Elvedon, and left four co-heiresses; one of whom, Isabella, m. Sir Rowland Tempest, Knt., and was ancestor of the Tempests, extinct Barts, of Stella, and through them, the Chaytors of Croft, Swinburnes of Capheaton, &c.

Joane, m. to Sir Wm. Lambert.

Margaret, m. 1st, to William Lodington, and 2ndly, to John Constable of Halsham.

Agnes, m. to Thomas Hagerston.

2 Robert, K.G., lord high admiral temp. HENRY IV., d. s. p. 27 December, 1436.

Annora, m. to Stephen Waleys, son and heir of Sir Richard Waleys.

The earl d. in 1325, and was s. by his eldest son,

GILBERT DE UMFRAVILL, summoned to parliament, as 3rd Earl of Angus, from 27 January, 1332, to 26 August, 1350. This nobleman acquired great reputation in the Scottish wars, and was a chief commander at the battle of Durham, 20th EDWARD III., where DAVID BRUS, the Scottish monarch was totally defeated and made prisoner by the English. In the 26th EDWARD III., his lordship had permission, upon petition to the king and parliament, to transfer the prisoners, made within the liberty of Redesdale, whom he had the privilege of detaining, from his prison of Herbotil Castle (then in a state of dilapidation), to Prudhoe Castle, for the ensuing ten years. His lordship m. Maud, sister of Anthony de Lucy, and next heir of Joane, dau. and heir of the said Anthony, by whom he had an only son, ROBERT (Sir), who m. Margaret, dau. of Henry, Lord Percy, and d. v. p. s. p.

* This Robert de Umfravill, had a grandson, Robert, father of Gilbert, which last two adhered to DAVID I., King of Scotland, who gave Gilbert, Kinnaird and Dunipace, in Stirlingshire.

The earl d. 7 January, 1391, leaving Alianore, his niece, wife of Henry Talboya, his heir of the whole blood, and Thomas Umfravill, his brother of the half blood, his next male heir, but none of the family were ever subsequently summoned to parliament. The Barony of Umfravill, created by writ of 23rd EDWARD I., is, however, vested in the descendants and representatives of the said Thomas de Umfravill—(see children of Robert, 2nd Earl of Angus, by his 2nd wife).

VEDALE—BARON VEDALE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 27 January, 1332.

Lineage.

PETER DE VEDALE was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 27 January, 1332, to 22 January, 1336. He appears to have d. s. p., when the Barony of Uvedale became extinct. From Thomas, his brother, derived descent, according to Banks, the UVEDALES, of Wickham, Hants, and the UVEDALES, of More Crichill, co. Dorset.

VALENCE—EARLS OF PEMBROKE.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE LUBIGUAN, otherwise DE VALENCE, son of Hugh le Brun, Comte de la Marche, in Poitou, by Isabel, his wife, dau. of Aymer, Comte d'Angouleme, and widow of King JOHN, derived his surname from the place of his birth, as the rest of his brothers did from theirs, and being so nearly allied to King HENRY III. (half brother, by the mother), was brought into England, in 1247, with Guy de Lazinean, his elder brother, and Alice, his sister, in consequence of being oppressed by the King of France. Not many months after his arrival he was made governor of Goderich Castle, and through the influence of the king, obtained the hand of Joane, dau. and eventually heir of Warine de Monchensi, by Joane, his wife, 2nd sister and co-heir of Anselme Marshal, Earl of Pembroke. "Moreover," says Sir William Dugdale, "shortly after this, the king solemnizing the festival of St. Edward's translation, in the church of Westminster, with great state, sitting on the royal throne, in a rich robe of Baudekyn, and the crown on his head, caused this William (with divers other young noblemen,) to be brought before him, and girt him with the sword of knighthood, and whilst he thus sate in his royal seat, casting his eye upon him, who penned down all particulars of the great solemnity, he called him nearer, and commanded him to sit upon the middle step, betwixt his chair and the floor, and said to him; 'Hast thou taken notice of all these things, and perfectly committed them to memory?' He answered, 'Sir, I have so, deeming this famous ceremonial worthy to be recorded.' Whereupon the king replied, 'I am fully satisfied that God Almighty, as a pledge of his further favours and benefits, hath vouchsafed to work one glorious miracle this morning, for which I give him thanks. I therefore intreat thee, and intreating require, that thou record these things exactly and fully, and write them in a book, lest that the memory of them should in time be lost.' And having so said, invited him with whom he had this discourse to dinner that day, with three of his fellows; commanding likewise, that all other monks, who then came thither, with the whole convent of Westminster, should at this charge, be that day feasted at the public refectory there."

William de Valence had, subsequently, a grant from the crown of the castle and honour of Hertford, as also another grant to himself and his lady, and to their issue, of all those debts which William de Lancaster did then owe to the Jews throughout the whole realm. "About this time," writes Dugdale, "this William de Valence, residing at Hertford Castle, rode to the Park at HadAld, belonging to the bishop of Ely, and there hunting without any leave, went to the bishop's manor house, and readily finding nothing to drink but ordinary beer, broke open the buttry doors, and swearing and cursing the drink, and those who made it; after all his company had drunk their fill, pulled the spigots out of the vessels, and let out the rest on the floor; and that a servant of the house hearing the noise, and coming to see what the matter was, they laughed him to scorn, and so departed."

In the 34th HENRY III., William de Valence was in the Holy Land, and in the 42nd had a military summons to march against the Welsh, but he was soon afterwards obliged to fly the kingdom, when the barons took up arms against the influence of himself and other foreigners; he came back, however, after an exile of only two years, under the protection of the king, but was not suffered to land by the barons, until he had sworn to observe the ordinances of Oxford. Nevertheless, the contest again breaking out, he had a chief command in the royal army, and with the prince, assaulted successfully the town of Northampton, when the whole baronial force was put to the rout, but soon rallying, owing to the junction of the Londoners, the battle of Lewes ensued, and victory deserted the regal banner. In this action, the king and his son became prisoners; but Valence, who then bore the title of EARL OF PEMBROKE, with the Earl of Warren, and others, escaped by flight, first to Pevensy, and thence into France. His lands were, however, seized by the triumphant barons, and his wife, who was residing at Windsor Castle, ordered to retire immediately into some religious house. The battle of Evesham again, however, changing the fortune of war, and the power of the king being re-established, the Earl of Pembroke, with the other staunch adherents of royalty, were restored to their possessions; and his lordship had, subsequently, large grants from the crown. In the 18th EDWARD I., the earl, with Joane, his wife, presented a petition to parliament, setting forth, "that, whereas, upon the death of William de Monchensi (brother to her, the said Joane), they had obtained a bull from the Pope directed to the archbishop of Canterbury, touching the inheritance of the lands of the said William de Monchensi, thereby desiring that the king would please to commit the tuition of Dionysia, the daughter of the said William, unto some person who might appear before the said archbishop, and such other judges as were named in the bull." But it was answered, that the admission of that bull would tend to the diminution of the king's authority and power, by reason that such cases of hereditary succession ought not to be determined but in his own courts. Wherefore, inasmuch, as it did appear, that the object of the earl was to invalidate the sentence of the bishop of Worcester, which had declared the said Dionysia to be legitimate, and his design to make her a bastard, in order that he might enjoy her estate, his lordship and his lady were prohibited to prosecute their appeal any further. His lordship was afterwards engaged in the wars of France, and was slain there in 1296, when his remains were conveyed to England, and interred in Westminster Abbey, under a splendid monument. The earl had issue by the heiress of Monchensi three sons and four daus., viz.,

- I. John, who d. young.
- II. William, killed by the Welsh, v. p.
- III. AYMER, his successor.
 - I. Anne, m. 1st, to Maurice Fitz-Gerald; 2ndly, to Hugh de Baliol, and 3rdly, to John de Avennes, but had no issue.
 - II. Isabel, m. to John de Hastings.
 - III. Joan, m. to John Comyn, feudal lord of Badenoch (son of John Comyn, by Mary, his wife, dau. of John Baliol), Lord of Barnard Castle, and sister of King John Baliol, and had issue,
 - John Comyn, slain at Striveling in 1314, s. p.
 - William Comyn, made prisoner in the same action, d. s. p.
 - Joan Comyn, b. 1296, m. to David de Strathbogie, Earl of Atholl.
 - Elizabeth Comyn, b. 1300, m. to Richard, 2nd Lord Talbot, ancestor, by her, of the Earls of Shrewsbury.
- IV. Margaret.

His lordship was s. by his only surviving son,

AYMER DE VALENCE, 2nd Earl of Pembroke. This nobleman was in the wars of Scotland, temp. EDWARD I., and obtained considerable grants from the crown, in that kingdom. His lordship being with King EDWARD at Burgh upon the Sands, immediately before the monarch's death, was one of those to whom the king recommended his son, and enjoined him not to suffer Piers de Gaveston to come into England again. For which he was ever after much hated by Piers, "being called by him Joseph the Jew, in regard he was tall and pale of countenance." His lordship subsequently joined the coalition against the power of Gaveston, and assisted at the siege of Scarborough Castle, in which, upon its surrender, the favourite was made prisoner, and was soon afterwards beheaded, by orders of the Earl of Warwick, at Blackton Hill, near Warwick.

In the 8th EDWARD II., his lordship was constituted general of all the king's forces, from the river Trent, northwards, to Roxborough, and he obtained license to make a castle of his house at Bampton, in Oxfordshire. Two years later he was again in the Scottish wars, but being made prisoner in his journey towards the court of Rome, by John Moille, a Burgundian, and sent to the emperor, he was constrained to give twenty thousand pounds of silver for his ransom; by reason, Moille alleged, that he himself having served the King of England, had not been paid his wages. After obtaining his liberty, his lordship returned to the wars of Scotland, and for several subsequent years was engaged in that kingdom. In the 15th EDWARD II. he was one of the lords who sat in judgment upon Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, and condemned that prince to death: "but this mercenary and time serving act of infamy," it is said, was speedily atoned for by his own death, which occurred in two years after in France, where, attending Queen Isabel, he was murdered, 27 June, 1323. His lordship m. 1st, Beatrix, dau. of Ralph de Clermont, Seigneur de Nele, constable of France; 2ndly, a dau. of the Comte de Barre, and 3rdly, Mary,* dau. of Guy de Chastillon, Comte de St. Paul, but had no issue. His remains were conveyed to England, and buried in Westminster Abbey. On his lordship's decease, his estates passed to his sisters as co-heirs, and the Earldom of Pembroke became EXTINCT.

VAUGHAN—BARONS VAUGHAN AND EARLS OF CARBERY, AND BARONS VAUGHAN, OF EMLYN.

Barony of Ireland, by Letters Patent, dated 29 July, 1621.

Earldom of Ireland, by Letters Patent, dated 5 August, 1623.

Barony in the Peerage of England, dated 25 October, 1643.

Lineage.

The Vaughans of Golden Grove, derived their descent from Hugh Vaughan, Esq., of Kidwelly, gentleman usher to King HENRY VII. During the great tournament held by that monarch at Richmond in Surrey, in May, 1492, this Hugh Vaughan fought a duel with one Sir James Parker, Knt., concerning the arms which Mr. Garter had given to the said Hugh and which the king permitted him to use, when Parker was slain accidentally as it would seem in the first encounter. From the following entry in a book of the first household expenses of King HENRY VII., it appears that Hugh Vaughan was living, and in his service in 1497. "It. to Hugh Vaughan for ij harpers, xliis. 10d., 2 Jan., 1497." He m. Jane, dau. of Morris ap Owen, and had one son,

JOHN VAUGHAN, Esq., of Golden Grove, who having m. Katherine, dau. of Henry Morgan, Esq., of Moddlescombe, was father of one son,

WALTER VAUGHAN, of Golden Grove, living in 1590, who m. Katherine, dau. of Griffith ap Rhys of Newton, co. Carmarthen, and grand-dau. of Rhys ap Griffith, by Katherine, his wife, who was dau. of Thomas Howard, first Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, K.G., &c., by his 1st wife, Agnes, sister and co-heir of Sir Philip Tilney of Boston, co. Lincoln, and consequently a relation in blood to Queen ELIZABETH, who was great grand-dau. of the said Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, by his 2nd wife, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Frederic Tilney, Knt. By the said Katherine, his wife, Walter Vaughan had issue,

I. JOHN (Sir), of whom presently.

II. WILLIAM (Sir), Knt., of Terracoed, co. Carmarthen, who had also lands in Newfoundland and America, was living in England in 1630. He m. Anne, dau. and heir of John Christmas, of Colchester, co. Essex, and had with other issue a son,

SIR EDWARD VAUGHAN, of Terracoed, who m. Jemima, dau. of Nicholas Bacon, Esq., of Shrubland, co. Suffolk, and had, with other issue, an eldest son,

RICHARD VAUGHAN, Esq., of Terracoed, and afterwards of Shenfield, co. Essex, who m. 1st, Jemima, dau. of John Vaughan, Esq., of Llanelly, and had issue. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Appleton, Bart., of Shenfield, and had with other issue, a son,

JOHN VAUGHAN, of Shenfield, who succeeded to the estate of Golden Grove, by will of Anne, Duchess of Bolton. He m. 1st, Ellen, dau. and heir or co-heir of Nicholas Partridge, Esq., of Doddington, co. Essex; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of John Vaughan, Esq., of Court Derillys, and widow of Thomas Lloyd, Esq., of Danyrallt, who d. 20 January, 1754. He d. 27 January, and was buried at Shenfield, 5 February, 1765, having had issue, by his 1st wife, one son,

RICHARD VAUGHAN, Esq., of Shenfield, and of Golden Grove, who m. 1st, Elizabeth-Philippa, dau. of Charles Phillips, Esq., of Llanelly, and had by her, two sons, John, of Shenfield and Golden Grove, and Charles-Richard, who both d. s. p. He m. 2ndly, 12 September, 1767, Susannah, dau. of John Warner, Esq., of Swansea, and d. at Shenfield, in 1781, having by her (who d. March, 1810) had an only dau.,

SCBAMMA-ELEANORA VAUGHAN, b. 21 December, 1768, who m. at Marylebone, 22 January, 1795, the Rev. Thomas Watkins, M.A., F.R.S., F.S.A., &c., of Pennoyre, co. Brecon, rector of Llandefaillog, and Landefalkey, and left, with other issue,

JOHN-LLOYD-VAUGHAN WATKINS, Esq., late of Pennoyre and Rhosferig, co. Brecon, and Broadway, co. Carmarthen. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

The elder son,

SIR JOHN VAUGHAN, Knt., of Golden Grove, co. Carmarthen, was created a peer of Ireland, as LORD VAUGHAN, of Mullingar, co. Westmeath, 29 July, 1621, and 5 August, 1628, advanced to the dignity of EARL OF CARBERY, also in Ireland. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Sir Gilly Meyrick, Knt., by whom he had one surviving son, RICHARD, his successor, and a dau., Mary, m. to Sir Francis Lloyd. He m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Sir Thomas Palmer, Knt., but had no issue. His lordship was s. at his decease, by his son,

RICHARD VAUGHAN, 2nd Earl of Carbery, who was made a knight of the Bath, at the coronation of King CHARLES I., and was afterwards distinguished in the civil wars as a cavalier leader, being lieutenant-general for the cos. of Carmarthen, Pembroke, and Cardigan; in which command, acting with great zeal and gallantry, he was rewarded with a peerage of England, 25 October, 1643, as BARON VAUGHAN, of Emlyn, co. Carmarthen; and he was constituted after the Restoration, lord president of the principality of Wales. His lordship, m. 1st, Bridget, dau. and heir of Thomas Lloyd, Esq., of Llanleer, co. Cardigan, by whom he had no surviving issue. He m. 2ndly, Frances, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Altham, Knt., of Oxby, in Hertfordshire, by whom he had issue,

VAVASOUR—BARON VAVASOUR.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

Of this family, which derived its surname from the high office of "King's Valvasor" (a dignity little inferior to the baronial), and flourished for many ages in Yorkshire, was,

SIR ROBERT LE VAVASOUR, who in the 9th King JOHN, paid a fine of 1,200 marks and two palfreys, that Maud, his dau., widow of Theobald Walter, might be married to Fulke Fitz-Warine, an eminent baron in those days. In the 31st HENRY III., he was sheriff of the cos. Nottingham and Derby, and so continued until the 39th of the same reign, having in the interim had the custody of the honour of Peverell committed to his charge. He m. Juliana, dau. of Gilbert de Ros, of Steeton, in Yorkshire, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN LE VAVASOUR, who m. Alice, dau. of Sir Robert Cockfield, Knt., and had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir; and MALGER, ancestor of the VAVASOURS of Denton, and of Weston Hall, co. York, who preserved a male succession until recent times.

SIR WILLIAM LE VAVASOUR (the elder son) had, 18th EDWARD I., license to make a castle of his manor house at Haslewood, co. York, and in three years afterwards was in an expedition made into Gascony. He was subsequently in the wars of Scotland, and had summons to parliament as a Baron from 6 February, 1299, to 7 January, 1313. His lordship m. Nicola, dau. of Sir Stephen Wallis, and had three sons, WALTER, ROBERT (Sir), and HENRY, and was s. at his decease by the eldest,

WALTER LE VAVASOUR, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament 26 July, 1313, who d. s. p. Accounts vary as to his heir: Mr. Courthope (Historic Peerage) states that his niece, Elizabeth, only child of Sir Robert le Vavasour, was his heir, and that she m. Sir Robert Strelly, Knt., of Nottinghamshire; but two inquisitions taken on Sir Robert le Vavasour's death, find that Henry le Vavasour, his brother, was his heir. This HENRY LE VAVASOUR, was the direct ancestor of Thomas Vavasour, Esq., of Haslewood, who was created a baronet in 1628.

NOTE.—Of this family it was remarked that in twenty-one descents from Sir Mauger le Vavasour, temp. WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, not one of them had ever married an heir, or ever buried his wife.—BARRA.

VERDON—BARONS VERDON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 June, 1295.

Lineage.

At the General Survey,

BERTRAM DE VERDUN (stated to have been son of Godfrey, Comte de Verdun, surnamed "le Caplif,") possessed Farnham Royal, in Buckinghamshire, holding the same by grand serjeanty: viz., by the service of providing a glove on the day of the king's coronation for his right hand; and of supporting the monarch's right arm during the same ceremony, so long as he bore the royal sceptre. Bertram had three sons,

I. NORMAN, his heir.

II. MILO, d. in Ireland.

III. William, of Brisingham, co. Norfolk, witness to a charter, A.D. 1100, ancestor of the VERDONS of Norfolk, Suffolk, and Northampton.

The eldest son,

NORMAN DE VERDON, living 1140, m. Lasceline, dau. of Geoffrey de Clinton, lord-chamberlain and treasurer to King HENRY I., and had issue,

- I. BERTRAM, his heir.
- II. Nicholas, abbot of Burton.
- III. Robert, m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of Henry de Bourton, of Warwickshire, and was ancestor of the VERDONS of Draycot, co. Warwick, and of Istock, co. Leicester.
- IV. Simon.
- I. Alicia, m. to Ivo de Pantulf, of Wem, co. Salop.

BERTRAM DE VERDON, the eldest son, was sheriff of Leicestershire, from the 16th to the 30th of King HENRY II.'s reign, inclusive. He subsequently attended RICHARD I. to the Holy Land, and was at the siege of Acon, which place, upon its surrender, was committed to his custody. This Bertram founded the abbey of Croxden, co. Stafford, anno 1176, and was otherwise a liberal benefactor to the church. He m. 1st, Maud, dau. of Robert de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Roesia, but of what family is unknown. He d. at Joppa, in 1192, having had issue,

- I. William, d. s. p. 1199.
- II. THOMAS, of whom presently.
- III. Bertram.
- IV. Robert.
- V. NICHOLAS, successor to his brother.
- VI. Walter, constable of Bruges Castle, in Valois, and had a son, Ralf de Verdon.

The 2nd son and heir,

THOMAS DE VERDON, m. Eustachia, dau. of Gilbert Bassett, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Richard Camville,) he had no issue. He d. in Ireland, anno 1199, s. p., when he was s. by his brother,

NICHOLAS DE VERDON, who, in the 6th JOHN, paid to the king £100, as also a courser and palfrey, for livery of those lands in Ireland whereof his father died possessed. But in twelve years afterwards, he took part with the rebellious barons, whereupon all his lands were seized by special precepts from the crown to the sheriffs of Warwick, Leicester, Stafford, Lincoln, Bucks, and Oxford, and placed in the custody of William de Cantilupe, during the king's pleasure. On his submission, however, to King HENRY III., those lands were restored to him in the first year of that monarch, and he appears afterwards to have enjoyed the favour of the king. He died in 1231, leaving (by Joan, his wife,) an only dau. and heiress,

ROESIA DE VERDON, who m. THEOBALD LE BOTILLER, of the noble family of Butler, of Ireland, but being so great an heiress, retained her maiden name after marriage, which her husband adopted. At the time of her father's decease, she appears to have been a widow. This lady, who founded the abbey of Grace Dieu, for Cistercian Monks, at Beldon, in Leicestershire, d. in 1248, leaving issue,

JOHN, her heir.

Humphrey, rector of Alveton, d. at Paris, 1285.

Nicholas, who had the manor of Clunmore, in Ireland, d. s. p.
THEOBALD DE VERDON, ancestor of the VERDONS, Lords of Darlaston and Riddulph, co. Stafford
Maud, m. to John Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel.

Roesia was s. by her eldest son,

JOHN DE VERDON (alias Le Botiller). This great fendal lord, being one of the barons marchers, had orders, in the 44th HENRY III., on the incursions of the Welsh, to keep his residence upon the borders. After which he was one of the barons who adhered to the king, in the conflict between the crown and the nobles; and upon the triumph of the royal cause at Evesham, he was commissioned to raise forces in Worcester-shire, for the purpose of attacking the only remaining hold of the barons, at Kenilworth. But these troubles being at length ended, John de Verdon was signed with the cross, and accompanied Prince Edward to the Holy Land. John de Verdon m. 1st, Margerie, dau. of Gilbert de Lacie, and co-heir to her grandfather, Walter de Lacie, Lord Palatine of Meath, in Ireland, by which alliance the castle of Weobley, co. Hereford, came into the Verdon family; and 2ndly, Alianora, whose surname is unknown. At his death, being slain in Ireland, 1278, he left issue,

- I. NICHOLAS (Sir), of Ewyas Lacie, d. v. p. and s. p. 1271.
- II. John, Lord of Weobley, d. s. p., circa 1295.
- III. THEOBALD, of whom presently.
- IV. Thomas, of Staffordshire; returned as a man-at-arms, 17th EDWARD II.; ancestor, it is believed, of Sir Thomas de Verdon, Knt., of Denston, co. Stafford, and of his brother, Sir John de Verdon, sheriff of Staffordshire, 34th EDWARD III., who d. s. p., leaving his sister, JOAN, wife of JOHN DE WHITMORE, Lord of Whitmore, his heir. This Joan left two daus. and co-heirs, viz.: Joan, m. to Henry Clerk, of Ruyton, co. Salop; and Elizabeth, m. to James de Roghay, Lord of Whitmore. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry, "Mainwaring of Whitmore.")

I. Agnes, d. 1305.

The 3rd son,

THEOBALD DE VERDON, lord of the moiety of Meath, in Ireland, had, in the 3rd EDWARD I., on doing homage, livery of his lands, paying £100 for his relief. At this period, he held the office of constable of Ireland. For some years subsequently, this eminent person seems to have enjoyed the favour of the crown, and to have received several immunities; but in the 19th of EDWARD's reign, we find him arraigned for treason, and divers other misdemeanors, before the king and council, at Berghavenny, and condemned to imprisonment and confiscation; the king, however, taking into consideration the good services of his ancestors, and his own submission, freed him for a fine of 500 marks; and he was soon after summoned to parliament as BARON VERDON. In the 29th of the same reign (EDWARD I.), his lordship was one of the barons in the parliament of Lincoln, who, by a public instrument, under their seals, sent to Pope BONIFACE VIII., asserted the right of King EDWARD, as superior lord of the whole realm of Scotland. Lord Verdon having had summons to parliament to 3 November, 1306, d. in 1309. By Margery, or Elenor, his wife, he had issue,

- I. John (Sir), d. v. p. and s. p. 1297.
- II. THEOBALD, of whom presently.

The elder son,

SIR THEOBALD DE VERDON, 2nd baron, had summons to parliament in the life-time of his father, as "Theobald de Verdon, junior," from 29 December, 1299, to 22 February, 1307, and afterwards, without the word "Junior," from 4 March, 1309, to 24 October, 1314. This nobleman, in the 6th EDWARD II., was constituted justice of Ireland, having likewise the lieutenancy of that realm, and the fee of £500 per annum, then granted to him. His lordship m. 1st, Maud, dau. of Edmund, Lord Mortimer, of Wigmore, by whom, who d. at Alveton Castle, 1315, he had issue,

- I. John, d. s. p.
- II. William, d. s. p.
- I. JOAN, m. 1st, William de Montagu; and 2ndly, Thomas de Furnival, 2nd Lord Furnival, and d. in 1334. Joan had the castle of Alveton as co-heiress of her father.
- II. ELIZABETH, m. to Bartholomew, Lord de Burghersh. Elizabeth had the castle of Ewyas Lacie as her share.
- III. MARGARET, m. 1st, Marcus Husee; 2ndly, William le Blount; and 3rdly, Sir John Crophull. Margaret had the castle of Weobley, as 3rd co-heiress. By Sir John Crophull, she had a son,

Thomas Crophull, whose dau. and heiress,
Agnes, m. Sir Walter Devereux, Knt.

He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, widow of John de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, and dau. and eventually co-heir of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, by Jane Plantagenet, dau. of King EDWARD I., by whom (who m. 3rdly, Sir Roger d'Amorie) he had an only dau.,

- IV. ISABEL, who had the Castle of Ludlow, as 4th co-heiress, m. to Henry Ferrers, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, which Henry d. 17th EDWARD III., leaving by the said Isabel, William, Lord Ferrers.
Philippa, m. to Guy de Beauchamp.
Elizabeth, m. to — de Assella.

Theobald, Lord Verdon, d. at Alveton Castle, and was buried at Croxden, aged circa thirty-four, in 1316, when the Barony of Verdon fell into ABERTANCE amongst his daus., and so continues with their representatives.

VERDON—BARON VERDON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 27 January, 1332.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE VERDON, of Brisingham, co. Norfolk, 3rd son of Bertram de Verdun the Norman (see preceding memoir) was ancestor of the Verdons of Brisingham, whose representative,

JOHN DE VERDUN, a minor at his father's decease, m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Simon Fitz de Lisle, of Brixworth, co. Northampton, and d. circa 1300, having had issue,

- I. JOHN, d. circa 1302.
- II. THOMAS, of whom presently.
- I. Susan, wife of Sir Nicholas Seyton.

The 2nd son,

THOMAS DE VERDUN, Lord of Brisingham, Brixworth, &c., d. 9th EDWARD II., leaving a son,

SIR JOHN DE VERDUN, Knt., of Marthesham, co. Suffolk (having removed from Brisingham), who, dying 1346, left by 1st wife, three sons,

- I. Thomas (Sir), on whom Brixworth was settled in 1329; he d. v. p., leaving by his wife, Alice, an only son, Thomas, who d. s. p. before 25th EDWARD III.
- II. JOHN, of whom presently.
- III. Christopher (Sir).

The 2nd son,

SIR JOHN DE VERDON, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 27 January, 1332, to 22 January, 1336, and again 25 February, 1342. He m. twice: by Maud, his 1st wife, he had a son, Edmund, who d. s. p., v. p., and a dau., MARGARET, m. 1st, to Hugh or Henry Bradshaw; and 2ndly, to Sir John Pilkington; and by Isabel, his 2nd wife, dau. of Sir John Vise de Lore, he had a dau., Isabel, m. to Sir Imbert Noon, Knt., among whose heirs-general this Barony of Verdon is now in ABERNACE.

VERE—EARLS OF OXFORD, MARQUESS OF DUBLIN, DUKE OF IRELAND.

Earldom, Creation of the Empress MAUD, and confirmed by HENRY II., anno 1135.

Marquessate, Creation of RICHARD II., 1385.

Dukedom, Creation of RICHARD II., 1386.

Lineage.

"The noblest subject in England, and indeed, as Englishmen loved to say, the noblest subject in Europe, was Aubrey de Vere, twentieth and last of the old Earls of Oxford. He derived his title through an uninterrupted male descent, from a time when the families of Howard and Seymour were still obscure, when the Nevilles and Percys enjoyed only a provincial celebrity, and when even the great name of Plantagenet had not yet been heard in England. One chief of the house of De Vere had held high command at Hastings; another had marched, with Godfrey and Tancred, over heaps of slaughtered Moslems, to the sepulchre of Christ. The first Earl of Oxford had been minister of Henry Beauclerc. The third earl had been conspicuous among the lords who extorted the great charter from JOHN. The seventh earl had fought bravely at Cressy and Poitiers. The thirteenth earl had, through many vicissitudes of fortune, been the chief of the party of the Red Rose, and had led the van on the decisive day of Bosworth. The seventeenth earl had shone at the court of ELIZABETH, and had won for himself an honourable place among the early masters of English poetry. The nineteenth earl had fallen in arms for the Protestant religion, and for the liberties of Europe, under the walls of Maestricht. His son, Aubrey, in whom closed the longest and most illustrious line of nobles that England has seen, a man of loose morals, but of inoffensive temper, and of courtly manners, was lord-lieutenant of Essex and colonel of the Blues." To these remarks, the author of this work, in his Vicissitudes of Families, ventured thus to refer:—

"Such is Macaulay's glowing and eloquent eulogium on the De Veres—so eloquent, indeed, that one regrets that the panegyric is somewhat exaggerated, and scarcely consistent with recorded fact. The line of the Earls of Oxford was certainly the longest, but as certainly, not the most illustrious that England has seen. In personal achievement and historical importance the De Veres can bear no comparison with the Talbotts, the Howards, the Nevilles, the Percys, or the Scropes; in antiquity of descent, the Courtenays, the De Bohuns, and the Beauchamps were in all respects their equals, and in splendour of alliances, many a less distinguished family far surpassed them. There was scarcely one of our grand old houses of the times of the HENRYS and the EDWARDS that had not more of royal blood. Nevertheless, I must freely admit, although I cannot subscribe to the pre-eminence Macaulay assigns, that this famous house, if inferior to any, was only so to the very first, to the most historic and to the most illustrious of our ancient nobility."

The first mention of the De Veres is in the General Survey of England, made by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, wherein

ALBERIC DE VER possessed numerous lordships in different shires, of which Cheniston (now Kensington), co. Middlesex, was one, and Hedingham, co. Essex, where his castle was situated, and where he chiefly resided, another. This Alberic

m. Beatrix, Countess of Ghienes in her own right, by whom he had five sons, Alberic, Geoffrey, Roger, Robert, and William. Alberic de Vere, in the latter end of his days assumed the cowl, and d. a monk in 1088; he was buried in the church of Colne Priory, which he founded, and was s. by his son,

ALBERIC LE VERE, who being in high favour with King HENRY I., was constituted by that monarch Great Chamberlain of England, to hold the same in fee, to himself and his heirs, with all dignities and liberties thereunto appertaining, as fully and honourably as Robert Malet, lord of the honour of Eye, in Suffolk, who had then been banished and disinherited, had holden the said office. His lordship m. Adeliza, dau. of Gilbert de Clare (or, according to Collins, Adeline, dau. of Roger de Yvery), and had issue,

In the 5th year of King STEPHEN, when joint sheriff (with Richard Bassett, then justice of England,) of Surrey, Cambridge, Essex, and several other counties, his lordship was slain in a popular tumult at London, and was s. by his eldest son, AUBREY DE VERE, who, for his fidelity to the Empress MAUD, was confirmed by that princess in the office of Great Lord Chamberlain, and all his father's territorial possessions. He had likewise other important grants with the Earldom of Cambridge, provided that dignity was not vested in the King of Scots, but if it were, then his lordship was to have his choice of the Earldoms of Oxford, Berkshire, Wiltshire, or Dorsetshire, all which grants being ratified by King HENRY II., his lordship was created EARL OF OXFORD, with the usual grant to earls, of the third penny of the pleas of the county. In the 12th King HENRY II., on the levy of the aid for portioning the king's daughter, the Earl of Oxford certified his knights' fees to be in number twenty-eight, for which he paid £20, and in the 2nd year of King RICHARD I., he paid a fine of 500 marks to the king, "for the sister of Walter de Bolebec, to make a wife for his son." In four years afterwards his lordship contributed £30 2s. 6d. for the knights' fees he then held, towards the sum at that time raised for the ransom of the king. Sarah.

His lordship d. in 1194 (being styled in his monumental inscription Earl of Ghienes and 1st Earl of Oxford), and was s. by his elder son,

AUBREY DE VERE, 2nd Earl of Oxford and Great Chamberlain. This nobleman was sheriff of Essex and Herefordshire from the 10th to the 15th King JOHN, inclusive, and was reputed one of the evil councillors of that monarch. His lordship d. in 1214, and having no issue, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE VERE, 3rd Earl of Oxford and Great Chamberlain, who, pursuing a different course from that of his deceased brother, was one of the celebrated twenty-five barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. In the beginning of the reign of HENRY III., having made his peace, his lordship appears, from a fine levied before him and others, to have been one of the judges in the Court of King's Bench. He m. Isabel, dau. of Hugh, and sister and heir of Walter de Bolebec, by whom he had issue,

I. HUGH, his successor.

II. Henry (Sir), of Great Addington, co. Northampton, whose son, Sir ROBERT, was father of Richard de Vere, who m. Isabel, dau. of John Greene, Esq., of Drayton, and heiress of her brother, whereby the manor of Drayton, co. Northampton, came into this branch of the Vere family, the male line of which terminated with

Sir Henry Vere, of Great Addington, Drayton, &c., who left by his wife, Isabel, dau. of Sir Thomas Trusham, four daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to John, Lord Mordaunt.

Anne, m. to Sir Humphrey Brown, chief justice of the Common Pleas, 34th HENRY VIII.

Constance, m. to John Parr, Esq., younger son of Sir William Parr, K.G.

Etheldred, m. to John Brown, Esq.

The earl d. in 1221, and was s. by his elder son,

HUGH DE VERE, 4th Earl of Oxford and 5th Great Chamberlain. In the 17th King HENRY III. he was knighted at Gloucester, the King at that time solemnizing the feast of Pentecost there. In 1245 his lordship's mother died, and he then, upon giving security for payment of his relief, namely, the sum of £100, and doing homage, had livery of the lands of her inheritance. In the 30th HENRY III. he was one of the subscribing barons to the letter transmitted to the Pope, complaining of the exactions of his holiness upon this realm, and he sat in the parliament, 32nd HENRY III., wherein the king was upbraided with his prodigal expenditure, and informed that neither his treasurer nor chancellor had the confidence of their lordships. The earl m. Hawise, dau. of Sayer de Quincy, Earl of Winchester, and d. in 1263, having had issue, 1. ROBERT, his heir; 2. Aubrey; 3. Richard; 4. Margaret, m. to Hugh de Cressi; 5. Maud; 6. Isabel, m. to John de Courtenay. The eldest son, ROBERT DE VERE, 5th Earl of Oxford and 6th Great Chamberlain, having arrayed himself under the banner of Montfort, Earl of Leicester, was amongst those who were surprised with young Hugh de Montfort, at Kenilworth, a few days before the battle of Evesham, and taken prisoner, but he made his peace soon after, under the "Dictum de Kenilworth," and we find him employed by King EDWARD I. against the Welsh, in the 14th of that monarch's reign. His lordship m. Alice, dau. and heiress of Gilbert de Saundford,* chamberlain in fee to Eleanor, Queen of HENRY III., and had, with other issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

Alphonsus, m. Jane, dau. of Sir Richard Foliot, Knt., and had a son,

JOHN, who s. as 7th Earl of Oxford.

HUGH, BARON VERE (see that title).

Joane, m. to William de Warren.

Lora, m. to Reginald de Argentein.

The earl d. in 1296, and was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT DE VERE, 6th Earl of Oxford and 7th Great Chamberlain, who took part in the wars of Scotland, 24th and 27th EDWARD I. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, but d. a. p. in 1331, when his honours devolved upon his nephew,

JOHN DE VERE, as 7th Earl of Oxford, and 8th Great Chamberlain. This nobleman, who was a military personage of great renown, shared in all the glories of King EDWARD III.'s martial reign. When he s. to the earldom, he had but just attained his eighteenth year, and very soon afterwards we find him with the army in Scotland, where he appears to have been engaged for some years. In the 14th EDWARD III., he attended the king into Flanders. The next year he assisted "at the great feast and jousting in London, which King EDWARD III. caused to be made, as it was said, for the love of the Countess of Salisbury." In the 16th year he was again in the wars of France, to which service he brought forty men-at-arms (himself included), one banneret, nine knights, twenty-nine esquires, and thirty archers on horseback, and had an allowance of fifty-six sacks of wool for the wages of himself and his retinue. The next year he accompanied Henry de Lancaster, Earl of Derby, and divers other great personages, into Scotland, for raising the siege of Lochmaban Castle. And in the 18th, he was in Gascony, at the surrender of Bergerath, after which, proceeding to assault the castle of Pellegrue, he was taken prisoner in his tent, but soon after exchanged for the Viscount de Bonquentyne, when he marched with the Earl of Derby to Attveroch, then besieged by the French, and relieved it. "But about the feast of the Blessed Virgin," writes Dugdale, "returning out of Brittany, he was by tempest cast upon the coast of Connaught, in Ireland, where he and all his company suffered much misery from those barbarous people there, who pillaged them of all they had."

His lordship returned to France soon after this event, and continued with little interruption during the remainder of his life actively and gallantly engaged in the wars in that country.

* This Gilbert inherited the manor of Hormade Magna, co. Herts, and held it by serjeanty of service, in the queen's chamber, which manor was conveyed by his heiress, Alice, to her husband, the Earl of Oxford, and sold by his successor, Edward, Earl of Oxford, temp. ELIZABETH, to Anthony Cage, citizen of London, whose representative, Daniel Cage, at the coronation of King JAMES I., claimed the office of chamberlain to the queen; but the court for determining claims came to no decision upon the case, because the Earl of Oxford held three manors by this office, and there was no proof that Gingee, one of the three, was yet severed from the earldom.

He was one of the heroes of Cressy, and he had a command upon the glorious field of Poitiers. He eventually lost his life from fatigue, in the English army, encamped before the walls of Rhels, 24 January, 1380. The earl m. Maud, sister and heiress of Giles, Lord Badlesmere, and widow of Robert Fitz-Payn, by whom he had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

ACAREY, who, upon the reversal of the attainder of his nephew, Robert, Duke of Ireland, s. as 10th Earl of Oxford (of this nobleman presently).

John, d. s. p.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Sir Nicholas Lovain; 2ndly, to Henry, Lord Beaumont, and 3rdly, to Sir John Devereux, Knt.

His lordship, who left vast landed possessions in the cos. Hereford, Bedford, Leicester, Essex, Buckingham, Hertford, Dorset, Wilts, Suffolk, and Cambridge, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS DE VERE, Knt., 8th Earl of Oxford and 9th Great Chamberlain. Of this nobleman little more is mentioned than his being engaged in foreign warfare like his father, but not with the same renown. His lordship m. in the life-time of the late earl, Maud, dau. of Sir Ralph de Ufford, brother of Robert, Earl of Suffolk, and was s. at his decease, 18 September, 1371, by his only son, ROBERT DE VERE, 9th Earl of Oxford and 10th Lord Chamberlain, K.G., who doing homage, and making proof of his age, in the 6th King RICHARD II., had livery of his lands. His lordship becoming subsequently the favourite of that weak and unfortunate prince, obtained large territorial grants from the crown, amongst which was the castle of Okeham, in Rutland, and was advanced to a new dignity in the peerage, by the title of MARQUESS OF DUBLIN, for life, in which he had summons to parliament, 8 August, 1386. On his elevation to the marquessate his lordship obtained a grant of the lordship and domain of Ireland, with all profits, revenues, and regalities, as amply as the king himself ought to enjoy the same, to hold by homage and allegiance. With the lordship and domain thereof, as aforesaid, "quoad vixerit," he was created DUKE OF IRELAND on 8 August, 1386, on his surrender of the Marquessate. These high honours and immunities exciting the jealousy of the nobles, and the favourite bearing his fortune imperiously, several of the great lords assembled at Haringhay House, near Highgate, co. Middlesex, and evinced open hostility to the royal minion. Thence, at the desire of the king, who became alarmed, they transferred their deliberations to Westminster, and in reply to an interrogatory put to them by the bishop of Ely, then lord chancellor, they demanded that the king should dismiss the traitors that surrounded him, amongst whom they particularized Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland. For the moment, however, RICHARD allayed this tumult by fair promises, but De Vere not considering himself safe, soon after effected his escape, in disguise, to the continent, accompanied by Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk. He subsequently returned to England, at the head of 4000 or 5000 men, and marching into Oxfordshire, was met at Radcotte Bridge, on the river Isis, by the Earl of Derby and Duke of Gloucester, where his troops being surrounded, he could secure personal safety only by abandoning his two gauntlets and armour, and thus swimming down the stream. In the pursuit, his grace's chariot having fallen into the hands of his foes, it is said that they discovered there letters from the king, calling on him to hasten to London, and the Monarch would be ready to live or die for him. In a parliament soon after convened, through the influence of the nobles, the duke, not appearing to a citation, was sentenced to banishment, and at the same time outlawed and attainted. He again, however, effected his escape to the continent, where, being wounded by a wild boar, while hunting, he died of the hurt at Lovaine, anno 1392, in great distress and poverty; his English property being all confiscated, and his honours extinguished by the attainder. When the news of the duke's death reached England, King RICHARD caused his body to be brought over, had the coffin opened, that he might once again see the features of the friend he had loved so well, and attended the corpse himself, in grand procession, to its interment at Earl's Colne, in Essex.

His grace m. 1st, Lady Philippa De Coucy, dau. and co-heiress of Ingelram, Earl of Bedford, by his wife, the Princess Isabel, dau. of King EDWARD III., which noble lady, in the zenith of his prosperity, he repudiated, and m. 2ndly, a Portuguese girl, named Lancerona, stated by some accounts to have been a joiner's daughter, but by others, styled "the Land-gravine," who came out of Bohemia, with Anne, Queen consort of King RICHARD. This lady was the companion of De Vere's banishment and adversity; and there may yet be seen at Earl's Colne, among the De Vere memorials, the tomb and effigy of Lancerona, Duchess of Ireland, conspicuous from the quaint head-dress of "piked horns," introduced by Anne of Bohemia. The duke had no issue, and at his decease the representation of the family reverted to his uncle,

AUBREY DE VERE, who, in the 16th RICHARD II., was, by consent of parliament, restored to all those lands which had been, by fine, entailed previously to the attainder of the deceased duke; having the Earldom of Oxford likewise restored to himself and the heirs male of his body. His lordship, in consequence, took his seat in the House of Peers, as 10th earl; but the office of Great Chamberlain, so long in the Vere family, was bestowed by the king, owing to the restored lord being infirm, upon John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon, for life. The infirmities of his lordship continuing, he had especial license to absent himself from the parliament held at Shrewsbury, in the 21st RICHARD II., in which the judgment passed ten years previously against his nephew, the Duke of Ireland, was revoked and annulled. The earl m. Alice, dau. of John, Lord Fitz-Walter, and had issue,

RICHARD, his successor.

John, d. s. p. 9th HENRY V.

Alice, m. 1st, Gui d'Albon; 2ndly, to Sir John Fitz-Lewes, Knt., and 3rdly, Nicholas Thorley.

His lordship d. in 1400, and was s. by his elder son,

RICHARD DE VERE, 11th Earl of Oxford, K.G. This nobleman was fourteen years of age at the decease of his father, and had a grant of £100 a year out of his own lands for his maintenance during his minority. His lordship inherited very extensive estates in the cos. Essex, Kent, Cambridge, &c., and in the 6th HENRY IV., being then of full age, having assented, that Philippa, Duchess of Ireland, first wife of the attainted duke, should enjoy her dower out of the entailed lands, the king, in compliance with an act of parliament, granted to his lordship and his heirs, all those lands and tenements, which, by the forfeiture of Duke Robert, came to the crown; excepting such as had been disposed of by himself or King RICHARD II.

"About this time," says Dugdale, "or not long before, Maud, Countess of Oxford, widow of Earl Thomas, and mother of Robert, Duke of Ireland, still surviving, caused it to be divulged that King RICHARD II. was alive; and that he would forthwith lay claim to his ancient honour; and procured Harts to be made of silver and gilt (which were badges that King gave to his friends, souldiers, and servants) to be in the king's name distributed in the country, whereby the people might be the sooner allured to rise on his behalf; giving it farther out, that he was privately kept in Scotland till he could have a fit opportunity to come in with an army of French and Scots. Whereupon she was committed to prison, and her goods confiscated." This lady d. in 1422, leaving her cousin, Robert de Willoughby, her next heir. The Earl of Oxford m. Alice, dau. of Sir Richard Serjeant, Knt., of Cornwall, by Lady Philippa-FitzAlan, his wife, and had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Robert, m. Joane, widow of Sir Nicholas Carew, and dau. of Sir Hugh Courtenay, and had issue,

JOHN DE VERE, who m. Alice, widow of Sir Walter Courtenay, and dau. of Walter Kilrington, and left a son,

JOHN, who s. as 15th Earl of Oxford.

His lordship, who had been in the French wars, and was honoured with the Garter, d. in 1417, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE VERE, 12th Earl of Oxford, then in his 9th year. In the 4th HENRY VI. his lordship had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by that monarch, at Leicester, when the king himself received a similar honour at the hands of his uncle, the Duke of Bedford. In the 7th of the same reign, being still in ward, the earl had to pay a fine of £2000 for marrying Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Howard, Knt., the younger, without license; but before the close of that year, having attained majority, and done homage, he had livery of his lands. In the 13th, his lordship obtained license to travel towards the Holy Land, with twelve persons of his company; and to take with him £100 in money, and to receive 500 marks more by way of exchange. In the next year he went into Picardy for the relief of Calais, and the same year performing his homage had livery of all those lands, which, by the death of Margaret, the wife of Sir John Howard, Knight, descended to her dau. Elizabeth, Countess of Oxford, his lordship's consort. After this we find the earl joined in commission with John, Duke of Norfolk, and others, to treat with Charles de Valois, or his ambassadors, touching a peace with France; and during the whole reign of HENRY VI., being a staunch Lancastrian, always enjoying the confidence of the crown; but upon the accession of EDWARD IV., sharing the fate of his party, he was attainted in the 1st parliament of that monarch, with his eldest son, Aubrey, and beheaded on Tower Hill, anno 1461.

His lordship m. as already stated, Elizabeth, only dau. and heiress of Sir John Howard (uncle by the half-blood of John Howard, 1st Duke of Norfolk) and heiress, through her grandmother, Margaret, dau. of Sir John de Platz, to the Barony of Platz, and co-heiress, through her great-grandmother, Margaret, to the Barony of Scales (see p. 476). By Elizabeth, his wife, the earl had issue, i. Aubrey, who m. Anne, dau. of Henry, 1st Duke of Buckingham, but had no issue. He was beheaded with his father, 1st EDWARD IV.

ii. JOHN, restored as 13th earl.

iii. George (Sir), m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of Sir William Stafford, Knt., of Frome, and d. 1503, having had issue,

1 George, who d. in his father's lifetime, 1498.

2 JOHN, who inherited as 14th Earl of Oxford.

1 DOROTHEA, m. to John Nevill, Lord Latimer, and had issue; for the co-heirs of this marriage, the senior of whom is the DUKE OF ATHOLE (refer to p. 398).

2 Elizabeth, m. to Sir Anthony Wingfield, K.G., the co-heiress of the marriage centered in Adrien, MARQUESS DE COURBONNELL, of France, and VICE-ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM-HENRY DILLON.

3 Ursula, m. 1st, to George Windsor, Esq., and 2ndly, to Sir Edmund Knightly. She d. s. p. in 1560.

iv. Richard (Sir), m. Margaret Percy.

v. Thomas (Sir), d. s. p. in 1489.

i. Mary, a nun at Barking.

ii. Joane, m. to Sir William Norris, Knt., of Yatenden.

iii. Elizabeth, m. to William Bouchier, son and heir of Henry, Earl of Essex.

On the attainder and execution of John, 12th Earl of Oxford, all the honours of the family EXPIRED, but his lordship's 2nd and eldest surviving son,

JOHN DE VERE, was restored as 13th Earl of Oxford, K.G., during the temporary triumph of the House of Lancaster in the 10th EDWARD IV., when he sat as lord high steward at the trial of John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, who was condemned and beheaded on Tower Hill. But his lordship, with Richard Nevill, the stout Earl of Warwick, being soon after totally routed by the Yorkists, at Barnet, and King EDWARD re-established upon the throne, himself and his two brothers, Sir George and Sir Thomas Vere, were attainted, but pardoned as to their lives. Subsequently escaping from prison, and ardently embarking in the cause of Henry, Earl of Richmond, Oxford commanded the archers of the vanguard, at Bosworth Field, and there mainly contributed, by his valour and skill, to the victory which terminated the bloody and procrastinated contest between the Houses of York and Lancaster. On the accession of his chief to the crown of England as HENRY VII., his lordship was immediately restored to all his possessions, and sworn of the privy council; and at the coronation of the king he was constituted one of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high steward of England. The earl had besides large grants of confiscated property, and was made constable of the Tower of London, and lord high admiral of England, Ireland, and the Duchy of Aquitaine. At the coronation of the Queen consort, 3rd HENRY VII., his lordship was again one of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high steward, and he had subsequently a chief command in suppressing the rebellion of Lambert Simnell and his partizans; as he had a few years afterwards in opposing Lord Audley and the Cornish men at Blackheath. Upon the accession of King HENRY VIII., the Earl of Oxford was restored to the office of Great Chamberlain of England, originally granted to his ancestor, Aubrey de Vere, by King HENRY I., in which year he had the constabship of the castle of Clare, co. Suffolk, confirmed to him for life; as also a grant and confirmation of the castle of Colchester, which MAUD, the Empress conferred upon his family. Of this distinguished personage (who was celebrated for his splendid hospitality, and was esteemed a gallant, learned, and religious man,) and King HENRY VII., the following story is told:

The monarch visiting the earl's castle of Hedingham, was there sumptuously entertained by the princely noble; and at his departure his lordship's livery servants ranged on both sides, made an avenue for the king; which attracting his highness's attention, he called out to the earl and said, "My lord, I have heard much of your hospitality, but I see it is greater than the speech. These handsome gentlemen and yeomen, which I see on both sides of me, are surely your menial servants?" The earl smiled, and said, "It may please your grace they were not for mine ease; they are most of them my retainers, that are come to do me service at such a time as this; and chiefly to see your grace." The king started a little, and rejoined, "By my faith, my lord, I thank you for my good cheer, but I may not endure to have my laws broken in my sight; my attorney must speak with you." It is added that this affair cost his lordship eventually no less than 15,000 marks in the shape of compromise.

The earl m. 1st, Lady Margaret Nevill, dau. of Richard, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had a son, John, who d. young in the Tower of London during his father's exile. His lordship m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Richard Scrope, Knt., and widow of William, Viscount Beaumont, but had no issue. The earl who with his other honours was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1513, and was s. by (the eldest surviving son of his deceased brother, Sir George Vere) his nephew,

JOHN DE VERE, as 14th Earl of Oxford, commonly called, "Little John of Campea," from his diminutive stature, and residence at Castle Campea, in Cambridgeshire. His lordship m. Lady Anne Howard, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, but had no issue. He d. in 1526, when his sisters (refer to children of Sir George Vere, son of John, 12th earl,) became heirs to the ancient baronies of the family, and those fell into ABEYANCE between them, as they still continue with their descendants; while the Earldom of Oxford passed to his cousin and heir-at-law (refer to descendants of the Hon. Robert Vere, 2nd son of Richard, 11th earl),

JOHN DE VERE, as 15th Earl of Oxford and Great Chamberlain, K.G. This nobleman was a privy councillor in the reign of HENRY VIII., and supported the measures of the court. He signed the articles exhibited by the King against Cardinal Wolsey, and his name was to the letter addressed to the Pope (CLEMENT VII.) by several of the nobility and divers churchmen, declaring that unless his holiness sanctioned the king's divorce from Queen Katharine, the supremacy of the holy see within this realm would terminate.

The earl m. Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Sir Edward Trussel, Knt., of Cublesdon, co. Stafford, by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his successor,

Aubrey, m. Margaret, dau. of John Spring, Esq., of Lavenham, co. Suffolk, and had, with other issue,

HUGH, m. Eleanor, dau. of — Walsh, Esq., and left a son, ROBERT, who s. as 19th Earl of Oxford.

Geffery, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Hardkyn of Colchester, and had, with other issue, Francis (Sir), some time governor of Brill, in the Netherlands.

HORATIO, the celebrated Lord Vere, of Tilbury. (See that dignity.)

Frances, m. to Sir Robert Harcourt, Knt., ancestor of the extinct Earls of Harcourt.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas, Lord Darcy, of Chiche.

Anne, m. to Edmund Sheffield, Lord Sheffield.

Frances, m. to Henry, Earl of Surrey.

His lordship, who was a knight of the Garter, d. in 1539, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN DE VERE, 16th Earl of Oxford and Great Chamberlain, who, in the 32nd HENRY VIII., had livery of those lands which descended to him from Elizabeth, his mother, sister and heir of John Trussel, Esq.; and in the 36th of the same monarch was in the expedition into France, when Bulloigne was besieged and taken. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Dorothy Nevill, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Westmoreland, by whom he had an only dau.,

Katherine, m. to Edward, Lord Windsor.

The earl m. 2ndly, Margery, dau. of John Golding, Esq., of Halstead, co. Essex, auditor of the exchequer, and sister of Sir Thomas Golding, Knt., of Notta, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Christopher Tyrrell, and d. 2 December, 1568,) he had issue,

EDWARD, his successor.

Mary, m. to Peregrine Bertie, 10th Lord Willoughby de Eresby, by whom she had,

ROBERT, 11th Lord Willoughby de Eresby, who claimed the Earldom of Oxford and the office of Great Chamberlain, in right of his mother; but s. in the latter only. He was, however, created EARL OF LINDSAY. In this earldom and the subsequent Dukedom of Ancaster, the Barony of Willoughby and the chamberlainship continued, until the extinction in 1809, of those dignities, when the Great chamberlainship devolved jointly upon the last Duke of Ancaster's sisters and heirs, Priscilla, Lady Gwydyr, and Georgiana-Charlotte, Marchioness of Cholmondeley, and it is now vested in Lord Willoughby de Eresby and the Marquess of Cholmondeley.

The earl d. in 1562, and was s. by his elder son,

EDWARD DE VERE, 17th Earl of Oxford and Great Chamberlain, who was one of the peers appointed, 29th ELIZABETH, to sit in judgment upon the unhappy MARY Queen of Scotland, and had a command in the fleet equipped to oppose the Armada, in 1588. His lordship was one of the wits of the period in which he lived, and distinguished alike by his patriotism and chivalrous spirit. In the tournaments of ELIZABETH's reign he was pre-eminently conspicuous, and on two occasions was honoured with a prize from her Majesty's own hand, being conducted, armed by two ladies, into the presence chamber for the purpose of receiving the high reward. Walpole says that he obtained reputation as a poet, and was esteemed the first writer of comedy in his time. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of William Cecil, the celebrated Lord (Treasurer) Burghley, and had issue,

Elizabeth, m. to William, Earl of Derby; the heir-general of this marriage is the DUKES OF ATHOLE.

Bridget, m. to Francis, Lord Norris, of Rycote; the heir-general of this marriage is the EARL OF ABERGOMERY.

Susan, m. to Philip Herbert, Earl of Montgomery; the heir-general of this marriage is the EARL OF PEMBROKE.

The earl m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Trentham, Esq., of Rowcester, co. Stafford, by whom he had an only child,

HENRY, his successor.

This Lord Oxford was the first person who introduced perfumes and embroidered gloves into England, and on his presentation of a pair of the latter to Queen ELIZABETH, her Majesty was so pleased with them, that she had her picture painted with those gloves on. His lordship, who seems to have dissipated the noble inheritance of his family, lived to an advanced age, and dying in 1604, was s. by his son,

HENRY DE VERE, 18th Earl of Oxford, and Great Chamberlain, who m. Lady Diana Cecil, 2nd dau. of William, Earl of Exeter, one of the greatest fortunes and most celebrated beauties of the period, but had no issue. His lordship d. at the siege of Breda, in the Netherlands, where he had the command of a regiment in 1625, when his honours devolved upon his cousin (refer to descendants of Aubrey, 2nd son of John, 15th earl),

ROBERT DE VERE, as 19th Earl of Oxford. In the 2nd CHARLES I., there was great controversy between this Robert and Robert Bertie, then Lord Willoughby de Eresby, in consequence of the latter claiming in right of his mother, Mary, dau. of John, 16th Earl of Oxford, and sister and heiress of Edward, 17th earl, the Earldom of Oxford, with the baronies in fee belonging to the family, and the Great Chamberlainship of England. The judges, gave their opinion, however, in parliament, "that the earldom was well descended upon the heir male; but that the baronies having devolved upon heirs female, the three sisters of John, 14th earl (refer to children of Sir George Vere, 3rd son of the 12th earl,) were then in ABEYANCE." As to the office of Great Chamberlain, it was also referred to the judges, then attending in parliament, to report, whether "that Robert, Earl of Oxford, who made the entail thereof, temp. RICHARD II., on the heir male, was at that time seized thereof or not, and admitting that he was, then whether such an office might be conveyed by way of limiting of uses." On this reference three of the judges, Doderidge, Yelverton, and Trevor, decided for Lord Willoughby,* and two, Chief Justice Crew, and Chief Baron Walter, for the heir male; five of their lordships only attending. Whereupon the Lord Willoughby was admitted 13 April, 13th CHARLES I., into the house with his staff of office; and took his place above all the barons, according to the statute of 31st HENRY VIII., and the next day, Robert de Vere took his seat as Earl of Oxford, next to the Earl of Arundel. His lordship m. a Dutch lady, Beatrix Van Hemmend, by whom he left, at his decease in 1632 (falling at the siege of Maestrich, where he commanded a regiment,) an only surviving child, his successor,

AUBREY DE VERE, 20th Earl of Oxford, K.G. This nobleman, at the decease of his father, was but six years of age, and in ward to King CHARLES I. In 1648 he had command of a regiment of English infantry in the service of the States General. During the civil war he espoused the royal cause, and suffered much in consequence, but after the Restoration he was sworn of the privy council, made a knight of the Garter, and appointed lord-lieutenant of the co. Essex. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. and co-heir of Paul, Viscount Bayning, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Diana, dau. of George Kirke, Esq., one of the groom of the bedchamber to King CHARLES I., by whom he had,

Charles, } both d. young.
Charlotte, }

Diana, m. to Charles Beauclerk (illegitimate son of CHARLES

* This decision appears strangely at variance with our present notions; Lord Willoughby was not the heir-general of the DE VEREs, but was simply the nearest relation by the full blood to the last holder of the title. (See Vicissitudes of Families, vol. 2, p. 434.)

II.) DUKE OF ST. ALBANS. This lady became, eventually, sole heiress of her father, and representative of Aubrey de Vere, last Earl of Oxford.

Mary, } both d. unm.
Henrietta, }

The earl d. "at a miserable cottage" 12 March, 1702 (having acquiesced in the expulsion of the royal house, which he had previously so zealously upheld,) and with him the very ancient Earldom of Oxford, which had passed through twenty generations, is supposed to have become EXTINCT. How can this brief epitome of the history of the De Veres be more appropriately concluded, than by the following quotation from the summing up of Chief Justice Crew, at the great controversy of the time of CHARLES I.—"This great and weighty cause" (these are the chief justice's words,) "incomparable to any other that hath happened at any time, requires great deliberation, and solid and mature judgment to determine it; and I wish that all the judges of England had heard it (it being a fit case for all), to the end we all together might have given our humble advice to your lordships herein. Here is represented to your lordships certain honoris, and, as I may well say, illustris honoris, illustrious honour. I heard a great peer of this realm, and a learned, say, when he lived there was no King in Christendom had such a subject as Oxford. He came in with the Conqueror, Earl of Gyrnes; shortly after the Conquest, made Great Chamberlain of England, above 500 years ago, by HENRY I., the Conqueror's son, brother to RUFUS; by MAUD, the empress, Earl of Oxford; confirmed and approved by HENRY II., Alberico comiti, so earl before. This great honour, this high and noble dignity hath continued ever since in the remarkable surname of De Vere, by so many ages, descents and generations, as no other kingdom can produce such a peer in one and the self same name and title. I find in all this length of time, but two attainders of this noble family, and those in stormy and tempestuous times, when the government was unsettled, and the kingdom in competition. I have laboured to make a covenant with myself, that affection may not press upon judgment, for I suppose there is not many that hath any apprehension of gentry or nobleness, but his affection stands to the continuance of so noble a name and house, and would take hold of a twig or a twine thread to uphold it. And yet, time hath his revolutions; there must be a period and an end to all things temporal—finis rerum—an end of names and dignities and whatever is terrene, and why not of De Vere? For where is Bohun? Where is Mowbray? Where is Mortimer? Nay, which is more and most of all, where is Plantagenet? They are entombed in the urns and sepulchres of mortality! And yet let the name and dignity of De Vere stand so long as it pleaseth God."

A family of VERE seated at Carlton, Notts, which traces back its ancestry to William Vere, of Hints, co. Stafford, temp. JAMES I., has long asserted a claim to the Earldom of Oxford.

VERE—BARON VERE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 27 September, 1299.

Lineage.

HUGH DE VERE, one of the younger sons of Robert, 5th Earl of Oxford, a military personage of high reputation, was summoned to parliament as a Baron from 27 September, 1299, to 3 March, 1318. In the 25th EDWARD I., he was joined in an embassy to France with the bishop of Gloucester, for negotiating peace between the two crowns; and the next year he was deputed to the court of Rome on a mission of great importance. He was, subsequently, employed upon other diplomatic occasions, and was actively engaged in the Scottish wars. His lordship m. Dyonisia, dau. and heiress of William, son of Warine de Monchensy, which lady d. s. p. in 1313, when Adomare de Valence, son of the Lady Joane de Valence, was found to be her next heir. Lord Vere does not appear to have m. a second time, and the barony became therefore, at his decease, EXTINCT.

Arms—Same as De Vere, Earl of Oxford, with proper difference.

VERE—BARON VERE, OF TILBURY, CO. ESSEX.

By Letters Patent, dated 24 July, 1625.

Lineage.

GEOFFREY DE VERE, 3rd son of John, 15th Earl of Oxford, and brother of John, 16th earl, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Hardkyn, Knt., of Colchester, and had issue, Francis (Sir). Of the exploits of this gallant person an account appeared in 1657, under the title of The Commentaries of Sir Francis Vere, being diverse pieces of service, wherein he had command, written by himself, published by William Dellingham, D.D. Sir Francis m. Elizabeth Dent, dau. and co-heir of a citizen of London, by whom he had several children, all of whom, however, predeceased himself unm. He d. in 1608, and was interred in Westminster Abbey, under a splendid monument.

Geoffrey, d. unm.

HORATIO, of whom presently.

Frances, m. to Sir Robert Harcourt, ancestor of the Earls of Harcourt.

The youngest son,

SIR HORATIO VERE, Knt., becoming one of the most eminent persons of the period in which he lived, was elevated to the peerage for his distinguished services, by King CHARLES I., in the dignity of BARON VERE, of Tilbury, co. Essex, 21 July, 1625. The exploits of this gallant personage form a brilliant page in British History, and it would be in vain to attempt even to epitomize them here. He was so great a military officer that the first generals were proud of having served under him; and Clarendon in mentioning Edward, Lord Conway, says, "he was bred up a soldier, in several commands under the particular care of Lord Vere." He also observes, that "Monk, Duke of Albemarle, had the reputation of a good foot officer, when he was in the Lord Vere's regiment in Holland." Fuller in his Worthies thus characterizes his lordship: "Horace, Lord Vere, had more meekness and as much valour as his brother; of an excellent temper: it being true of him what is said of the Caspian Sea, that it doth never ebb, nor flow, observing a constant tenor, neither elated or depressed with success. Both lived in war much honoured, and died in peace much lamented." Lord Vere m. Mary, dau. of Sir William Tracy, Knt., of Toddington, co. Gloucester, and relict of William Hoby, Esq., and had five daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to John Holles, 2nd Earl of Clare, and had issue,

GILBERT, 3rd Earl of Clare, whose son,

JOHN, 4th Earl of Clare, was created DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, K.G., and d. in 1711, leaving an only dau. and heiress,

Lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles, who m. Edward Harley, 2nd Earl of Oxford, and had an only dau. and heiress, Lady Margaret Cavendish Harley, m. to William, 2nd Duke of Portland.

On the demise of John Holles, Duke of Newcastle, the honours of the Holles family expired, but they were revived in his grace's nephew, Thomas, Lord Pelham, from whom the extant Dukes of Newcastle derive.

Mary, m. to Sir Roger Townshend, Bart., of Raynham, co. Norfolk, from which marriage the extant Marquesses Townshend derive. Her ladyship m., after the decease of Sir Roger, Mildmay Fane, 2nd Earl of Westmoreland, and had issue, VERE, who s. his half-brother, Charles, as 4th Earl of Westmoreland.

Catherine, m. 1st, Oliver, son and heir of Sir John St. John, of Lydiard Tregoze, and 2ndly, John, Lord Paulet.

Anne, m. to the celebrated parliamentary general, Sir Thomas Fairfax, Lord Fairfax, by whom she had an only dau. and heiress, Mary, m. to George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham.

Dorothy, m. to John Wolstenholme, Esq., eldest son of Sir John Wolstenholme, Bart. of Noatley, co. York, by whom she had no issue. Mr. Wolstenholme predeceased his father and was buried at Stanmore under a stately monument of white marble.

His lordship d. 2 May, 1635, when the Barony of Vere, of Tilbury, became EXTINCT. Horatio, Lord Vere, was interred near his brother, Sir Francis, in Westminster Abbey.

VERNON — BARON ORWELL, OF NEWBY, AND EARL OF SHIPBROOK.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 17 April, 1762

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 28 January, 1777.

Lineage.

The Vernons were a family of noble Norman origin, and their ancestors were seigneurs of Vernon, in Normandy. William de Vernon founded and richly endowed the collegiate church of St. Mary there, in 1052, where he is interred. His eldest son, Richard, accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to England, and was one of the barons created by Hugh Lupus, to whom King WILLIAM, in the 20th year of his reign, granted the county palatine of Chester. His great-grandson, Warine de Vernon, 4th Baron of Shipbrook, was father of William, who married the heiress of Avenel, of Haddon, co. Derby.

WARINE DE VERNON had an elder son, Richard, who carried on the line of the elder branch, the Barons of Shipbrook, of whom one of the descendants,

RALPH VERNON (2nd son of Ralph Vernon, of Haslington, Esq., by Isabella, his wife, dau. of Thomas Leversage, of Willock, co. Chester), m. Elizabeth, sister of Thomas Moreton, and had issue; his 2nd son,

VESCI—BARONS VESCI

By Writ of Summons, dated 24 December, 1264.

Lineage.

Amongst the most valiant of the Norman nobility in the train of the CONQUEROR were

ROBERT DE VESCI, who possessed at the General Survey the lordship of Hadebrock, in Northamptonshire, with divers other estates in the cos. Warwick, Lincoln, and Leicester; and

YVO DE VESCI, on whom King WILLIAM bestowed in marriage, Alda, only dau. and heiress of William Tyson, Lord of Alnwick, in Northumberland, and Malton, in Yorkshire (which William's father, Gilbert Tyson, fell at Hastings, fighting under the Anglo-Saxon banner). By this great heiress Yvo had an only dau. and heir, BEATRICE DE VESCI, who m. EUSTACE FITZ-JOHN,* Lord of Knareborough, in Yorkshire, and had two sons,

WILLIAM, of whom presently Geoffrey.

The elder son of Beatrice, having inherited the great possessions of his mother's family, assumed its surname, and became

WILLIAM DE VESCI. This feudal lord was sheriff of Northumberland, from the 3rd to the 15th HENRY II. inclusive, and he was subsequently sheriff of Lancashire. In the 12th of the same reign, upon levying the aid for marrying the king's dau., he certified his knights' fees, de veteri feoffamento, to be in number twenty, for which he paid £17 13s., and for his knights' fees, de novo feoffamento, £1 8s. 6d. In 1174, he joined

* EUSTACE FITZ-JOHN, nephew and heir of Serlo de Burgh (of the great family of Burgh), the founder of Knareborough Castle, in Yorkshire, and son of JOHN, called Monoculus, from having but one eye, is said by an historian of the period in which he lived, to have been "one of the chiefest peers of England," and of intimate familiarity with King HENRY I., as also a person of great wisdom and singular judgment in councils. He had immense grants from the crown, and was constituted governor of the castle of Bamburgh, in Northumberland, temp. HENRY I., of which governorship, however, he was deprived by King STEPHEN; but he subsequently enjoyed the favour of that monarch. He fell the ensuing reign, anno 1157, in an engagement with the Welsh, "a great and aged man, and of the chiefest English peers, most eminent for his wealth and wisdom." By his 1st wife, the heiress of Vesce, he had two sons, as in the text, and by Agnes, his 2nd wife, dau. of William Fitz-Nigel, Baron of Halton, and constable of Chester, he left another son, called

RICHARD, FITZ-EUSTACE, Baron of Halton, and constable of Chester, who m. Albreda Lisours, half-sister of Robert de Lacy, and had issue,

JOHN, who becoming heir to his uncle, the said Robert de Lacy, assumed the surname of LACY, and was ancestor of the Earls of Lincoln, of that family (see Lacy, Earls of Lincoln).

ROGER, surnamed Fitz-Richard, progenitor of the great families of Clavering (see Clavering).

Ranulph de Glanvil, Bernard Balliol, and Robert de Stutevil, in repelling an invasion of the Scots, and fought and won the great battle of Alnwick, wherein the King of Scotland himself was made prisoner, after his whole army had been routed. This William de Vesce m. Burga, sister of Robert de Estoteville, or Stuteville, Lord of Knarebrough, by whom he acquired the town of Langton, and had two sons,

EUSTACE, his successor.

Warine, Lord of Knapton, whose only dau. and heiress,

MARGERIE DE VESCI, m. Gilbert de Aton, and his great-grandson,

GILBERT DE ATON, inherited eventually all the lands of the De Vesce (see ATON, Barons Aton).

He was s. at his decease in 1184, by the elder,

EUSTACE DE VESCI, who attaining majority in the 2nd RICHARD I., gave 2,300 marks for livery of his lands, with liberty to marry whom he pleased. In the 14th King JOHN, when the first commotion arose amongst the barons, the king, hastening to London, summoned all the suspected lords thither, and forced each to give hostages for his peaceable demeanour. But this Eustace, one of the most suspected, refused to attend the summons, and fled into Scotland, when all his possessions in England were seized upon by the crown, and a special command issued to demolish his castle at Alnwick. But a reconciliation between the king and his turbulent nobles soon afterwards taking place through the influence of the legate Pandulph, Eustace had restitution of his estates. But this was a deceitful calm—the winds were only stilled, to rage with greater violence—the baronial conflict ere long burst forth more furiously, and was only allayed by those concessions on the part of the crown, which have immortalized the plains of Runnymede. The cause of this celebrated quarrel, in which, by the way the people had little or no immediate interest, was doubtless, of long standing, and was based on the encroachment of the Sovereign on the privileges of the nobility; but the spark that ignited the flame was personal injury; an affront inflicted by King JOHN on this Eustace de Vesce. "Hearing," writes Sir William Dugdale, "that Eustace de Vesce had a very beautiful wife, but far distant from court, and studying how to accomplish his licentious desires towards her, sitting at table with her husband, and seeing a ring on his finger he laid hold on it, and told him that he had such another stone, which he resolved to set in gold, in that very form. And having thus got the ring, presently sent it to her, in her husband's name; by that token conjuring her, if ever she expected to see him alive, to come speedily to him. She, therefore, upon sight of the ring, gave credit to the messenger, and came with all expedition. But so it happened, that her husband casually riding out, met her on the road, and marvelling much to see her there, asked what the matter was? and when he understood how they were both deluded, resolved to find a common woman, and put her in apparel to personate his lady." The king afterwards boasting of the favours he had received to the injured husband himself, Eustace had the pleasure of undeceiving him, "whereat the king grew so enraged, that he threatened to kill him; Eustace, therefore, apprehending danger, hastened into the north, and in his passage, wasted some of the king's houses; divers of the nobles, whose wives the king had vitiated, accompanying him. And being grown strong by the confluence of their friends, and others, seized his castles, the Londoners adhering to them." When JOHN was, subsequently, brought to submission, EUSTACE DE VESCI was one of the twenty-five Barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta, but he was slain soon after, about 1216, by an arrow from the ramparts of Barnard Castle (belonging to Hugh de Balliol), which he had commenced besieging, or was about to attack. He had m. Margaret, natural dau. of WILLIAM, King of Scotland, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE VESCI, who, being in minority, was placed under the guardianship of William de Longespée, Earl of Salisbury. In the 10th HENRY III. he obtained livery of all his lands, as well as of the castle of Alnwick (but the castle of Knareborough had been alienated previously to the Stutevil's Dugdale surmises, in the time of JOHN). After this we find no more of him until the 29th of the same reign, when he had a grant of five bucks and ten does, to be taken out of the king's forests at Northumberland, to stock his park at Alnwick, and he then paid to the king, upon collection of the aid for marrying his dau., £12, for his twelve knights' fees in Northumberland. He m. 1st, Isabel, dau. of William Longespée, Earl of Salisbury, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Agnes, dau. of William Ferrers, Earl of Derby, by whom he had two sons, JOHN and William, and dying in 1253, was s. by the elder,

JOHN DE VESCI, then in minority, and in ward, with Alnwick Castle to Peter de Savoy. This feudal lord was one of King HENRY III.'s chief commanders in the wars of Gascony, but afterwards joining with Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and the other barons, who had taken up arms to compel the king to observe the ordinances of Oxford, he was summoned to parliament, as a Baron by those lords, 24 December, 1264, when their power became dominant after the battle of Lewes, but he was afterwards made prisoner at Evesham, and forced to avail himself of the protection of the Dictum de Kenilworth. His lordship subsequently assumed the cross, and made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. On his return, in the 2nd EDWARD I., he was constituted governor of Scarborough Castle, and in the 10th of the same reign was in the wars of Wales. This was the Sir John Vesel, who returning from the King of Arragon, brought over a great number of Gascoignes to King EDWARD to serve him in his Welsh wars. His lordship m. Mary, sister of Hugh de Lescinian, Earl of March and Angouleme; and 2ndly, Isabel de Beaumont, sister of Henry Lord Beaumont, styled Earl of Buchan, and kinswoman of Queen Eleanor but d. in 1289, a. p., when the great possessions of the family devolved upon his brother (then forty years of age).

WILLIAM DE VESCI, who was a person in great esteem with EDWARD I., and constituted by that monarch, in the 13th year of his reign, justice of the royal forests beyond Trent, and the next year one of the justices itinerant touching the pleas of the forests. After succeeding his brother he was made governor of Scarborough Castle, and the year ensuing, doing his homage, had livery of all those lands in Ireland which were of the inheritance of Agnes, his mother, and he was made at the same time justice of that kingdom. But during his sojourn there, he was accused in open court, in the city of Dublin, in the presence of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, and others, of felony, and challenged to the combat by John Fitz-Thomas; for which he subsequently instituted a suit before the chief justice of Dublin against the said Fitz-Thomas on a charge of defamation, in saying, that he the said William de Vesel, had solicited him to a confederacy against the king; which charge being denied by Fitz-Thomas, and a schedule by him delivered into court, containing the words which he acknowledged, he was, thereupon, challenged to the combat by this William, and he accepted the challenge. But the king being apprised of the proceedings, prohibited the battle, and ordered the combatants to appear before him at Westminster; to which place William de Vesel came accordingly, mounted upon his great horse covered, as also completely armed with lance, dagger, coat of mail, and other military equipments, and proffered himself to the fight; but Fitz-Thomas, although called, appeared not. The affair was afterwards brought before parliament, but dismissed owing to some informality. It was finally submitted to the award of the king, but the ulterior proceedings are not recorded. In the 23rd EDWARD I. William de Vesel was again in the wars of Gascony, and he was summoned to parliament as a Baron 24 June, 1 October, and 2 November, 1295. His lordship was one of the competitors for the crown of Scotland, through his grandmother, Margaret.* He m. Isabel dau. of Adam de Periton, and widow of Robert de Welles, by whom he had an only son, JOHN, who was justice of the forests south of Trent, and was in the wars of Gascony. He m. Clementina, a kinswoman of Queen Eleanor, but d. s. p., v. p.

On the decease of his son, his lordship enfeoffed Anthony Beke, bishop of Durham, in the castle of Alnwick, and divers other lands, in trust for William, his bastard son, who became possessed of all his other estates. This trust the prelate is said to have basely betrayed, and to have alienated the property by disposing of it for ready money to William Percy; since which time the castle of Alnwick, and those lands, have been held by the Percys and their representatives. His lordship d. in 1297, when all his great inheritance passed to his bastard son, WILLIAM DE KILDARE, save the estates above-mentioned, in Northumberland; and the Barony of Vesel, became extinct.

VISCOUNT DE VESCI, of Ireland, claims descent from this old Baronial family.

Arms—Gu., a cross, arg.

* The illegitimacy of this lady and her sisters, daus. of WILLIAM THE LION, is obviously established by the fact of their claim being at once dismissed. Whereas had they been legitimately born, their pretensions were prior to those of either Baliol or Bruce, who had sprung from David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of King WILLIAM.

Lineage.

This family, which is still extant, in the noble houses of Jersey and Clarendon, claimed descent from the Villiers, Seigneurs of L'Isle Adam, in Normandy, through one of that house, who came into England with the CONQUEROR.

SIR GEORGE VILLIERS, Knt., of Brokesby, co. Leicester, a person of eminent note, m. 1st, Audrey, dau. of William Sanders, Esq. of Harrington, co. Northampton, and had issue, WILLIAM, created a baronet in 1619, a dignity which expired with his grandson, Sir William Villiers, in 1711.

EDWARD, from whom the present EARLS OF JERSEY and CLARENDON descend. (See BURKE'S Extant Pedigree and Baronetage.)

Elizabeth, m. to John, Lord Butler, of Bramfield.

Anne, m. to Sir William Washington, Knt., of Pakington, co. Lincoln.

Frances.

Sir George Villiers m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Anthony Beaumont, Esq., of Glenfield, co. Leicester, which lady survived her husband, and was created Countess of Buckingham for life: by her he had issue,

JOHN (Sir), created VISCOUNT PURBECK (see Villiers, Viscounts Purbeck).

GEORGE, of whom presently.

CHRISTOPHER, created Earl of Anglesey (see Villiers, Earls of Anglesey).

Susan, m. to William Fielding, Earl of Denbigh.

Sir George, who was sheriff of the co. Leicester, in 1691, d. 4 January, 1695. His 2nd son by his last wife,

GEORGE VILLIERS, b. at Brokesby, 29 August, 1692, received the first rudiments of his education at Billesden school, in Leicestershire, whence being removed at the age of thirteen, by his mother, he was sent to France, and there soon attained perfection in all polite accomplishments. On his return home, he came first to London as a suitor to the dau. of Sir Roger Ashton, one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber, and master of the robes to King JAMES I., but was dissuaded from the connection by another courtier, Sir John Graham, another of the gentlemen of the privy chamber, who encouraged him to "woo fortune in the court." Soon after this he attracted the attention of King JAMES, and succeeded the favourite Carr, Earl of Somerset, as cup-bearer to his Majesty (being, says Dugdale, of stature tall and comely, his comportment graceful and of a most sweet disposition). From this period he rose rapidly in royal estimation, and the queen through the influence of Abbot, archbishop of Canterbury, an enemy of Somerset's, being induced also to protect him, his fortune was at once established. The first honour he received was that of knighthood, which was conferred in her Majesty's bedchamber, with the prince's rapier; he was then sworn a gentleman of the bedchamber (23 April, 1615) with an annual pension of £1,000 payable out of the Court of Wards. The ensuing January he succeeded the Earl of Worcester as master of the horse, and in a few months after was installed a knight of the Garter. Before the close of the year (27 August, 1616) he was advanced to the peerage, by the title of BARON WHADDON, co. Bucks, the ceremony of creation being performed at Woodstock, the Lords Compton and Norris introducing the new peer, and Lord Carew carrying his robe: and he was very soon after created VISCOUNT VILLIERS. On 5 January, 1616-7, his lordship was created EARL OF BUCKINGHAM, with a special remainder, in default of male issue, to his brothers John and Christopher, and their male issue; and on the 1st of the same month, in the ensuing year, MARQUESS OF BUCKINGHAM. This last dignity was succeeded by his appointment to the great office of lord high admiral, and his being sworn of the privy council; and about this time his lordship was constituted chief justice in Eyre; master of the King's Bench office; high steward of Westminster; constable of Windsor Castle; and chancellor of the university of Cambridge.

In 1623 the marquess was sent into Spain with Prince Charles, to accelerate the marriage then in contemplation between his royal highness and a Spanish princess. The journey, a very singular one, commenced 18 February, when the Prince and Marquess, putting on false beards, assumed the names of Thomas and John Smith, their sole attendant being Sir Richard Graham, master of the horse. Riding post to Canterbury, where they took fresh horses, they were stopped by the mayor as suspicious persons, whereupon the marquess was constrained to take off his beard, and to satisfy Mr. Mayor, by stating that he was going in that private manner to survey the fleet, as lord high admiral. At Dover, they found the prince's private secretary, Sir Francis Cottington, and Mr. Endymion Porter, who had provided a vessel for their use, on which they embarked, and landing at Boulogne, proceeded to Paris, and thence travelled through France to Madrid. During their sojourn in Paris, the marquess is said to have fallen in love with the Queen of France (Anne, of Austria, consort of Louis XIII.) Certain it is, that, on his return, Richelieu refused him permission to land in a French port. At Madrid, Buckingham was involved in a dispute with the Comte d'Olivarez, and received some affronts for his haughty bearing, French garb, and great familiarity with the prince. His royal master continuing however to lavish favours upon him, sent out letters patent, dated 18 May, 1623, creating him DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and EARL OF COVENTRY. The prince and duke, failing in the object of their journey, departed from Madrid 12 September, and arrived at Portsmouth in October, when his grace was made lord warden of the Cinque Ports, and steward of the manor of Hampton Court. The death of King James followed in about a year and a half, but the influence of Buckingham experienced no diminution. His grace officiated as lord high steward at the coronation of the new king; and was soon after sent upon an embassy into Holland, where he purchased a rare collection of Arabic manuscripts, procured in remote countries by the industry and diligence of Erpinus, a famous linguist. Those valuable papers were presented to the university of Cambridge, for which he intended them, after the duke's death. His grace continued to bask in the same sunshine of royal favour under King Charles that he had so beneficially enjoyed in the last reign, but with the people he had become an object of great detestation. His influence was paramount, and to that influence were attributed all the grievances of the nation. The failure, too, of an expedition to the Isle of Rhee, for the relief of the Rochellers, completed his unpopularity. To recover the ground he had lost by this untoward enterprise, his grace projected another expedition, and had repaired to Portsmouth in order to forward its sailing. Here, while passing through a lobby, after breakfasting with Sir Thomas Fryer, and other persons of distinction, he was stabbed to the heart with a pen-knife by one John Felton, a lieutenant in Sir John Ramsay's regiment, and died instantaneously. The assassination of the duke* took place 23 August, 1628, when he had just completed his thirty-sixth year. His duchess was in the house in an upper room, hardly out of bed, and the King and Court at Sir Daniel Norton's, at Southwick, not much more than six miles off.

His Grace had m. 1620, Lady Katherine Manners, only dau. and heiress of Francis, 6th Earl of Rutland and Baron de Ros (which latter dignity she inherited at the decease of her father in 1632.) and by her (who m. 2ndly, Randal Macdonell, Marquess of Antrim,) had issue,

GEORGE, his successor.

Francis (posthumous), called by Aubrey "the beautiful Francis Villiers," killed in a skirmish with the parliamentarians after a most gallant resistance, in 1645, and d. unm.

MARY, who, by letters patent, dated 31 August, 1628, had the title of Duchess of Buckingham limited to her in case of the failure of the male issue of her father: m. 1st, in 1634, Sir Charles Herbert, K.B., Lord Herbert, son of Philip, 4th Earl of Pembroke, who d. in a few weeks afterwards of the small pox, without cohabiting with his bride. Her ladyship m. 2ndly, James Stuart, Duke of Richmond and Lennox, K.G., and had an only son, Esme Stuart, Duke of Richmond and Lennox, who d. unm. 14 August, 1660; and a dau., Mary, m. to Richard, Earl of Arran. Her grace m. 3rdly, Thomas Howard, brother of Charles, Earl of Carlisle, but had no issue. She d. in 1685.

The duke was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE VILLIERS, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and in right of his mother, Baron de Ros; he was b. at Wallingford House, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, 30 January, 1627-8. This nobleman was very young at the time of his father's murder, and spent some years abroad after that event, travelling. He returned to England during the civil war, and had a command in the royal army at the battle of Worcester, 3 September, 1651, from which unfortunate field, making his escape with difficulty, he reached London, and was thence enabled to make good his retreat to Holland. At the restoration of the monarchy his grace, with General Monk, rode uncovered before the king on his public entry into London, and he was soon after made a knight of the Garter. The Duke of Buckingham formed one of the unpopular administration of King CHARLES II., which was designated the Cabal, from the initial letters of the ministers' names. "But towards the latter end of that monarch's reign," says Banks, "by his strange conduct and unsteady temper, he sunk very low in the opinion of most people. He first seduced the wife of Francis Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, and then killed the earl in a duel."

Walpole, in his Catalogue of Noble Authors observes, "when this extraordinary man, with the figure and genius of Alcibiades, could equally charm the presbyterian Fairfax, and the dissolute CHARLES; when he alike ridiculed the witty king, and his solemn chancellor; when he plotted the ruin of his country with a cabal of bad ministers, or equally unprincipled, supported its cause with bad patriots, one laments that such parts should be devoid of every virtue. But when Alcibiades turns chemist, when he is a real bubble, and a visionary miser, when ambition is but a frolic, when the worst designs are for the foolish ends, contempt extinguishes all reflections on his character."

This nobleman, profligate as he was, held an elevated place amongst the beaux esprits of his day, and as a wit was equalled but by few of his contemporaries.

The Rehearsal, a well-known comedy, and other plays, were among his literary productions.

"He began life (says Banks), with all the advantages of fortune and person which a nobleman could covet; and afterwards, by favour of the King, had great opportunities of making himself as considerable as his father had been. But he miserably wasted his estate, forfeited his honour, damned his reputation, and, at the time of his death, is said to have wanted even the necessaries of life, and not to have had one friend in the world."

Dryden, with admirable truth, thus portrays the second Buckingham:—

true," for excepting to himself and one person more (who was not likely to disclose it,) the same was not known to any one living. It is also related, that, the day after the duke's death, John Buckridge, Bishop of Ely, was pitched upon as the proper person to make known to the Countess of Denbigh, the melancholy tidings of her brother's death, whom she tenderly loved; that hearing, when he came to wait upon her, she was at rest, he attended till she should wake of herself, which she did with the affrightment of a dream; her brother seeming to pass through a field with her in her coach, where hearing a sudden shout of the people, and asking the reason of it, was answered, "that it was for joy the Duke of Buckingham was dead." This dream she had scarce told her gentlewoman, when the bishop entered the room to acquaint her with the mournful news.—BANKS.

* It is said, on the relation of Bishop Burnet, that the apparition of Sir George Villiers, his father, appeared to a man who had been formerly an old servant of the family, entreating him to go to the duke, and warn him that some sad fatality would certainly happen to him, unless he did something to please the people, and remove their grievances. The old man, surprised at such a vision, was terrified: but on the same appearing a second and a third time, he at last resolved to see the duke; and having obtained an interview, acquainted him with what had passed, and by a communication of certain events, touching a peculiar circumstance in the duke's life, convinced his grace so perfectly of what he had seen, that the duke exclaimed, "It must be

"A man so various that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinion— always in the wrong—
Was everything by starts, but nothing long;
Who, in the course of one revolving moon
Was chemist, fiddler, statesman, and buffoon;
Then, all for women, painting, rhyming, drinking;
Besides a thousand freaks that died in thinking."

Pope, also, describes him as more famous for his vices than his misfortunes; that having been possessed of about £50,000 a year, and passed through many of the highest posts in the kingdom, he died in 1687, at a remote inn in Yorkshire, reduced to the utmost misery.

"Behold what blessings, wealth to life can lend,
And see what comfort it affords our end!
In the worst inn's worst room, with mat half hung,
The floor of plaster and the walls of dung;
On once a flock-bed, but repaired with straw;
With tape-tyed curtains never meant to draw;
The George and Garter dangling from that bed,
Where tawdry yellow strove with dirty red,
Great Villiers lies: alas! how changed from him,
That life of pleasure and that soul of whim!
Gallant and gay, in Cliveden's proud alcove,
The bow'r of wanton Shrewsbury and love;
Or just as gay at council, in a ring
Of mimic statesmen, and their merry king.
No wit to flatter left of all his store;
No fool to laugh at, which he valued more!
There, victor of his health, of fortune, friends,
And fame, this lord of useless thousands ends."

His grace m. Mary, only dau. and heiress of Thomas, Lord Fairfax, the parliamentary general, and granddau. maternally of Horatio, Lord Vere, of Tilbury, but had no issue. He d. 16 April, 1687, and the event is thus recorded in the parish register of Kirby Moorside:—"George Villars, Lord dooke of Buckingham." His sister MARY, to whom the Dukedom of Buckingham was in remainder, provided she had outlived the male descendants of her father, having predeceased him, all the honours* which he had inherited from his father became EXTINCT, while the Barony of Ros, derived from his mother, fell into ABEYANCE between the heirs general of the sisters and heirs of George Manners, 7th Earl of Rutland.

VILLIERS—COUNTESS OF BUCKINGHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 1 July, 1618.

Lineage.

MARY VILLIERS, dau. of Anthony Beaumont, Esq., of Glenfield, co. Leicester, widow of Sir George Villiers, of Brokeby, and mother of George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, was created COUNTESS OF BUCKINGHAM, for life, by letters patent, dated 1 July, 1618. Her ladyship m. 2ndly, Sir William Rayner, and 3rdly, Sir Thomas Compton, Knt., brother of William, 1st Earl of Northampton, and d. 19 April, 1632, in her sixty-third year, being buried in St. Edmund's Chapel, Westminster Abbey. At the countess's death the dignity of course EXPIRED.

VILLIERS—BARON VILLIERS, OF STOKE, CO. BUCKS, VISCOUNT PURBECK.

By Letters Patent, dated 19 July, 1619.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN VILLIERS, Knt., elder brother of King JAMES's celebrated favourite, George, Duke of Buckingham (see VILLIERS, Dukes of Buckingham), was elevated to the peerage, 19 July, 1619, as Baron Villiers, of Stoke, co. Bucks, and Viscount of PURBECK, co. Dorset. His lordship m. 1st, Frances, dau. of the eminent Chief Justice (Sir Edward) Coke, a lady who eloped from him, in 1621, with Sir Robert Howard, and after her misconduct assumed the name of Wright, and gave birth, privately, to a son, who also bore that surname. She d. in the king's garrison, at Oxford, in 1645, and was buried in St. Mary's Church. His lordship m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir

* The Earldom of Buckingham was subsequently, but fruitlessly claimed, by the alleged descendant of his grace's uncle, Sir John Villiers (see Villiers, Viscount Purbeck).

William Slingsby, of Kippax, co. York, but had no issue. The viscount d. in 1657, when the Barony of Villiers, of Stoke, and the Viscounty of Purbeck became EXTINCT.

THE following narrative gives a succinct account of the celebrated Purbeck case, and of the line of the Villiers family which claimed to be entitled to the VISCOUNTY OF PURBECK:—

The father of George Villiers, the favourite raised by King JAMES to the Dukedom of Buckingham, was twice married. The descendants of the first marriage ascended slowly to the honours of the peerage, and are now represented in the male line by the Earls of Jersey and of Clarendon. The sons of the second marriage, brothers of the whole blood to the favourite, were ennobled with a rapidity proportioned to that of his own elevation. John Villiers, the eldest son of this second family, had, in the dawn of the fortunes of his honour, aspired to the hand of Frances, the daughter of Sir Edward Coke, but his advances had been repulsed. To the girl herself the proposals were most distasteful; and the friends of the daughter of the successful lawyer and courtier, "a lady of transcending beauty," and sole heiress of the great wealth and high blood of her mother,* might well expect for her a more advantageous alliance than any member of the Villiers family then afforded. Soon, however, Fortune reversed her wheel, and Coke, pursued by the united hostility of George Villiers and Francis Bacon, was, in the year 1617, deprived of the chief justiceship, expelled the privy council, and threatened with the terrors of the Star-chamber for some portion of the legal reports which he had published. In this crisis of his fate, the father bethought himself that, by the sacrifice of his daughter, he might appease the angry elements, which, gathering round his political horizon, seemed ready to overwhelm him: and the venerable sage of the law immediately volunteered to confer the disconsolate fair one, together with a large portion, on the late rejected brother of George Villiers—the price of the favour of the young ex-cupbearer. The ambition of Sir Edward Coke surmounted the extraordinary difficulties which were opposed to his plan; but the subsequent disgrace of his daughter, and the deferred hopes and evaded claims of her male descendants, present a fearful warning to such success as his.

Bacon, then lord keeper, determined to spare no effort to hinder the accomplishment of a plan, which tended to transfer to his rival all the court influence of Buckingham: with him, therefore, in a letter written in the summer of 1617, he thus remonstrated on the subject:—

"The mother's consent is not had, nor the young gentleman's, who expecteth a great fortune from her mother, which, without her consent, is endangered. This match, out of my faith and freedom towards your Lordship, I hold very inconvenient both for your brother and yourself. First, he shall marry into a disgraced house, which in reason of state is never held good. Next he shall marry into a troubled house of man and wife, which in religion and Christian discretion is disliked. Thirdly, your Lordship will go near to lose all such your friends as are adverse to Sir Edward Coke, myself only except, who, out of a pure love and thankfulness, shall ever be firm to you. And lastly, and chiefly, it will greatly weaken and distract the king's service." He, therefore, earnestly recommends that that match should be broken off, "or not proceeded in without the consent of both parents, required by religion and the law of God."

Having given to Buckingham this recommendation:

"The brightest, wisest, meanest, of mankind," did all in his power to prevent the possibility of the mother consenting; though, as he himself had been a rejected suitor of Lady Hatton, he would have been deterred—could any feelings of delicacy have deterred him—from interfering in the family affairs of his successful rival. There had, however, been a connection between the family of Bacon and that of

* The second wife of Lord Chief Justice Coke was Elizabeth Cecil, dau. of the 1st Earl of Exeter, by Dorothy Neville, the co-heiress of the 1st Lord Latimer. For her first husband she had married Sir William Newport, who, having succeeded to the property of his maternal uncle, Sir Christopher Hatton, the lord chancellor, took the name of Hatton. By this marriage, says Lord Campbell, in his Lives of the Chancellors, Coke "got possession of Chancellor Hatton's estate, along with a companion who kept him in trouble the rest of his days."

Lady Hatton* (as in spite of her second marriage she continued to be called), which might have afforded him facilities for tendering his advice. And, with Bacon's concurrence, Lady Hatton carried off her daughter from her father's house, and concealed her in the residence of Sir Edmund Withipole, near Catlands. The ex-chief justice traced the flight of the young lady, and then demanded a warrant from the lord keeper to recover her. The warrant being refused, the father, accompanied by the sons of his first marriage, and at the head of a band of armed men, proceeded to the retreat of Miss Frances Coke, and forcibly resumed possession of her.

"For this alleged outrage he was summoned, and several times examined before the Council; and, by the Lord Keeper's direction, Yelverton, the Attorney General, filed an information against him in the Star-chamber.

"Intelligence of these events being brought to Edinboro' (where James was then staying), the King and Buckingham put an end to the sullen silence they had for some time observed towards the Lord Keeper, and wrote him letters filled with bitter complaints, invectives and threats. Bacon suddenly awoke from a trance, and all at once saw his imprudence and his danger. In an agony of terror, he ordered the Attorney General to discontinue the prosecution in the Star-chamber; he sent for Lady Hatton, and tried to reconcile her to the match, and he made the most abject submission to Buckingham's mother who had complained of being insulted by him."

In the end Bacon was allowed to retain the great seal; Coke was restored to the privy council; and Frances Coke, having first been tied to the bed-post and whipped† into consent, became, 29 September, 1617, the struggling and reluctant bride of Sir John Villiers.

Enriched by this alliance, Sir John Villiers was, 19 July, 1619, created Baron Villiers, of Stoke Poges‡ and Viscount Purbeck; and he and his heirs male were placed next in remainder for the titles of Baron Whaddon, Viscount Villiers, and Earl of Buckingham, in the event of the failure of the issue male of his brother, the duke.

About two years after his elevation to the peerage, it has been stated that Lord Purbeck was afflicted with insanity; and that his wife, parting from him, cohabited with Sir Robert Howard,§ 5th son of the Earl of Suffolk, lord high chamberlain. And, however little confirmation there may be for the former allegation there is unfortunately abundant for the latter. A son having been born (who will presently be treated of), Lady Purbeck and the reputed father, Sir Robert Howard, were both prosecuted for adultery in the Court of High Commission; and were convicted and sentenced to do penance. Lady Purbeck escaped the humiliating ceremony by concealing herself, but her paramour had probably to undergo it, for in 1640, when the Court of High Commission was abolished, a fine of £500 was, at the suit of Sir Robert Howard, imposed on Archbishop Laud, who had passed the sentence. No attempts to obtain a divorce or legal separation were made by Lord Purbeck; but henceforward Lady Purbeck, together with her son, are stated to have been taken care of by her mother, Lady Hatton. Lady Purbeck d. in 1645, and was buried at St. Mary's Church, Oxford. Lord Purbeck m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Slingsby, of Kippax, in Yorkshire; but had no issue by her. He d. in 1657, and was buried at Charlton, near Greenwich.

The child, to whom it has been mentioned that Lady Purbeck had given birth, was, bapt. clandestinely, 20 October, 1624, at St. Giles's, Cripplegate, London, under the name of "Robert Wright," and, though reputed to be the son of Sir Robert Howard, he afterwards bore the name of Villiers, and joined with Lord Purbeck, as his son, in the conveyance of some lands. Finally, having m. 23 November, 1648, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heiress, of Sir John Danvers, of Chelsea, M.P., one of the judges who condemned CHARLES I., he availed himself of the circumstance to obtain a patent from Cromwell to relinquish the surname of Villiers and assume that of Danvers, professing to hate the former name on account of the many disservices which, as he alleged, the family bearing it had done to the commonwealth. He disclaimed the peerage, and sat in the House of Commons, in the Convention Parliament of 1659, as M.P. for Westbury; when, being accused in the House of Lords of treasonable expressions, namely, that "he hated the Stuarts, and that, if no person could be found to cut off the King's head, he would do it himself," and in consequence summoned to attend there in his place as a peer, to answer to the charge, he refused to attend, on the ground that he was a member of the lower House. This plea, however, did not avail him, and he was compelled to kneel and ask pardon for it at the bar of the Lords. Still anxious to divest himself of his peerage, he, under legal advice, and with the consent of CHARLES II., levied a fine of his titles in possession and remainder. Latterly he retired to his estate called Siluria, in the parish of Houghton, in Radnorshire, but d. in Calais, in 1675. In the administration of his goods, granted at Doctors' Commons in 1676, he is described as "Robert Danvers, alias Villiers, Esquire." His wife survived him; and, considering, as she states in a letter to her steward, that the possession of a title would assist her son to an advantageous alliance, now again called herself Viscountess Purbeck. She m. 2ndly, but at a period of life too advanced for issue, John Duval, Esq., a colonel in the army. Her will in which she styles herself "Elizabeth Viscountess Purbeck, of Hatton Garden, widow," was dated 14 July, 1709, and proved at Doctors' Commons, in the autumn of the same year. In it she mentions her two grandsons, "John Villiers, Earl of Bucks," and "George Villiers," and her three daus., "Dame Frances Deerham," "Mrs. Elizabeth Maurice," and "Dame Mary Wogan, widow of Sir William Wogan, Knt., and Sergeant-at-Law." Lady Purbeck was buried at Chelsea, 22 August, 1709.

To Robert and Elizabeth Villiers, or Danvers, were born two sons, Robert and Edward, who, each resuming the name of Villiers, were the respective fathers of the two grandsons mentioned in the will. The elder of these sons, Robert, claimed after his father's death, the title of which his father had laboured to divest himself. He petitioned CHARLES II. on the subject, and was referred to the House of Lords. His claim was there opposed on two grounds: that the fine levied by his father barred his right to the honours, and that his father was not, in fact, the son of John Villiers, the 1st Viscount Purbeck.

In 1678 the Lords came to the important resolution—one involving a great constitutional principle—that "no fine now levied nor at any time hereafter to be levied to the King, can bar a title of honour or the right of any person claiming such title under him that levied or shall levy such fine." The House further resolved, that the king should be petitioned to give leave that a bill may be brought in to disable the petitioner from claiming the title of Viscount Purbeck. To this latter resolution a protest was made signed by seven peers, stating that "the said claimant's right (the bar of the fine of his ancestors being removed) did, both at the hearing at the bar and debate in the House, appear to them clear in fact and law, and above all objection." The king, on a petition in conformity with the resolution of the House of Lords being presented to him, answered that he "would take it into consideration;" and, as the bill contemplated was never brought in, the family continued to claim its old titles, together with those which subsequently devolved on it on the death of the last Duke of Buckingham of the Villiers name, although no writ was issued summoning its representatives to the House of Lords. The 3rd Viscount Purbeck was killed at the age of twenty-eight, in a duel fought at Liege with Colonel Luttrell, in 1684; in the June of which year he is described, in the administration taken out to his goods at Doctors' Commons, as "Robert Lord Viscount Purbeck, alias Villiers, alias Danvers, Esquire." He had m. Margaret,* relict of Charles, Viscount Muskerry and only child of Ulick de Burgh, 1st Marquess of Clanricarde, in Ireland, and 2nd Earl of St. Albans in England, and by her had issue, an only surviving child, John Villiers, who was seven years old at his father's death.

This John Villiers, after 16 April, 1687, when the 2nd Duke of Buckingham, "in the worst inn's worst room," had breathed his last, assumed the title of Earl of Buckingham, by which henceforward he was known, instead of that of Viscount Purbeck. Having lived a life of debauchery, and squandered his

He had no sons, and his claims, therefore to the Villiers peerages passed to a younger branch of the family, which will presently be treated of. His wife is described as having been the mother of two daus., who d. unm. Of one of these the burial register of Merton, in Surrey, for 18 May, 1703, thus disposes—"Lady Mary Villiers, daughter of the Right Honourable Earl of Buckingham and Lord Viscount Purbeck, of this parish." The other dau., Lady Elizabeth Villiers, is stated in an imperfect modern pedigree, in the Heralds' College, to have been born in 1701. In the 56th vol. of the Gentleman's Magazine, p. 620, is a long obituary and genealogical notice of her, stating that she had died in Tavistock Court, Tavistock Street, London, 4 July, 1786.

Returning to the children of Robert Villiers and Elizabeth Danvers, his wife, we shall recollect that there was a younger son, Edward Villiers. He was born at Knighton, in Radnorshire, 28 March, 1661, became a captain in the army, and d. at Canterbury, in 1691. He had m. Joan, dau. of Mr. William Heming, a brewer, at Worcester. The marriage took place in the private chapel of the bishop of Worcester, in consequence of the bride being related to Dr. Thomas, who then possessed this see.

The issue of this marriage was George Villiers, who was born at Worcester, 11 April, 1690, and educated at Westminster school. He matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, 28 June, 1709, and was thus described on this occasion in the books of the University: "George Villiers Edvardi de Civitat. Worcester gen. fil." He took his degree of M.A., 20 April, 1716; and, entering holy orders, became vicar of Chalgrove, in Oxfordshire. On the death of his first cousin, John Villiers, in 1723, without male issue, he claimed the title of Earl of Buckingham, but appears to have abstained from using it. He d. at Chalgrove in 1748. By his will, dated 30 March, 1748, and proved at Doctors' Commons, 10 May following—after reciting that he had settled his real property by a deed dated 20 May, 1731, and that he had given her fortune to his dau., Catherine, on her marriage to the Rev. Mr. Lewis—he directs that Mary, his other daughter, shall receive a like fortune, bequeaths to Mr. Lewis his wife's portrait, in water colours, and appoints his own wife sole executrix. He had married, according to a pedigree at p. 5 of a MS. vol. in the Heralds' College, lettered B.P., the dau. of T. Stephens, Esq.; and his will is proved by Catherine, his widow.

The Rev. George Villiers and Catherine, his wife, had the following issue: George, Edward, Catherine (by whom alone the family was continued), and Mary.

George,* the eldest son, was entered at Christ Church, Oxford, 2 July, 1742, and having taken holy orders, was instituted vicar of Frodsham, in Cheshire, in 1772, and d. 24 June, 1774, aged fifty. His will, in which he styles himself of St. George, the parish of the Martyr, in Southwark, Surrey, Clerk, is dated 30 June, 1770, and proved 16 December, 1774. In it he devises to his wife, Mary, for life, and, in default of issue, to his right heir, his manor and rectory of Aylsham Burgh,—a property which had been settled by Sir Edward Coke on his dau. He d. s. p.

His brother, Edward, d. a bachelor; and, with these two brothers, expired the male line of this family.† Their sister, Mary, d. unm.

It has already been stated that the husband of Catherine Villiers was named Lewis. He, the Rev. John Lewis, was instituted dean of Ossory, in Ireland, 24 May, 1753. His wife, dying 13 April, 1756, he m. a second time, and had a second family, and d. 28 June, 1783.

The children of the marriage of Catherine Villiers and John

* During the youth of this gentleman, some efforts are said to have been made by the family to obtain a summons to the House of Lords, which his devotion to the Jacobite cause is supposed to have rendered hopeless. Mr. Murray, afterwards Lord Mansfield, was consulted on the subject of the claim; and exchanged with this family assurances of devotion to the exiled Stuarts, which, when he received office, he was imagined to have betrayed, to the disadvantage of his former clients. Republicans during the reign of the Stuarts—Jacobites during the reign of the Guelphs—this unfortunate family seems always to have "had hold of the wrong end of the stick."

† It is to be observed that, in consequence of the claims of this family, the title of Buckingham was not again conferred till after its extinction in the male line; and that the Shakespeares, though commonly called Dukes of Buckingham, were in fact created Dukes of Buckinghamshire.

Lewis, were John Joseph Lewis, who d. unm. In early manhood, and is believed to have been drowned at sea, Villiers William Lewis, of whom presently, Elizabeth-Catherine Lewis, who was m. to William Surtees, Esq., of Seaton-burn, near Newcastle-on-Tyne, and had issue, and Cassandra Lewis, presumed to have d. unm.

Villiers William Lewis, inheriting Aylsham Burgh Manor, as the right heir to his uncle, the Rev. George Villiers, of Frodsham, took the surname of Villiers, and marrying Matilda, dau. of the 11th Lord St. John of Bletsoe, had an only son, George-William Villiers, who was accidentally killed at Tours, in 1841. The eldest son of this gentleman, GEORGE-WILLIAM VILLIERS-VILLIERS, Esq., of Bath, is, through his great-grandmother, Catherine Villiers, the present representative of this unfortunate, but historic line. He is also one of the co-heirs of the Baronies of Scales, Playtz, &c.

(See FITE-ROY, Duke of Cleveland and Southampton.)

VILLIERS—EARL OF GRANDISON.

By Letters Patent, dated 11 September, 1721, and 19 February, 1767.

Lineage.

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq., of Brookeby, eldest son of Sir George Villiers, Knt. (by his 1st marriage with Audrey, dau. and heiress of William Sanders, Esq. of Harrington, co. Northampton,) was created a Baronet, 19 July, 1619, but the title ceased in 1711. at the demise of the grandson of the first possessor, s. p. The eldest son, by his 2nd marriage, of Sir George Villiers, and the half-brother of Sir William, the 1st baronet, was George, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, the celebrated favourite of JAMES I. and CHARLES I., who fell by the hand of the assassin Felton, 23 August, 1628. The 2nd son of the above Sir George Villiers, Knt., by his 1st wife, and consequently brother of Sir William Villiers aforesaid, was

SIR EDWARD VILLIERS, who received the honour of knight-hood, 7 September, 1616, having been employed, in 1620, as ambassador to Bohemia, and was, in 1622, through the interest of his half-brother, the Duke of Buckingham, nominated President of the province of Munster, in Ireland, at the decease of the Earl of Thomond. Sir Edward m. Barbara, eldest dau. of Sir John St. John, of Lidiard Tregaze, co. Wilts, and niece of Sir Oliver St. John, who was created 3 January, 1620, Viscount Grandison, in the peerage of Ireland, with remainder to the issue male of his sister, Lady Villiers. By this marriage Sir Edward had four sons and three daughters.

- I. WILLIAM, his heir.
- II. JOHN, successor to his brother.
- III. GEORGE, successor to his brother John.
- IV. EDWARD (Sir), ancestor of the EARLS OF JERSEY.
1. Anne, m. 1st, Richard, only son and heir of Lord Wenman; and 2ndly, to James Howard, 3rd Earl of Suffolk.
- II. Ellen.

Sir Edward d. 7 September, 1626, lamented more deeply than any governor who had previously ruled the province, and was interred in the Earl of Cork's chapel at Youghal, where the following lines were engraven upon his tomb:—

"Munster may curse the time that Villiers came
To make us worse by leaving such a name
Of noble parts as none can imitate
But those whose hearts are married to the state;
But if they press to imitate his fame,
Munster may bless the time that Villiers came."

The eldest son,

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq., s. to the estates of his father, and, on the demise of his uncle in 1630, became 2nd Viscount Grandison. Actively espousing the cause of CHARLES I., his lordship received a wound at the siege of Bristol, 26 July, 1643, of which he d. in the following month at Oxford, leaving, by Mary, his wife, dau. of Paul, Viscount Bayning, an only dau., Barbara (wife of Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemaine, in Ireland,) afterwards Duchess of Cleveland, and mistress of CHARLES II. His brother and heir,

JOHN VILLIERS, 3rd Viscount Grandison, d. s. p., when the honours devolved upon his brother,

GEORGE VILLIERS, 4th viscount, who m. Lady Mary Legh, 2nd dau. and co-heiress of Sir Francis Legh, Bart., created Lord Dunsmore in 1628, and Earl of Chichester in 1644, and had two sons and two daughters.

- I. Edward, a brigadier-general in the army, and lieutenant-col. of the Queen's regiment of horse; m. in 1677, Catherine, dau. and heir of John Fitzgerald, Esq., of Dromana, co. Waterford, by whom he obtained a considerable landed property in that county. He d. in 1693, leaving

1 JOHN, who s. to the viscountcy.

2 William.

1 Mary, m. to Brigadier-Gen. Stuart.

2 Harriet, m. to Robert Pitt, Esq., by whom she was mother of WILLIAM PITT, 1st EARL OF CHATHAM.

Mrs. Villiers obtained a patent from King WILLIAM in 1699, granting her the privilege to enjoy the same title and precedence as if her husband had survived his father, and had actually been possessed of the honour of VISCOUNT GRANDISON. She m. 2ndly, Lieut.-Gen. William Stuart, M.P., P.C., appointed, in 1711, commander-in-chief of the army during the Duke of Ormonde's absence.

- II. William, d. 7 September, 1723, having m. Catherine, 2nd dau. of Sir Edward Villiers, his father's younger brother, and widow of Lewis-Jame Le Vassen, Marquess de Puissara, in France.

1. Audrey, m. to Richard Harrison, Esq., of Balla, near Hertford.

II. A dau. m. to Skinner Byde, Esq.

Lord Grandison d. in 1699, and was s. by his grandson,

JOHN VILLIERS, 5th Viscount Grandison, who was created EARL GRANDISON, of Limerick, 11 September, 1721. His lordship m. Lady Frances Cary, dau. of Anthony, Viscount Falkland, by whom he had issue: 1 JAMES, Lord Villiers, M.P., who m. Jane, dau. and heir of Richard Butler, Esq., and had three children, who d. in infancy: he d. 12 December, 1732: his widow m. 2ndly, Lucius-Charles, Viscount Falkland; 2 WILLIAM, Lord Villiers, d. unm., 1739; and 3 ELIZABETH, eventual heiress. The earl d. 14 May, 1766, when the earldom expired, the viscountcy descended to his kinsman, William, 3rd Earl of Jersey, and his estates passed to his dau.,

LADY ELIZABETH VILLIERS, who had been elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 10 April, 1746, as VISCOUNTESS GRANDISON, of Dromana, co. Waterford, and was, after her father's death, advanced to be COUNTESS GRANDISON, 19 February, 1767. Her ladyship m. 1st, 12 June, 1739, Aland John Mason, Esq., M.P.; and 2ndly, Gen. Charles Montague Halifax; by the former of whom she left at her decease, 29 May, 1782, an only surviving child,

GEORGE MASON-VILLIERS, 2nd Earl of Grandison, b. 23 July, 1761; who m. 10 February, 1774, Lady Gertrude Conway, 3rd dau. of Francis, Earl of Hertford, and had an only dau. and heir,

GERTRUDE-AMELIA, who m. 7 June, 1777, Lord Henry Stuart, son of John, 1st Marquess of Bute, and left, with other issue, a son and heir, HENRY VILLIERS-STUART, Lord Stuart de Decies.

The Earl of Grandison d. in July, 1800, and with him the honours became EXTINCT.

WAHULL—BARONS DE WAHULL.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 January, 1297.

Lineage.

WALTER DE FLANDERS came into England with the COX-QUEBOR, and held, as a feudal lord, at the time of the General Survey, considerable estates in the cos. Bedford and Northampton, of which WAHULL (now Wodhull or Odhull,) in the former shire, was the head of his barony. To this Walter succeeded.

WALTER DE WAHULL, whose son,

SIMON DE WAHULL, in the time of King HENRY I. or STEPHEN, with Sibyll, his wife, gave the church of Langford to the Knights Templars. His son and successor,

WALTER DE WAHULL, certified, 12th HENRY II., on the assessment of the aid for marrying the king's dau.; his knights' fees, de veteri feoffamento, to be twenty-seven, and those de novo, three. He was subsequently concerned in the insurrection of Robert, Earl of Leicester, and was made prisoner in a battle near St. Edmundsbury. By his 1st wife, Albrede, widow of Guy de St. Valery, he had no issue, but by Roesia, his 2nd, he had two daus. and two sons, SIMON and John, and was s. by the elder,

SIMON DE WAHULL, who was fined in the 22nd HENRY II., 10 marks for trespassing in the king's forests; and in the 2nd RICHARD I., upon levying the scutage of Wales, paid £13 10s. for his knights' fees: in the 6th of the same reign, he paid £27 towards the sum levied for the king's redemption. This Simon gave to the nuns at Godstone, into which convent his dau., Mary and Cleely had entered, a moiety of the church of Pateshill, in Northamptonshire. He d. in two years afterwards, when Henry, archbishop of Canterbury, paid £333 6s. 8d., for the wardship of his heir, and benefit of his marriage, which heir was

JOHN DE WAHULL. This feudal lord d. 1216, leaving his sisters his heirs, viz., ROESIA, m. to Robert L'Isle; and Agnes, m. 1st, to Robert de Bassingham, and 2ndly, to William Fitz-Warine; but neither sister appears to have had any surviving issue. At John de Wahull's death, the honour of Wahull devolved upon the heir male of the family, son of his uncle,

SAIHER DE WAHULL, who d. in 1260, and was s. by his son,

WALTER DE WAHULL, who, upon doing his homage, and giving security to pay £100 for his relief, had livery of the honour of Wahull, and the other lands of his inheritance. He m. Helewysse, dau. of Hugh de Vivon, and dying in 1269, was s. by his son,

JOHN DE WAHULL, who, attaining majority in the next year, and doing his homage, had livery of his lands. In the 22nd EDWARD I., he had a military summons to march into Gascony, and had, subsequently, a similar summons to proceed against the Welsh, but d. in two years afterwards, seized of the manor of Wahull or Wodhull, which he held by the service of two knights' fees. He m. Agnes, dau. of Sir Henry Pinkeney, of Wedon Pinkeney, and dying 1295, was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE WAHULL. This feudal lord was summoned to parliament as a Baron,* 26 January, 1297, 25th EDWARD I. He d. in 1304, seized of the Barony of Wahull, as also of the manor of Wahull, co. Bedford, and Pateshill, in Northamptonshire, leaving, by his wife Hawise, dau. of Henry Praers, an infant son and heir,

JOHN DE WAHULL, who, although possessing the honour of Wahull, had no similar summons to parliament, nor had any of his descendants. He d. in the 10th EDWARD III., leaving by Isabella, his wife, two sons.

I. JOHN (Sir), whose line terminated in heiresses, his granddaus.,

Elizabeth, } who both d. s. p.
Eleanor. }

II. NICOLAS.

* NICOLAS doubts if this writ constituted a parliamentary Baron because it was only directed to the temporality. "The writ," he observes, "commands the persons to whom it is addressed, to attend at Salisbury, on Sunday, the feast of St. Matthew the Apostle next ensuing, viz., 21st September, 'nobiscum super dictis negotiis colloquium et tractatum specialiter habitori, vestrumque consilium impensuri; et hoc, sicut nos et honorem nostrum ac salutationem regni, nostri ac incolarum diligite, nullatenus omitatis;' and it was directed to six earls and seventy-five barons, and to the judges; but not one of the bishops or abbots were included." He admits, however, that two subsequent writs in the same year supplied this omission, and he states, that the validity of the writ had never before been questioned, and that in a special case brought before parliament (that of Frocheville,) the slightest objection was not made.

The 2nd son (or his son), upon the termination of the line of the elder Sir John de Wahull, s. to the estates, and became

NICHOLAS DE WAHULL, of Wahull. He m. Margaret, dau. and heir of John Foxcote, Esq., and had issue,

THOMAS, his successor.

Richard.

Edith, m. to — Emesworth.

Margaret, m. to Simon Brown.

He d. in the 12th HENRY IV., and was s. by his elder son,

THOMAS DE WAHULL, who m. Elizabeth, sister and heir of Sir Thomas Chetwode, Knt., and had two sons, THOMAS and William. He d. 9th HENRY V., and was s. by the elder,

THOMAS DE WAHULL, who m. Isabel, eldest dau. of Sir William Trussell, of Elmeshorpe, and had issue,

JOHN.

Thomas.

Isabel, m. to — Bowden.

He was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE WAHULL, or WOODHULL. This gentleman m. Jean, dau. of Henry Etwell, of London, and had four sons, FULK, Thomas, William, and John; and three daus., Elizabeth, Anne, and Mary. He was s. by his eldest son,

FULK WOODHULL, who m. Anne, dau. and heir of William Newman, of Thenford (by Margaret, his wife, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Thomas Lamport,) and had issue,

NICHOLAS, his successor.

Thomas.

Lawrence, of Mollington, co. Warwick.

Mary, m. to Edward Cope, Esq., of Towes, co. Lincoln.

Jane, m. to William Bellingham, Esq.

Isabel, m. to Richard Tresham, Esq., of Newton, Northamptonshire.

Mr. Woodhull d. 24th HENRY VII., and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS WOODHULL, Knt. This gentleman m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Richard Raleigh, Esq., of Farnborough, co. Warwick, and had issue, ANTHONY; Barbara, m. to Edmund Medwinter, Esq.; and Joice. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Parr, Lord Parr, of Horton, and had, Fulk, who m. Alice, dau. of William Coles, of Leigh, and was ancestor of the Wodhulls of Thenford.

Anne, m. to David Seamer, Esq.

Mary, m. to Richard Burnaby, Esq., of Watford, Northamptonshire.

Sir Nicholas d. 23rd HENRY VIII., and was s. by his eldest son,

ANTHONY WODEHULL, who, coming of age in the 31st HENRY VIII., had livery of his lands; but dying in two years after, left by Anne, his wife, dau. of Sir John Smith, an only dau. and heiress,

AGNES WODEHULL, who m. 1st, Richard Chetwode, Esq. (3rd son of Roger Chetwode, Esq. of Oakley, by Ellen Masterman, his wife,) and had a son and heir,

RICHARD CHETWODE, of whom presently.

She m. 2ndly, Sir George Calverley, Knt., and had two sons, who both predeceased her. Lady Calverley was s. at her decease, 18th ELIZABETH, by her only son,

SIR RICHARD CHETWODE. This gentleman, in the time of JAMES I., preferred a claim to the BARONY OF WAHULL, or WODHULL, as possessor of the manor and castle of Odell (Wahull), and his petition being referred to the Duke of Lennox, the Lord Howard, and the Earl of Nottingham, these noblemen returned the following certificate:—

"According to your majesty's direction, we have met and considered the petition of Sir Richard Chetwode, and find that the petition is true: and that before any usual calling of barons by writs, his ancestors were barons in their own right, and were summoned to serve the kings in their wars, with other barons; and were also summoned to parliament. And we conceive the discontinuance to have arisen from the lords of the honour dying at one year of age, and the troubles of the time ensuing: but still the title of baron was allowed in all the reigns by conveniences of their estates, and by pardon of alienation from the crown by the king's own officers, and £9 per annum, being the ancient fee for the castle guard of Buckingham, was constantly paid, and is paid to this day: so that, though there has been a disuse, yet the right so fully appearing, which cannot die, we have not seen or heard of any one so much to be regarded in grace, and in consideration of so many knights' fees, held from the very time of the Conquest, and by him held at this day; and a pedigree both on the father and mother's side, proved by authentic records from the time of the CONQUEROR (which in such cases are very rare), we hold him worthy the honour of a baron, if your majesty thinks meet.

Signed,

Lennox.

Howard.

Nottingham."

It appears, however, that notwithstanding so favourable a report, the king did not think fit to summon the petitioner in the ancient barony, but he offered to make him BARON OF WODHULL, by patent. This Sir Richard thought derogatory, and declined. Sir Richard Chetwode m. twice, but had issue only by his 1st wife, Jane, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Drury, Knt., viz.,

William, who d. v. p.

RICHARD, also d. v. p., leaving issue by his wife Anne, dau. and heiress of Sir Valentine Knightley, a son,

VALENTINE CHETWOOD, who m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Francis Shute, Esq., of Upton, co. Leicester, and had two sons, Knightley Chetwood, dean of Gloucester, whose son and dau. both d. unm.

JOHN CHETWOOD, in holy orders, D.D., whose son,

KNIGHTLEY CHETWOOD, of Woodbrook, Queen's co., m. Hester, dau. and heir of Richard Brooking, Esq., of Totness, co. Devon, and had issue,

1 VALENTINE-KNIGHTLEY CHETWOOD, who m. Henrietta-Maria, dau. of Sir Jonathan Cope, of Oxfordshire, and left the late

JONATHAN CHETWOOD, Esq., of Woodbrooke, Queen's co., who m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Laurence Clutterbuck, Esq., of Derryluken, co. Tipperary, and d. s. p.

2 CREWE, of Woodbrooke, who m. Anna-Maria, dau. of Allan Holford, co. Chester, and relict of Ralph Sneyd, Esq., of Keele, co. Stafford, and had, with two daus., one son,

John, in holy orders, of Glanmire, co. Cork, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of William Hamilton, Esq., and had a son, JOHN, captain in the 33rd regiment (who m. Eliza, dau. of G. Patton, Esq., governor of St. Helena, and d. leaving an only dau., ELIZA-CONSTANCE, heir-general of the BARONY OF WAHULL, m. to PETER AIKEN, Esq., of Clifton), and several daus., the eldest of whom, Elizabeth-Hester, m. 23 September, 1798, Robert Rogers Wilmot, elder son and heir of Edward Wilmot, Esq., by Martha, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Charles Moore, Esq., of Lisapooka, and grandson of Robert Wilmot, elder brother of Dr. Ryder Wilmot, archbishop of Tuam, and had issue, Edward Wilmot-Chetwode, Esq., of Woodbrooke, and Emily-Margaret, m. William Brooke, Esq., master in chancery, in Ireland.

WAKE—BARONS WAKE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 1 October, 1295.

Lineage.

In the time of HENRY I.,

HUGH LE WAKE, m. Emma, dau. and eventually heiress of Baldwin Fitz-Gilbert, by Adelida, his wife, dau. of Richard de Killoa, which Baldwin was uncle of Gilbert de Gant, 1st Earl of Lincoln of that family. This Hugh le Wake gave the lordship of Wilesford, co. Lincoln, to the monks of Bec, in Normandy, when it became a cell to that great abbey. He d. in 1172, and was s. by his son,

BALDWIN WAKE, who, in the 12th HENRY II., on the assessment in aid of marrying the king's dau., certified his knights' fees to be in number ten, and that they were bestowed upon his ancestor by King HENRY I. This Baldwin was one of the barons who assisted at the coronation of King RICHARD I., on the accession of that monarch. He d. in 1201, and was s. by his son,

BALDWIN WAKE, who m. Agnes, dau. of William de Humet, constable of Normandy, by whom he acquired the manor of Wichendon. He was s. by his son,

BALDWIN WAKE. This feudal lord m. Isabel, dau. of William de Briwere, and dying about the year 1213, was s. by his son,

HUGH WAKE, who m. Joane, dau. and eventual heiress of Nicholas de Stuteville, Lord of Liddell, and at the death of his uncle, William de Briwere, s. p., in 17th HENRY III., s. to his property. This Hugh d. at Jerusalem in 1246 (his widow m. 2dly, Hugh Bigod), and was s. by his son,

BALDWIN WAKE. This feudal lord, who took up arms with the barons in the reign of HENRY III., was made prisoner at the storming of the castle of Northampton, in the 48th of that monarch's reign; but afterwards participated in the success of his party at Lewes. He was again, however, taken prisoner with young Simon de Montfort, at Kenilworth, but by some means or other effected his escape, and made head once more after the defeat of Evesham, with Robert Ferrers, Earl of Derby, under whom he fought at the battle of Chesterfield, but had the good fortune to escape with his life. He subsequently submitted to the king, and received a pardon, with restitution of his lands. He m., according to Dugdale, Hawise, dau. and co-heir of Robert de Quinci, and was s. by his son,

JOHN WAKE, who was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 1 October, 1295, and from that period to 29 December, 1299. This nobleman was engaged in the French and Scottish wars of King EDWARD I., and in the 27th of that monarch, his lordship was one of the commissioners assigned (with the archbishop of York and others) to see to the fortification of the castles of Scotland, and guarding the marches. He d. in 1304, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS WAKE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 20 November, 1317, to 20 November, 1348. This nobleman taking part with Queen ISABEL against EDWARD II., was appointed by that princess, acting in the name of the king, justice of all the forests south of Trent, and constable of the Tower of London. On the accession of EDWARD III., his lordship was constituted governor of the castle of Hertford, and obtained license to make a castle of his manor-house of Cottingham, co. York. He was subsequently a leading personage for seventeen years of the reign of King EDWARD, during which period he was constantly in the wars of Scotland, and once in those of France. He was also governor of Jersey and Guernsey, and constable of the Tower of London. His lordship m. Blanche, dau. of Henry Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, but d. s. p. in 1349, leaving his sister Margaret, Countess of Kent, widow of Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, his heir, who carried the Barony of Wake into the family of Plantagenet, whence it was conveyed by JOANE PLANTAGENET, the Fair Maid of Kent, the countess's eventual heiress into the family of her 1st husband, Sir Thomas Holland, Lord Holland, K.G. (See Plantagenet, Barons of Woodstock, and Earls of Kent. See likewise, Holland, Barons Holland, Earls of Kent, and Duke of Surrey).

NOTE.—From this old baronial family, the Wakes, Baronets of Clevedon, co. Somerset, claim descent.

WALCHER — EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND, BISHOP OF DURHAM.

Lineage.

On the execution and attainder of Waltheof, Earl of Northumberland, in 1075 (he was beheaded at Winchester, and the first so put to death after the Norman Conquest), WALCHER DE LORRAINE, bishop of Durham, was entrusted with the government or earldom of the co. Northumberland. This prelate, a native of Lorraine, was a person of excellent endowments, greatly esteemed for his piety, integrity, and benevolence, but of so gentle a disposition, that he was unable to repress the arbitrary proceedings of his servants and soldiers; whereupon loud murmurs arose amongst the people, and a day was at length appointed for an amicable adjustment, when oppressors and oppressed assembled at a place called Gateshead, near Newcastle-upon-Tyne. But instead of a peaceable result, a violent turmoil commenced, in which the church, where the bishop sought safety, was set on fire, and the venerable prelate barbarously murdered, anno 1080.

Arms—Az., a cross between four lions rampant, or: these are still the arms of the bishops of Durham.

WALEYS—BARON WALEYS.

By Writ of Summons, dated 15 May, 1321.

Lineage.

RICHARD WALEYS, had summons to parliament as a Baron, 15 May, 1321, but never afterwards. Of this nobleman, Dugdale gives no account, nor are there any particulars recorded of him.

He, however, left (Courthope's Historic Peerage) a son, Stephen, living in 1348, whose only dau. and heiress, Elizabeth, m. Sir John Depedene, Knt. On his death it is presumed that the Barony of Waleys became EXTINCT.

WALLACE—BARON WALLACE.

By Letters Patent, dated 2 February, 1828.

Lineage.

It appears from Hutchinson's History of Cumberland, published 1794, that this family claims descent from a cadet of Craigie-Wallace, in Ayrshire; and a pedigree of that house states that many of the posterity of Alexander, 2nd son of John Wallace, of Craigie, who s. about the year 1500, settled upon the eastern border of England; and there is also a stone in the east wall of St. Mary's porch, in the church of St. Nicholas, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, with the arms of the Scottish Wallaces, quartering those of "Lindsay of Craigie." In 1550, Henry Wallace is described in a MS. in the British Museum, as one of the gentlemen inhabiting the middle marches in Northumberland; in 1552, he was one of the commissioners of enclosures there; in 1553, he is rated as owner of property in Lambley in Tyndale Ward; and the same year (6th EDWARD VI.) he, and Albany Featherstonhaugh, are appointed by the lord warden, overseers of the watches, 1st at Bellistar and Milner Peth; 2nd at Cowenwoodburn and Lambley; 3rd at Purkenford and Shawbenfoot; and 4th, the rest of the lordship of Knarresdale.

THOMAS WALLACE, of Lambley, living in the reigns of JAMES I. and CHARLES I., purchased lands in Asholme, co. of Northumberland, 13 December, 1637. He is said to have been slain in the battle of Worcester, on the side of the royalists, 3 September, 1651; by his wife, an heiress of the Blenkinsop family, he had three sons, of whom,

THOMAS WALLACE, of Asholme, s. his father, and added to the property the manor or lordship of East and West Coanwood, contiguous to Asholme, 3 March, 1657. By Alice, his wife, a dau. of Sir Thomas Carleton, Knt., he had two sons, of whom, the elder,

ALBANY WALLACE, of Asholme, succeeded. His will, dated 17 November, 1677, was proved at Durham, 1678, in which will he devises "all his lands, farms, and farmholds, with woods and all privileges thereupon to his eldest son, Thomas, as his right, being his only heir." By Isabella, his wife, a dau. of the family of Graham, of Breckonhill Castle, co. Cumberland, he had two sons; 1. THOMAS, his heir; and 2. John. The elder,

THOMAS WALLACE, of Asholme, is styled in the Haltwhistle Registers "Lord of the Asholme, &c. &c." By Grace, his 1st wife (who d. 1695), he had no issue; and he m. 2ndly, 17 May, 1696, Margaret, dau. of Hugh Ridley, of Plenneller (Chief Ridley), and by her had two sons, and two daus. This gentleman was buried at Haltwhistle, 4 July, 1721, having greatly reduced his estate by prodigal living, and s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS WALLACE, of Asholme, attorney-at-law, b. 1697, who purchased an estate at Brampton, co. Cumberland, where he resided. He m. 2 January, 1728, Dulcibella, 7th dau. of John Sowerby, of Brampton-Gillesland and Botcherby, 2nd son of Daniel Sowerby, of Sleetbeck and Sowerbyes, by whom he had issue, two sons and one dau.,

1. JAMES, his heir.

2. JOHN, of Sedcop House and Golden Square (of whom hereafter).

3. Margaret, baptised 4 July, 1735. m. 30 September, 1762, Edward Atkinson, lieut. R.N., and d. (leaving issue) in April, 1812.

Mr. Wallace, dying 11 December, 1737, his widow m. 2ndly, the Rev. William Plaskett, vicar of Ganton, co. York, and Brampton, co. Cumberland, by whom she had a dau., Anne, b. 4 August, 1741, who m. 1st, 22 October, 1761, John, son and heir of the Rev. John Tomlinson, lord of the manors of Blencogo and Allonby, in Cumberland, and 2ndly, 17 January, 1782, John Law, D.D., lord bishop of Elphin, brother to Edward, 1st Lord Ellenborough. Mr. Wallace's elder son,

JAMES WALLACE, Esq., of Asholme, baptised 12 March, 1729, added to his paternal estates the manors of Knarresdale and Thornhope, and Featherstone Castle, all near Asholme. He was called to the bar in 1757; appointed solicitor-general in 1777, and attorney-general in 1780; and sat in parliament for Horsham, co. Sussex, from 1770 till his death. He m. 8 January, 1767, Elizabeth, only dau. and sole heir of Thomas

Simpson, Esq., of Carleton Hall, co. Cumberland (by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and co-heir of John Pattinson, Esq., of Carleton Hall, a near relative of Thomas Pattinson, Esq., of Melmerby, high sheriff for the county in 1793), by whom (who d. 18 April, 1811) he had one son and one dau.,

1. THOMAS, his heir.

2. Elizabeth, baptised 2 April, 1770, d. unm. 12 May, 1792.

Mr. Wallace d. in the office of attorney-general, and was buried in Exeter Cathedral, 16 November, 1783. His only son,

THOMAS WALLACE, Esq., of Asholme, Knarresdale, and Featherstone Castle, b. in 1768, was sworn of the privy council, 21 May, 1801, and created BARON WALLACE, of Knarresdale, 2 February, 1828, having previously, as a member of the administration, filled several public offices, and sat in parliament at different elections for many places, and lastly, for Weymouth. He m. 16 February, 1814, Lady Jane Hope, dau. of John, 2nd Earl of Hopetoun, and relict of Henry, 1st Viscount Melville, by whom (who d. 6 June, 1829) he had no issue. His lordship d. 23 February, 1844, when the title became EXTINCT. The estates devolved on John-George-Frederick-Hope Wallace, Esq., and the representation of the family devolved upon the issue of his uncle. That gentleman,

JOHN WALLACE, Esq., long resident at Sedcop House, Kent, and in Golden Square, baptised 26 March, 1733 (2nd son of Thomas Wallace, of Asholme and Brampton, and only brother to the Attorney-General), was an eminent contractor in London, in the commission of the peace for the co. Middlesex, and treasurer to the New Westminster Lying-in Hospital. He m. 6 March, 1764, Elizabeth, only child of Robert French (son and heir of David French, of Frenchland, M.P. for the borough of New Galloway, in the Scotch parliament of 1702, and lineal representer of the Frenchs, of Frenchland and Thornidyeke, in Annandale and the Merse), by Elizabeth, dau. of Christopher Hull, of Brampton, and sister to Christopher Hull, of Sedcop House, by whom he had six sons and five daus.,

WALPOLE—EARLS OF ORFORD.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 February, 1742.

Lineage.

This family is said to have been established in England before the Norman Conquest, and to have derived their surname from WALFOLK, in Norfolk, where they were enfeoffed of lands belonging to the see of Ely. Camden states "that the owner of Walpole gave both that and Wisbich in the Isle of Ely to the monastery of Ely, at the same time that he made his younger son, Alwin, a monk there." We will commence, however, with

HENRY DE WALPOL, who, in the baronial war, in the time of JOHN, taking part against the crown, was made prisoner, and forced to pay £100 for his deliverance. In the last year of HENRY III.'s reign that monarch commands the sheriff of Lincoln to restore to him all those lands in the county, whereof he had been possessed when he fell from his allegiance to King JOHN. This letter was dated at Oxford, 29 June, 1217, and sealed with the seal of William, Earl Marshal, styled the king's justice, because (as the record says) the king had yet no seal. He was s. by

SIR JOHN DE WALPOL, who had been also involved in the baronial contest, and likewise returned to his allegiance in the reign of HENRY III. He had by Isabel, his wife, several sons, of whom

HENRY, was his successor.

RALPH was in holy orders, and became bishop of Norwich, and subsequently of Ely; he obtained the archdeaconry of the latter place in 1271, and was elected bishop of Norwich, 11 November, 1288: on his confirmation, John Peckham, archbishop of Canterbury, addressed him in these memorable words:—"My lord elect, there has an evil custom prevailed in the diocese of Norwich of receiving the first fruits of the livings in your diocese, which proceeds from a spirit of covetousness, and is displeasing both to God and man. Let me therefore persuade you, if you have any concern for your soul's health, to lay aside this evil custom, which will thus tend to the public advantage:" to which he made reply, "I shall freely consent to what you have desired of me, and promise to do all that is in my power to prevent it." This took place at South-riding, in Kent, after his return to England from waiting upon the king on the frontiers of Arragon, where he obtained the royal assent; and by patent, dated 7 February, the king recites, that the church of Norwich, having elected this discreet man, Mr. Ralph de Walpol, archdeacon of Ely, to the bishopric of Norwich, he confirms the said election, and commands John Peckham, archbishop of Canterbury, William de Redham, and Peter de Leycester, to deliver to him the temporalities, &c. Whereupon he was consecrated in the church of Canterbury, 20 March ensuing. He sat in this see about ten years, and then, upon the death of William de Luda, bishop of Ely, was translated by the Pope to that bishopric. The convent of Ely had obtained the king's leave to proceed to an election, but could not agree amongst themselves; one part (the majority) made choice of John Salmon, their prior; the other selected John de Langton (then king's chancellor), afterwards bishop of Chichester; and the election being thus in dispute, the merits were submitted to Robert Winchelsea, archbishop of Canterbury, who, keeping the cause depending, an appeal was made to the Pope, and both parties repaired to Rome, when his Holiness unwilling to set aside Salmon, sent the monks to a new election; but that proving equally unsatisfactory, the Pope, then to terminate the contest, translated Walpol to Ely, by a bull, bearing date 15 July, 1299, and made Salmon bishop of Norwich. His lordship d. 20 March, 1301-2.

Sir John Walpol was s. by his eldest son,

SIR HENRY DE WALPOLE, in the manors of Walpole and Houghton, who, in the 5th EDWARD I., is mentioned in a certain deed made by the prior and chapter of Ely as having a mansion house in Ely. In the same reign he had military summonses to march into Flanders and into Scotland. He m. Isabel, dau. of Sir Peter Fitz-Osbert, and heir to her brother, Sir Roger Fitz-Osbert (which lady, after his decease, m. Sir Walter Jernegan, of Stoneham Jernegan, ancestor of the Jerninghams, Lord Stafford, and brought the lordship of Somerleyton, and other lands, into that family). Sir Henry Walpole was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY DE WALPOLE, who, with Robert Baynard, was chosen knight of the shire for the co. of Norfolk, in the parliament that met at Lincoln in the 9th EDWARD II., wherein it was ordered that none should depart without the king's especial license. In the 17th of the same reign he was returned into chancery amongst the knights, who (with other persons of note) were certified to bear ancient arms from their ancestors. This Sir Henry Walpole purchased divers lands in Walpole and Houghton, and dying soon after the 9th EDWARD III., was s. by his son,

HENRY DE WALPOLE, of Houghton, who was returned one of the knights of the shire for the co. Norfolk, to the parliament summoned to meet at York, in the 7th EDWARD III., and was s. at his decease by his son,

Colonel Walpole d. in 1700, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, K.G., b. 26 August, 1676, educated at Eton and Cambridge. This gentleman, who attained so much celebrity as Prime Minister, temp. King GEORGE I. and King GEORGE II., was first returned to parliament by the borough of King's Lynn, in 1700, and so long as he remained a commoner he sat for the same place, excepting one session: that in which he was a prisoner in the Tower, from 4 January, 1711-12, to the prorogation of the parliament 21 June following.

In June, 1705, Mr. Walpole was commissioned as one of the council in the affairs of the admiralty to the lord high admiral, Prince George of Denmark; and he was appointed secretary of war in two years afterwards. In January, 1709-10, he was made treasurer of the navy, but on the change of ministry soon after he was removed from all his employments. At the accession of King GEORGE I., his eminent abilities were again enlisted on the side of the government. In 1714, five days after the new king's landing, he was made paymaster of the guards and garrisons at home, and of the forces abroad; and in the same year he was sworn of the privy council. In 1715 he was constituted First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer; and in the same year was chosen chairman of the committee of secrecy, appointed by the House of Commons, to inquire into the conduct of those evil ministers "that brought a reproach on the nation, by the unsuitable conclusion of a war which was carried on at so vast an expense, and was attended with such unparalleled successes." The result of this impeachment of the Tory ministers of ANNE was the flight of Ormonde and Bolingbroke, and the condemnation of Harley, Earl of Oxford, Prior, and some others, but the whole in the end escaped with impunity. In 1717 Mr. Walpole again withdrew with his friends from office, but in 1721 he returned, and was appointed paymaster-general. The next year he was placed in his former situation of First Lord of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer: was constituted one of the lords justices in 1723, and sworn sole secretary of state during the king's absence in Hanover, attended by the Lords Townshend and Carteret. In 1725 his Majesty conferred upon him the order of the Bath, and he was in the same year again named one of the lords justices during another visit of the king to Hanover. In 1726 he was made a knight of the Garter, and on the accession of King GEORGE II., he was re-sworn of the privy council, and continued in his official employments of First Lord of the Treasury, and chancellor of the Exchequer. At the coronation of the new monarch Sir Robert assisted as a privy councillor, and as a knight of the Garter, in the full habit and collar of the order. In 1740 he was again one of the lords justices, and on retiring from office, he was elevated to the peerage by letters patent, dated 6 February, 1742, as Baron of Houghton, Viscount Walpole, in Norfolk, and Earl of Orford, co. Suffolk. Thus have we simply enumerated the high offices and the high honours of this celebrated statesman. His lordship rebuilt the ancient family seat at Houghton, and adorned it with a noble collection of pictures and statues. He

GEORGE WALPOLE, 3rd Earl of Orford. This nobleman sold to the Empress of Russia, the splendid collection of pictures made by his grandfather, Sir Robert Walpole. His lordship d. unm. in 1791, when the honours reverted to his uncle, the celebrated

HORACE WALPOLE, as 4th Earl of Orford, b. in 1717, and educated at Eton and Cambridge. For this his youngest child, the Minister Walpole procured the places of usher of the receipt of the exchequer, comptroller of the great roll, and keeper of the foreign receipts. His lordship had for several years a seat in the House of Commons, but he was distinguished more in the literary than the political arena. Soon after returning from his travels he purchased a villa at Twickenham, which he changed into a Gothic mansion, and there (the renowned "Strawberry Hill,") he continued ever afterwards principally to reside. At that favourite retirement he established a private press, where he not only printed his own works, but many other curious compositions. From this press first issued, The Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors, 1758, 2 vols., 12mo.; Anecdotes of Painting, 1762; Historic Doubts, 1768; Mysterious Mother, 1768; Miscellaneous Antiquities, 1772, 4to. His lordship d. unm. 2 March, 1797, when the Barony of Walpole, of Walpole, passed, according to the limitation to his cousin, HORATIO, 2nd Baron Walpole, of Wolterton (refer to 2nd son of Robert Walpole, Esq., father of the 1st earl), and the Earldom of Orford, with the minor dignities, became EXTINCT.

By Writ of Summons, dated 29 December, 1299.

Lineage.

In the 31st year of King EDWARD I.,

ROBERT DE LA WARDE was in the wars of Scotland, and again in the 34th, at which time he was steward of the king's household. He had been previously summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 29 December, 1299, to 3 November, 1306. His lordship d. 1307, and was s. by his son, SIMON DE LA WARDE, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 30 December, 1324, to 24 July, 1334. This nobleman, who was governor of York, upon the insurrection of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, in the 16th EDWARD II., brought considerable forces to Boroughbridge in aid of the royal cause, where the earl received so signal a defeat, and, being taken prisoner, was conveyed to Pontefract, and there beheaded. Lord de la Warde was subsequently constituted governor of Pontefract Castle, but of his lordship, or his posterity, nothing further is known.

WARREN—EARLS OF SURREY.

Creation of WILLIAM RUFUS.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE WARRENNE, Earl of Warrenne, in Normandy, a near kinsman of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, came into England with that prince, and having distinguished himself at the battle of Hastings, obtained an immense portion of the public spoilation. He had large grants of lands in several counties amongst which were the Barony of Lewes, in Sussex, and the manors of Carletune and Benington, in Lincolnshire. So extensive indeed were those grants that his possessions resembled more the dominions of a sovereign prince than the estates of a subject. He enjoyed, too, in the highest degree, the confidence of the king, and was appointed joint justice-general, with Richard de Benefactia, for administering justice throughout the whole realm. While in that office, some great disturbers of the public peace having refused to appear before him and his colleague, in obedience to citation, the Earl took up arms, and defeated the rebels in a battle at Fagadune, when he is said, for the purpose of striking terror, to have cut off the right foot of each of his prisoners. Of those rebels, Ralph Wahir or Guader, Earl of Norfolk, and Roger, Earl of Hereford, were the ringleaders. His lordship was likewise highly esteemed by King WILLIAM RUFUS, and was created by that monarch EARL OF SURREY. He m. Gundred, dau. of the CONQUEROR, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Reginald or Raynald, one of the adherents of Robert Curthose. Watson (History of the House of Warren) makes this Reginald the husband of Alice Wirngay, and the grandfather of the two co-heiresses.

Gundred-Edith, m. 1st, to Girard de Gornay; and 2ndly, to Drew de Monceux.

A dau., m. to Ernise de Colungia.

This potent noble built the castle of Holt, and founded the priory of Lewes, in Sussex. He resided principally at the castle of Lewes, and had besides Castle-Acre, in Norfolk, and noble castles at Coningsburg and Sandal. He d. 24 June, 1088, and Dugdale gives the following curious account of his parting hour. "It is reported that this Earl William did violently detain certain lands from the monks of Ely; for which, being often admonished by the abbot, and not making restitution, he died miserably. And, though his death happened very far off the isle of Ely, the same night he died, the abbot lying quietly in his bed, and meditating on heavenly things, heard the soul of this earl, in its carriage away by the devil, cry out loudly, and with a known and distinct voice, Lord have mercy on me: Lord have mercy on me. And, moreover, that the next day after, the abbot acquainted all the monks in chapter therewith. And likewise that about four days after, there came a messenger to them from the wife of this earl, with 100 shillings for the good of his soul, who told them that he died the very hour that the abbot had heard the outcry. But that neither the abbot nor any of the monks would receive it; not thinking it safe for them to take the money of a damned person." "If this part of the story," adds Dugdale, "as to the abbot's hearing the noise, be no truer than the last, viz., that his lady sent them 100 shillings, I shall deem it to be a mere fiction, in regard the lady was certainly dead about three years before." The earl was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE WARRENNE (Earl of Warrenne), 2nd Earl of Surrey. This nobleman joined Robert de Belesm6, Earl of Arundel and Shrewsbury, in favour of Robert Curthose, against HENRY I., and in consequence forfeited his English earldom and estates: but those were subsequently restored to him, and he was ever afterwards a good and faithful subject to King HENRY. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of Hugh the Great, Earl of Vermandois, and widow of Robert, Earl of Mellent, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Reginald, who marrying Alice, dau. and heir of William de Wirmgay, became Lord of Wirmgay, in Norfolk. He founded the priory of Wirmgay, and left a dau., Alice, wife of Reginald de Dunstavi, and a son, William, who m. twice, having issue only by his 1st wife, Beatrix, dau. of Hugh de Perpont, a son, Reginald, who d. s. p., and two daus., viz.,

1 BEATRIX DE WARREN, who m. 1st, Dodo Bardolf, Baron of Shelford, and left a son,

WILLIAM BARDOLF (see Bardolf.)

She m. 2ndly, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent.

2 Isabel, who is stated by Watson to have m. Geoffrey de Merlay.

Watson, in his History of the House of Warren, corroborated by Camden and Ormerod, makes this Reginald to have m. Adelia de Mowbray, and to have had a son, William, from whom he deduces the family of Warren, of Poynton, co. Chester.

Ralph, d. s. p.

Gundred, m. 1st, to Roger de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick; and 2ndly, to William de Lancaster, Baron of Kendal.

Adeline, m. to Henry, son of DAVID, King of Scotland.

The earl d. 11 May, 1138, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE WARRENNE (Earl of Warrenne) 3rd Earl of Surrey, who zealously espoused the cause of King STEPHEN, and had a chief command in the army of that monarch, in the battle fought at Lincoln, between him and the adherents of the Empress MAUD. His lordship m. Adela, dau. of William Talvace, son of Robert de Belesme, Earl of Shrewsbury, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Patrick de Eureux, Earl of Salisbury,) had an only dau. and heir, ISABEL, who m. 1st, WILLIAM DE BLOIS, natural son of King STEPHEN; and 2ndly, HAMELINE PLANTAGENET, natural son of Geoffrey, Earl of Anjou, father of King HENRY II.

In 1147, the Earl of Warrenne and Surrey assumed the cross, and accompanied LEWIS, King of France, to the Holy Land, against the Saracens. From this unfortunate enterprise the earl never returned, but whether he fell in battle, or died in captivity, has not been ascertained. His only dau., as stated above,

ISABEL DE WARREN, m. 1st,

WILLIAM DE BLOIS, Earl of Moreton, in Normandy, natural son of King STEPHEN, and this nobleman became, in consequence, EARL OF SURREY, having, by the grant of Henry, Duke of Normandy, upon the accord made between him and King STEPHEN, all those lands which STEPHEN held before he was King of England, as well in Normandy as in England, or elsewhere. Amongst these were the castle and town of Norwich, with the whole county of Norfolk, excepting what belonged to the churches, religious houses, and other earls, and, especially, excepting the Tertium Denarium, by reason whereof Hugh Bigot was Earl of Norfolk. He had also all the honour of Pevensey. This nobleman, who was of an unambitious disposition, and enjoyed the favour of HENRY II., accompanied that monarch to the siege of Thoulouse, and d. there s. p. in 1160. His widow, Isabel, heiress of the Warrens, m. subsequently, in 1163,

HAMELINE PLANTAGENET, natural brother to King HENRY II., who likewise obtained, jure uxoris, the EARLDOM OF SURREY, and assumed the surname and arms of DE WARREN. This nobleman bore one of the three swords at the second coronation of RICHARD I., and in the 6th of the same reign, he was with that king in his army in Normandy. He d. 7 May, 1202, four years after the countess, having had issue,

I WILLIAM, his heir.

II. Adela, m. to Sir William Fitzwilliam.

III. Maud.

IV. —, m. to Gilbert de Aquila.

V. Isabel, m. to Roger, Earl of Norfolk.

VI. Margaret, m. to Baldwin, Earl of Devon.

The son and heir,

WILLIAM DE WARREN (Plantagenet), Earl of Warren and Surrey, sided at the commencement of the contest between King JOHN and the barons, and for a long time after, with his royal kinsman, but eventually joined the banner of LEWIS of France. On the death of King JOHN, however, he returned to his allegiance, and swore fealty to King HENRY III.; at the solemn nuptials of which monarch he had the honour of serving the king, at the banquet, with his royal cup in the Earl of Arundel's stead, who, being in minority, could not perform that office, as he had not been girt with the sword of knighthood. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Maud de Albin, dau. of the Earl of Arundel, but by her ladyship had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Maud, dau. of William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, and widow of Hugh Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, by whom he had,

JOHN, his successor.

Isabel, m. to Hugh de Albin, Earl of Arundel.

He d. in 1240, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE WARREN (Plantagenet), Earl of Warren and Surrey. This nobleman was but five years of age at the time of his father's decease, and was placed in ward with Peter de Savoy, the Queen's brother. When he attained majority, he attached himself zealously to HENRY III. in his conflicts with the barons, and maintained the cause of the king with his sword at the battle of Lewes. His lordship was a person of violent and imperious temper, and was often betrayed into acts of great intemperance; as in the instance of assaulting Sir Alan Zouch, and Roger, his son, in Westminster Hall, when he almost killed the one and wounded the other. And again, when EDWARD I. issued the first writs of Quo Warranto, his lordship being questioned as to the title of his possessions, exhibited to the justices an old sword, and unsheathing it, said, "Behold, my lords, here is my warranty, my ancestors coming into this land with WILLIAM the Bastard, did obtain their lands by the sword, and I am resolved with the sword to defend them, against whomsoever shall endeavour to dispossess me; for that king did not himself conquer the land, and subdue it, but our progenitors were sharers and assistants therein." The earl was constituted, by King EDWARD, general of all his forces on the north of Trent, for the better restraining the insolence of the Scots; whereupon he marched into Scotland, and so terrified the inhabitants that they immediately sued for peace, and gave hostages for their future good conduct. But the war soon after breaking out afresh, his lordship sustained a signal defeat at Strivelin, when his troops fled first to Berwick, and thence into England. The earl m. 1st, 1247, Alice, dau. of Hugh le Brun, Count de la March, and half sister by the mother of King HENRY III., and 2ndly, Joan, dau. of William, Lord Mowbray, and by the former only had issue,

WILLIAM, who was killed in a tournament at Croydon in his father's life-time, 1285. He m. Joane, dau. of Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, and left a posthumous son,

JOHN, who s. his grandfather, and a dau.,

ALICE, m. to Edmund Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel. This lady, upon the decease of her brother, s. p., inherited the great estates of the Warrens, and conveyed them to the Fitz-Alans, and her son, RICHARD, Earl of Arundel, succeeded to their honours.

Alanore, m. to Henry, Lord Percy.

Isabel, m. to John de Baliol, afterwards King of Scotland.

His lordship d. in 1304, and was s. by his grandson,

JOHN DE WARREN (Plantagenet), Earl of Warren and Surrey. This nobleman had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him, with 200 other persons of distinction, in the 34th EDWARD I., when Prince Edward was also knighted with great solemnity. In the last year of King EDWARD, his lordship was in the expedition made into Scotland, wherein that victorious prince died. In the 4th of the next reign he was again in Scotland, and so much in favour with the king, that he obtained a free grant of the castle and honour of Peke, in Derbyshire, with the whole forest of High Peke, to hold during his life, in as full and ample manner as William Peverel anciently enjoyed the same, before it came to the kings of England by escheat. In the ensuing year we find his lordship, along with the Earl of Pembroke, besieging Piers Gaveston, in Scarborough Castle, and forcing him to surrender. He was, some years afterwards, one of those who invested the castle of Pontefract, at that time held by Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and his adherents; and he subsequently sat in judgment upon, and condemned to death that eminent personage. In the reign of EDWARD III. the earl appears constantly engaged in the wars of Scotland. His lordship m. 1st, Joane, dau. of the Count de Barre, by whom he had no issue. In the life-time of this lady he cohabited publicly with Maud de Nereford,* a person of good family in Norfolk, but was at length obliged, by the archbishop of Canterbury, to break off the connection. He obtained a divorce, however, from his countess, on the ground of a precontract with this Maud. He m. subsequently, Johanna, eldest dau. and heir of Malise, 7th Earl of Strathern, in Scotland, and had a grant of that earldom from Edward Baliol. His wife was forfeited by ROBERT BRUCE for marrying the Earl of Surrey. He d. 30 June, 1347, aged sixty-one, when as he left no legitimate issue, his sister, Alice, wife of Edmund Fitz-Alan, 8th Earl of Arundel, became his heir, and conveyed the great estates of the Warrens (Plantagenets), into the Fitz-Alan family. Her ladyship's son, Richard Fitz-Alan, 9th Earl of Arundel, is considered to have succeeded to the EARLDOM OF SURREY, and so styled himself, but it is doubtful if he were ever formally invested with the dignity. He d. in 1375, and was s. by his son and heir, RICHARD FITZ-ALAN, Earl of Arundel and Surrey, who was beheaded in 1397, when all his honours became FORFEITED (see Fitz-Alan, Earls of Arundel).

Lineage.

Of the ancient family of WATSON, which flourished for several ages in the cos. Rutland, Northampton, and Cambridge, was

EDWARD WATSON, of Lydington, co. Rutland, who lived in 1460, and had fifteen children: the eldest of whom, his son and heir,

EDWARD WATSON, d. in 1530, leaving by his wife, Emma, dau. and co-heir of Anthony Smith, Esq., an only son,

EDWARD WATSON, Esq., of Rockingham Castle, co. Northampton, who m. Dorothy, eldest dau. of Sir Edward Montague, Knt., lord chief justice of the King's Bench, and was s. by his son,

SIR EDWARD WATSON, who served the office of high sheriff for Northamptonshire, 34th ELIZABETH, and was knighted at the Charter House, in London, in May, 1603. He m. Anne, dau. of Kenelm Digby, Esq., of Stoke, co. Rutland, by whom he had issue,

Lewis, his successor.

Edward, d. in 1658.

Anne, m. to Sir Charles Norwich, of Brampton, co. Northampton.

Emma, m. to John Grant, Esq.

Mary, m. to Sir Anthony Mayney, Knt., of Linton, in Kent.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Sir John Needham, of Litchborough, co. Northampton, and 2ndly, to Sir Edward Tyrell, Bart., of Thornton, co. Bucks.

Sir Edward d. in 1616, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR LEWIS WATSON, Knt., who was created a Baronet, 23 June, 1621. He was high sheriff of Northamptonshire 9th CHARLES I., and in consideration of his loyalty to that prince, for whom he garrisoned the castle of Rockingham, was advanced 29 January, 1645, to the dignity of BARON ROCKINGHAM, of Rockingham, co. Northampton. His lordship m. 1st, Catharine, dau. of Peregrine Bertie, Lord Willoughby, of Eresby, but by that lady had no surviving issue. He m. 2ndly, Eleanor, dau. of Sir George Manners, of Haddon, co. Derby, Knt., and sister of John, Earl of Rutland, by whom he had one son and three daus., viz.,

EDWARD, his successor.

Grace, m. to Sir Edward Barkham, Bart., of Southouse, in Norfolk.

Frances, m. to Edward Dingley, Esq., of Charlton, in Worcestershire.

Eleanor, m. to Sir Charles Dymoke, Knt., of Scrivelsby, co. Lincoln, hereditary champion of England.

His lordship d. in 1652, and was s. by his son,

ii. Arabella, m. to Sir James Oxenden, Bart., of Dene, in Kent.

iii. Anne,

iv. Margaret, } both d. unm.

His lordship d. in 1691, and was s. by his eldest son,

LEWIS WATSON, 3rd baron. This nobleman, in his father's life-time, sat for Higham Ferrers, in the convention parliament, and was lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum for the co. Kent, temp. Queen ANNE and GEORGE I. His lordship m. Catherine, younger dau. and co-heir of Sir George Sondes, of Lees Court, co. Kent, K.B. (afterwards created Earl of Feversham), and eventually heiress to her elder sister, Mary, wife of Lewis, Lord Duras. In consequence of this alliance Lord Rockingham, on being advanced in the peerage by letters patent, dated 19 October, 1714, assumed two of the titles borne by his deceased father-in-law, namely, Baron Throsley, and Viscount Sondes, of Lees Court, both in the co. Kent. He was also created by the same patent, EARL OF ROCKINGHAM. His lordship had issue,

i. EDWARD, Viscount Sondes, M.P. for New Romney, m. in 1709

Lady Catherine Tufton, eldest dau. and co-heir of Thomas, 6th Earl of Thanet, and dying 21 March, 1721-2, left issue, Lewis, who succeeded his grandfather as Earl of Rockingham.

THOMAS, who inherited the honours on the decease of his brother, s. p.

Edward, d. unm.

Catherine, m. to Edward Southwell, Esq., of King's Weston, co. Gloucester, and had a son, iii. Arabella, m. to Henry Furness, Esq., son and heir of Sir Robert Furness, Bart., of Waldershare, in Kent.

iv. Margaret, m. 1725, to Sir John Monson, Bart., K.B., of Burton, co. Lincoln, who was created in 1728, BARON MONSON, and had,

i. JOHN, who s. to the Barony of Monson, and was great-grandfather of

FREDERICK-JOHN, 5th Lord Monson, who was s. by his cousin,

WILLIAM-JOHN, 6th Lord Monson (See BURKE'S Extant Peerage).

2 LEWIS, who assumed the surname of WATSON, and was created 20 May, 1760, BARON SONDES, of Lees Court (see BURKE'S Extant Peerage).

3 George, a brigadier-general, d. in 1777, s. p.

The earl d. in 1724, and was s. by his grandson,

LEWIS WATSON, 2nd Earl of Rockingham, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Henry Furness, Bart. of Waldershare, but d. s. p. in December, 1745, when the honours devolved on his only surviving brother,

THOMAS WATSON, 3rd Earl of Rockingham, who d. in a few months afterwards, anno 1746, unm., and devised his estates to his cousin, the Hon. Lewis Monson (refer to children of his aunt, Margaret), upon condition that he assumed the surname and arms of WATSON. At the decease, thus, of this nobleman, all his honours became EXTINCT, except the Barony of Rockingham, which passed to his kinsman and next heir male (refer to Thomas, 2nd son of Edward, 2nd Baron Rockingham),

THOMAS WATSON-WESTWORTH, Earl of Malton, K.B., as 5th Baron Rockingham. His lordship was created 19 April, 1746, MARQUESS OF ROCKINGHAM. He m. Lady Mary Finch, 4th dau. of Daniel, Earl of Winchilsea and Nottingham, and had surviving issue,

I. CHARLES, who was created, visd patris, 17 September, 1750, EARL OF MALTON, in the peerage of Ireland.

2. ANNE, m. in 1744, to William, 3rd Earl Fitz-William, and was mother of WILLIAM, 4th Earl Fitz-William, who was grandfather of WILLIAM-THOMAS SPENCER WESTWORTH FITZ-WILLIAM, present EARL FITZ-WILLIAM.

II. MARY, m. in 1764, to John Milbanke, Esq., 4th son of Sir Ralph Milbanke, Bart., of Hainaby Hall, and had an only child, Mary, m. to John Gage, of Bogate, Hants, brother of Henry, 3rd Viscount Gage.

III. HENRIETTA-ALICIA, m. October, 1764, Mr. William Sturgeon, and had issue,

1. Thomas-William Sturgeon, a naval officer, m. Elizabeth-Wells, only dau. of Edmund Wells-Fortescue, Esq., of Fallapit, co. Devon, and d. s. p.

2. Charles-Alexander Sturgeon, of London, m. Ann, dau. of George Smithwaite, Esq., of West Hall, near Wakefield, and had, with two daus., Charlotte, m. to Lieut. Forbes, R.N., and Harriet-Alicia, m. to Lieut. Roberts, a son, CHARLES STURGEON, Esq., of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, who m. 1st, Eleanor, dau. of Rev. Peter Geary, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Jane-Sydney-Louisa, dau. of Col. George Pinckney, by whom he had a son, CHARLES-WENTWORTH-DILLON STURGEON, m. Caroline-Seymour, dau. of Jonathan Sadler, Esq., of the co. Tipperary, by Anne-Alicia-Seymour Lynn, his wife, dau. of Charles-Seymour Lynn, Esq., R.N., Groom of the Wardrobe to King George III.

3. Henry-Robert Sturgeon, roy. eng. col. in the South Guides on the Duke of Wellington's Staff in the Peninsular war; m. 1805, Sarah, youngest dau. of Right Hon. John-Philpot Curran, Master of the Rolls in Ireland, but by her (who d. 5 May, 1808, aged twenty-six) he had no issue. This lady, the betrothed of Robert Emmet, was the subject of one of Moore's most touching melodies, and of Washington Irving's sketch of "The Broken Heart."

1. Charlotte, m. 1780, to James, 2nd son of James Edwards, Esq., of Old Court, co. Wicklow.

2. Agnes, m. to Pierre Jacques La Chesnay, of Rouen.

This nobleman rebuilt the ancient family seat, Wentworth House, in a very splendid manner, and dying in 1750, was s. by his son.

CHARLES WATSON-WENTWORTH, Earl of Malton, K.G., as 2nd Marquess of Rockingham. This nobleman, at the coronation of King George III., presented to his Majesty, as deputy to the Duke of Norfolk, in his grace's capacity of lord of the manor of Worksope, a right hand glove, before the king received the sceptre with the cross from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and after the king was enthroned, and whilst he received the homage of the peers spiritual and temporal, his lordship held the said sceptre, with the cross. He was elected knight of the Garter in February, 1760, and installed in the May following. In 1765 he was appointed First Lord of the Treasury in the room of the Hon. George Grenville, and sworn of the privy council; but he held the Premiership then only a single year, and from that period was leader of a strong party opposed to the measures of administration, until restored to office in 1782, in his former post of First Lord of the Treasury, and chief of a government, which has since borne in history the title of "the Rockingham Administration," and of which Charles James Fox and Edmund Burke formed a part. Under his lordship's auspices, a pacific negotiation with the revolted states of America commenced, but he did not live to complete his project. He died the same year that he had returned to power. The marquess was esteemed for his purity, his principle, and his patriotism, but he was not considered a man of more than ordinary abilities. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of Thomas Bright, Esq., of Badsworth, co. York, but, as he had no issue, all his honours, at his decease, became EXTINCT. His remains were interred in the Earl of Strafford's vault, in York Minster, 20 July, 1782, and the principal part of the Wentworth estates, including Wentworth House and Malton, co. York, devolved on his lordship's nephew, William, Earl Fitz-William, who assumed the additional surname of "Wentworth."

WAYER, OR GUADER — EARL OF NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK.

Creation of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Lineage.

RALPH DE WAYER, GUADER, or DE WAET, was constituted by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, EARL OF NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK.

Some of our historians affirm that this nobleman was an Englishman by birth, born in Norfolk; but others, that he was a native of Brittany, which is the more probable, as he was owner of the castle of Guader, in that province. Of this earl there is nothing memorable beyond his conspiracy against his royal master, whom he sought to destroy or expel; and to that end drew into his plans, Roger Earl of Hereford, Waltheof, the great Earl of Northumberland, and other persons of distinction. He m. Emma, sister of the Earl of Hereford, and he took the opportunity of his wedding day to disclose to the conspirators, when they were elated with wine, the whole of his projects. As soon, however, as they had recovered the effect of inebriation, the greater number refused to participate, and the Earl of Hereford alone joined him in openly resorting to arms. The rebellion was quickly, however, suppressed by those stout and warlike prelates, Odo, bishop of Bayeux, and Geffery, bishop of Worcester. The Earl of Norfolk fled into Brittany, leaving his followers to their fate in their encampment at Cambridge: of those, many were put to the sword, and more taken prisoners. The castle of Norwich was subsequently besieged, and his countess obliged to surrender, but she was suffered to go beyond sea. In the end this turbulent person assumed the cross, and joined an expedition under Robert Curthose, to Jerusalem, against the Turks; where he afterwards became a pilgrim, and died a great penitent. He left issue, two sons and a dau., viz.,

Ralph.

Amicia, m. to Robert, Earl of Leicester, son of Robert, Earl of Mellent, and brought to him most part of the lands, which William Fitz-Osborne, her grandfather, held in Northmandy.

By the treason of Ralph de Wayer his earldom became FORFEITED.

WEDDERBURN — BARON LOUGHBOROUGH, OF LOUGHBOROUGH, CO. LEICESTER.

By Letters Patent, dated 14 June, 1780.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER WEDDERBURN, eldest son of Peter Wedderburn, of Chesterhall, North Britain, (a lord of session, under the titular designation of LORD CHESTERHALL,*) having been brought up to the English bar, and having attained high reputation as a lawyer, was appointed solicitor-general in 1771, attorney-general in 1778, and lord chief justice of the court of Common Pleas in 1780, when he was elevated to the peerage as BARON LOUGHBOROUGH, of Loughborough, co. Leicester. In 1783 his lordship was constituted first commissioner for keeping the great seal; and, 27 January, 1793, lord high chancellor of Great Britain. In 1795, Lord Loughborough, having no issue of his own, obtained a new patent, creating him Baron Loughborough, of Loughborough, co. Surrey, with remainder to (his sister Janet's sons, by her husband, Sir James Erskine, Bart.,) his nephews, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, Bart., and John Erskine, Esq.; and he was advanced, in 1801, to the Earldom of Rosslyn with a similar remaindership. His lordship m. 1st, Betty-Anne, dau. and heir of John Dawson, Esq., of Morley, in Yorkshire, and 2ndly, Charlotte, dau. of William, Viscount Courtenay, but had no issue. He d. 3 January, 1805, when the honours created by the patents of 1795 and 1801, devolved, according to the limitation, upon his nephew, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, Bart., who was father of the 3rd EARL OF ROSSLYN (see BURKE'S Extant Peerage); and the Barony of Loughborough, co. Leicester, became EXTINCT.

Arms—Arg., on a chevron between three roses, gules, barbed and seeded, ppr., a fleur-de-lis, arg.

* In Scotland the judges assume, on being raised to the bench, the designation of nobility, but they are merely titular lords. In England a practice somewhat similar anciently prevailed, the judges being usually summoned to parliament amongst the barons, to give their advice; but they were not regarded as peers of the realm, nor did the writ of summons constitute an hereditary peerage in the family of the person summoned.

WELLES—BARONS WELLES.

By Writ of Summons, dated 6 February, 1299.

Lineage.

The first of this family mentioned by Sir William Dugdale is ADAM DE WELLES, who, in the 6th of RICHARD I.,* paid 10 marks for adhering to John, Earl of Moreton, who at that time assumed more authority, during his brother's captivity, than he was afterwards able to justify. After this Adam came

WILLIAM DE WELLES, who, in the 9th of JOHN, gave 80 marks for one knight's fee in Grimsby, co. Lincoln, and was a by another

WILLIAM DE WELLES, who, in the 11th EDWARD I., obtained license for a weekly market and a yearly fair at his manor of Alford, in Lincolnshire. He m. Isabel de Vesel, and had two sons, William, a minor, 49th HENRY III., and

ADAM DE WELLES, who in the 22nd EDWARD I. was in the wars of Gascony, and was summoned to parliament, as a Baron, 6 February, 1299, in which year he was made constable of Rockingham Castle, and warden of the forest. The next year he was in the wars of Scotland, and again in 1301 and 1302; and had regular summonses to parliament to the year of his decease, 1311. He m. Joane, dau. and heir of John d'Engayne, and had a son,

ROBERT DE WELLES, baron, never summoned to parliament. This nobleman d. in two years after he had attained majority, anno 1320, and leaving no issue by his wife, Maud de Clare, widow of Roger de Clifford, he was a by his brother,

ADAM DE WELLES, 3rd baron, summoned to parliament from 20 July, 1332, to 20 April, 1343. This nobleman, at the period of his brother's death, was only sixteen years of age; he attained his majority in the 20th EDWARD II., and doing his homage had livery of his lands. In the 7th EDWARD III. his lordship was in the wars of Scotland, and again in two years afterwards, at which latter period he was a knight. In the 16th of the same reign he was charged with ten men-at-arms and ten archers for the king's service in France, and the like number in the next year. He m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Bardolf, and dying 1345, left with a dau., Margaret, who m. William, son of William, Lord Deincourt, a son,

JOHN DE WELLES, 4th baron, summoned to parliament 15 December, 1357, and 20 November, 1360. The wardship of this nobleman, who was a minor at his father's decease, was granted to Margaret, widow of William, Lord Ros, of Hamlake. In the 22nd EDWARD III., although still in minority, he caused his father's executors to purchase a rent of ten pounds per annum, from the monks of Bardney, for the behoof of the abbess and nuns of Grenefeld, which monastery was founded by his ancestors; in consideration whereof they obliged themselves, and their successors, to find two fitting priests, to celebrate masses, matins, placebo, dirge, and commendation, every day in the chapel of our lady, within that their monastery of Grenefeld, for the health of the souls of his lordship's predecessors. Lord Welles had livery of his lands in the 29th EDWARD III., and in four years afterwards he was in the wars of Gascony. He m. Maud, dau. of the aforesaid Margaret, Lady Ros, d. in 1361, and was a by his son,

JOHN DE WELLES, 5th baron, summoned to parliament from 20 January, 1376, to 26 February, 1421. This nobleman served in the expedition made into Flanders, in the retinue of John, Duke of Lancaster, in the 27th EDWARD III., and in the 1st RICHARD II. was in the wars of France. The next year he was in the garrison of Berwick, under Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, its governor. His lordship subsequently obtained license to travel beyond sea, and returning in the 8th RICHARD II., had leave to go abroad again for the vindication of his honour, having received some affront from a knight in France. He seems to have come home solely to procure letters testimonial vouching for his credit and reputation. After this we find him in the Scottish wars; and in the 19th of the same reign, he was ambassador to Scotland, where during his sojourn, being at a banquet, where deeds of arms becoming the subject of conversation, his lordship exclaimed, "Let words have no place; if ye know not the chivalry and valiant deeds of Englishmen, appoint me a day and place when ye list, and ye shall have experience." This challenge was immediately accepted by David, Earl of Crawford, and London Bridge appointed as the place of combat. The battle was fought on St. George's Day, and the Scottish earl was declared victor. Indeed he displayed such an extraordinary degree of prowess, that notwithstanding the spear was broken upon his helmet and visage, he remained so immovably fixed in his saddle, that the spectators cried out that in defiance of the laws of arms, he was bound thereto. Whereupon he dismounted, and got up again, and ran a second course; but in the third, Lord Welles was unhorsed and flung to the ground; on which Crawford dismounting, embraced him, that the people might understand that he had no animosity, and the earl subsequently visited his lordship with great courtesy until his recovery. Of this Lord Welles nothing further is known than the period of his decease, anno 1421; although for eight years afterwards, summonses appear to have been regularly issued to his lordship. But there are other instances upon record, of summonses having been directed to barons after their deaths, probably from ignorance that the decease occurred. The case of Maurice, the 4th Lord Berkeley, is a remarkable instance; he d. in 1368, and summonses were addressed to him until 1380. Lord Welles m. Margaret, or Eleanor, dau. of John, Lord Mowbray, and had two daus., Margaret, m. 1st, John de Huntingfield; 2ndly, Stephen, 2nd Lord Scrope, of Masham; and Anne m. to James, 3rd Earl of Ormonde. He was a by (the son of his deceased eldest son, Eudo, by his wife, Maude, dau. of Ralph, Lord Greystock) his grandson,

SIR LEO, or LIONEL DE WELLES, as 6th baron, summoned to parliament from 25 February, 1432, to 30 July, 1460. This nobleman received the honour of knighthood, in the 4th HENRY VI., from the Duke of Bedford at Leicester, with the young king himself, and divers other persons of rank. His lordship for several years after served with great honour in France, and was made lieutenant of Ireland for seven years, in the 16th of the same reign. When the fatal feud between the houses of York and Lancaster broke out, Lord Welles arrayed himself under the banner of the latter, and adhering to his colours with unbending fidelity, fell at the battle of Towton Field, on Palm Sunday, 1461. His remains were deposited in Waterton Chapel, at Methley, co. York. His lordship m. 1st, Joan, or by some accounts, Cecilia, only dau. of Sir Robert Waterton, of Waterton and Methley, co. York, and sister and heir of Sir Robert Waterton, also of Waterton, Knt., and had issue,

RICHARD (Sir), who m. Joane, dau. and heir of Robert, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, and was summoned to parliament in her right, as LORD WILLOUGHBY, from 26 May, 1455, to 23 February, 1466.

I. ALIANORE, m. 1st, Thomas, Lord Hoo and Hastings; BETHELL WALBOND, Esq., of Dulford House, co. Devon is, by descent from this marriage, one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Welles; Alianore, m. 2ndly, James Lawrence.

II. CECILY, m. Sir Robert Willoughby, and had issue; the co-representatives of Cecily are the MARQUESS OF CHOLMONDELEY, and LORD WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY, both co-heirs of the Barony of Welles.

III. MARGARET, m. to Sir Thomas Dymoke, of Scrivelsby, co. Lincoln, and had issue.

IV. CATHERINE, m. 1st, Sir Thomas de la Launde, Knt., and had issue, two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

JOAN, m. to William Denton, Esq., and had a son, JOHN DENTON.

MARGARET, m. to Thomas Berkeley, Esq., and had two sons, William and Maurice.

She m. 2ndly, Robert Tempest, and had two sons, John and Thomas, who d. s. p.

Lord Welles m. 2ndly, Margaret, sister and heir of Sir John Beauchamp, of Bletahoe, and widow of John Beaufort, Earl of Somerset (by whom she was mother of Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of King HENRY VII.), and had another son,

JOHN, created VISCOUNT WELLES (see that dignity).

An attainder followed his lordship's decease, under which the BARONY OF WELLES became forfeited; but his son,

SIR RICHARD WELLES, Lord Willoughby, had a grant in the 4th EDWARD IV., through the king's especial favour, of all the goods, chattels, and moveables, whereof his father died possessed; and the next ensuing year had restitution of the manors of Welles, and other estates in the co. of Lincoln, with lands in Northumberland. In three years afterwards (1468,) his lordship obtained a full restitution in blood and honour. But this good fortune had a brief endurance, for the next year, Richard Nevill, the stout Earl of Warwick, taking up arms for the restoration of HENRY VI., made Sir Robert Welles, son and heir of Lord Willoughby and Welles, a brave and able commander, general of the Lancastrian forces. Whereupon Sir Robert drove Sir Thomas Burgh, a knight of the king's house, out of Lincolnshire, pulled down his dwelling, seized upon all his goods and chattels, and at the head of 30,000 of the people, raised the standard of Lancaster, and cried King HENRY. Of

* In Camden, RICHARD DE WELLES is stated to have held the manor of Welles ever since the Conquest, by the service of being baker to the king.

this insurrection so soon as King EDWARD had intelligence, he summoned the Lord Willoughby and Welles to his presence, but that nobleman on arriving in London, with his brother-in-law, Sir John Dymoke, and learning that the king was highly incensed, fled to sanctuary at Westminster, and there determined to remain until his wrath was assuaged. The king hoping, however, to terminate the disturbance in Lincolnshire, without being obliged to take the field, sent for his lordship, and induced him to leave his asylum, on a solemn promise of safety. He then required of Lord Welles to command his son to lay down his arms, and in the interim marched at the head of what forces he could collect into Lincolnshire, taking Lord Welles and Sir John Dymoke with him. But when he arrived within two days' journey of Stamford, where his adversaries were stationed, he learned that Sir Robert Welles had refused to obey the injunctions of his father, which had been conveyed to him by letter, and becoming enraged at the refusal, he caused, in violation of his royal promise, the heads of Lord Welles and Sir John Dymoke to be forthwith cut off. In revenge of this act of treachery, Sir Robert Welles, without awaiting the coming up of Warwick, attacked the royal army, although superior in number to that which he commanded, but after a most gallant and obstinate struggle, he sustained a defeat, and being made prisoner, was immediately beheaded. The death of the father and his heroic son took place almost at the same time in 1469, and they were both attainted after the restoration of EDWARD IV., in 1474. Lord Willoughby and Welles had issue, by the heiress of Willoughby, ROBERT (Sir), the gallant soldier whose fate we have just recorded. He d. s. p., leaving a widow, Elizabeth, dau. of John Bouchier, Lord Berners. Her ladyship survived her husband but one year, when she bequeathed her body to be interred with his in the church of the friars, at Doncaster.

JOANE, m. 1st, Richard Pigot; and 2ndly, Richard Hastings, Esq., brother of William, Lord Hastings, chamberlain to King EDWARD IV.

To Sir Robert Welles, succeeded his only sister, the above mentioned

JOANE HASTINGS, whose husband,

SIR RICHARD HASTINGS, had so much favour from King EDWARD, that he obtained a special livery of all the castles, manors, lordships, and lands, whereof Richard, Lord Welles and Willoughby, and his son, Sir Robert Welles, died possessed,* and was summoned to parliament, as "Richard Hastings de Welles, CACr." 15 November, 1482, and 9 December, 1483. His lordship had an only son, Anthony, who predeceased him. He d. himself in 1503, when, if his summons to parliament be deemed a continuation of the old Barony of Welles (but it must be recollected that the attainder was never reversed), that barony fell into ABEYANCE, amongst the descendants of the daus. of LEO, the 6th Lord Welles; but if the summons be considered a new creation, the barony at his lordship's decease became then EXTINCT.

WELLESLEY--BARON MARYBOROUGH.

By Letters Patent, dated 17 July, 1821.

(See WELLESLEY, Marquess Wellesley.)

WEMYSS--LORD BURNTISLAND.

By Letters Patent, dated 15 April, 1672.

Lineage.

SIR JAMES WEMYSS, of Caskieberry, husband of Margaret, Countess of Wemyss in her own right, was created a peer of parliament, for life, by the title of Lord Burntisland, 15 April, 1672. This peerage of course became EXTINCT on his death, 1685, and did not devolve on his son, David, who s. his mother, as Earl of Wemyss in 1706.

WENLOCK--BARON WENLOCK.

Created in 1461.

Lineage.

In the 17th HENRY VI.,

JOHN WENLOCK, or WENLOCK, was constituted escheator for the counties of Buckingham and Bedford; shortly after which coming to court, he was made usher of the chamber to Queen Margaret, when he had the title of esquire. He was next knighted, and appointed governor of Bamburgh Castle, in Northumberland. In the 28th of the same reign he was constituted chamberlain to the queen, and he fought on the side of Lancaster at the first battle of St. Albans, when he was severely wounded. After this, we find him advancing a sum of money, as a loan, to King HENRY VI., and subsequently chosen a knight of the Garter. Notwithstanding these high honours, Sir John Wenlock joined, soon after, the standard of York, and fought under that banner at the battle of Towton Field, for which desertion he was rewarded, by King EDWARD IV., with a grant of the offices of chief butler of England, and steward of the castle and lordship of Berkhamsted, in Hertfordshire. He was also raised to the degree of a baron, as LORD WENLOCK, of Wenlock, co. Salop, and sworn of the privy council. In the first period of King EDWARD's reign his lordship was employed upon confidential embassies to the courts of Burgundy and France, and he was constituted lieutenant-governor of Calais, and the marches adjacent. But afterwards joining the Earl of Warwick, in the attempt to restore HENRY VI., he had a command at the battle of Tewkesbury, where he is said to have been slain by the Duke of Somerset, who furiously cleft his head with his battle-axe, for neglecting to come up in time, whereby the battle was lost, and the fate of the King HENRY VI. decided for ever. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Drayton, but had no issue. He d. in 1471, when the Barony of Wenlock became EXTINCT. His lordship's estates devolved on THOMAS LAWLEY, who appears to have been his heir-general, and from whom descended SIR ROBERT LAWLEY, Bart., who was elevated to the peerage as BARON WENLOCK, of Wenlock, in 1831, but who d. s. p. 10 April, 1832. His property and the baronetcy passed eventually to his brother, Paul Bellby Lawley-Thompson, who had been created in 1839, BARON WENLOCK, of Wenlock (See BURKE'S Extant Peerage).

WENTWORTH — BARONS WENTWORTH, OF WENTWORTH-WOODHOUSE, VISCOUNT WENTWORTH, BARONS RABY, EARLS OF STRAFFORD.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 22 July, 1623.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 10 December, 1623.

Earldom and Barony of Raby, by Letters Patent, dated 12 January, 1640.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, 4 September, 1711.

Lineage.

The ancient stock of Wentworth-Woodhouse, co. York, has been rooted in that shire from the earliest period to which the genealogist can usually ascend in his investigations. Of the orthography of the lands, whence originated the name, Domesday Book, and all the old charters have it Winteworth, and such is still the pronunciation of the common people, who do not easily fall into new modes of speech. As to its derivation, Mr. Hunter, in his History of Doncaster, makes the following remarks: "The latter half of the name (worth) is one of the most frequent local terminals, and appears to denote some degree of cultivation. The former half affords room for conjecture. It has been suggested that it may be the word gwinat, preserved in the Briton language, which is a dialect of the Celtic, where it denotes elevation. This sense would undoubtedly apply well to Wentworth, which stands high, as does also another place of the same name, in the Isle of Ely, relatively to the fens around it. Celtic etymologies are, however, to be admitted with great caution in investigating the names of places cultivated or populated; and perhaps the scribe of Domesday, who, in one of the five instances in which the word occurs, has written it thus, Wintreworde, may have presented us with an ancient and expiring orthography, from whence we may conclude that the name of Wentworth is to be classed with Winterton, Winterburn, Winteredge, and other places, which have obtained those names from their high, exposed, or cold situations." While the lands of Wentworth-Woodhouse continued to be the seat of the chiefs, and descended from sire to son, in an unbroken series, till the succession of male heirs failed with William, the 2nd Earl of Strafford, the junior scions of the family founded, in several instances, houses of rank and influence, the Wentworths of Woolley, of North and South Elmsal,* of Bretton, of Nettlested, &c.

WILLIAM DE WYNTWORD, of Wyntword, m. in the time of HENRY III., Emma, dau. and heir of William Wodehouse, of Wodehouse, by whom he acquired that estate, and taking up his abode there, the family were subsequently designated the "Wentworths of Wentworth-Woodhouse." He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE WENTWORTH, of Wentworth-Woodhouse, who m. Beatrix, dau. of Gilbert Thakel, and had two sons,

He paid a fine to be excused from being created a knight of the Bath; and in 1528, he obtained a license from HENRY VIII. to wear his bonnet and be covered in the royal presence, because he was infirm. He m. Beatrix, dau. of Sir Richard Woodruffe, of

* The Wentworths of North Elmsal acquired that estate temp. EDWARD III., in marriage with Alice, dau. and heiress of John Bissett, and continued there for several centuries, until the year 1741, when their male line expired with Sir Butler-Cavendish Wentworth, Bart., the estates devolving on that gentleman's half-sister, CATHERINE WENTWORTH, who m. Hugh Cholmley, Esq., of Whitby, co. York, M.P. for Hedon, and high sheriff of that shire in 1724. The Wentworths of South Elmsal, sprung from a younger son of Thomas Wentworth, of North Elmsal, are also now extinct.

The Wentworths of Bretton, deriving from Richard Wentworth, of Everton, in the co. Nottingham, 3rd son of John Wentworth, of Elmsal, by Agnes, his wife, sister and co-heir of Sir William Dronsfeld of Bretton, became extinct in the male line upon the demise of Sir Thomas Wentworth Blackett, Bart., 9 July, 1792. The estates of Bretton, &c., are now enjoyed by the Beaumont family.

The Wentworths of Wentworth Castle were founded by Sir William Wentworth, of Ashby, in Lincolnshire, slain at Marston Moor, who was a younger son of Sir William Wentworth, Bart., of Wentworth-Woodhouse, and brother to Thomas, 1st Earl of Strafford. They became extinct in the male line in 1799. The estates are now possessed by Frederick-William-Thomas Vernon-Wentworth, Esq., of Wentworth Castle.

The Wentworths of Nettlested became Earls of Cleveland, and Barons Wentworth. (See p. 4.)

Sir William Wentworth d. in 1614, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR THOMAS WENTWORTH, 2nd baronet, b. 13 April, 1593, who became afterwards so conspicuous in the troubled times of the first CHARLES. In the reign of JAMES I., Sir Thomas was member of parliament for the co. of York, and also in the beginning of that of his successor; but the latter monarch, soon after his accession, elevated Sir Thomas Wentworth to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 22 July, 1628, as BARON WENTWORTH, of Wentworth-Woodhouse, and further advanced him, 10th of the ensuing December, to the degree of VISCOUNT WENTWORTH. The next year his lordship was sworn of the privy council, made lord lieutenant of the co. of York, and president of the north. In February, 1632-3, he was nominated lord deputy of Ireland; from which government he was recalled to command as lieutenant-general in the army then raised against the Scots. In 1640 he was created BARON RABY, of Raby Castle, in the bishopric of Durham (with remainder, default his own male issue, to his younger brothers, and their issue male), and EARL OF STRAFFORD. Soon after he was made a knight of the Garter, and constituted lord lieutenant of Ireland. About this period the republican and puritanical parties prevailing in parliament, Strafford became an object of their greatest distrust, and the destruction of his lordship was deemed indispensable to the accomplishment of their ulterior projects. An impeachment against him was therefore immediately voted by the Commons, and Pym deputed to carry it up to the House of Lords. The earl was just entering to take his seat, when he was apprised of the prosecution, and ordered into custody. He was subsequently brought to trial 22 March, 1640-1, but his prosecutors were unable to establish their charges, according to the laws of the land, and were therefore, after an investigation which lasted eighteen days, in which Strafford deputed himself with a degree of firmness, moderation, and wisdom that extorted admiration from his bitterest foes, obliged to resort to the very unusual and unconstitutional mode of proceeding by bill of attainder. So determined, however, were the Commons to condemn him, that the bill was brought in, and passed on the same day. It was read twice in the morning, and the third time in the afternoon; and carried by 204 voices against 59. But in the Lords its progress was not so triumphant; and when it finally passed 45 peers only were present, of whom 26 voted in the affirmative. In the end Strafford was sacrificed to the clamour of the mob, and his own magnanimous consideration for the precarious position of his royal master. The populace goaded to frenzy, flocked around Whitehall, where the King resided, calling aloud for justice, and accompanying their vociferations with open and furious menaces. The Queen and council were appalled; they advised CHARLES to sign the doom of the most faithful of his servants. Juxon, bishop of London, alone had the fortitude to counsel the king not to act contrary to his conscience. But the earl hearing of his Majesty's irresolution and anxiety, immediately addressed him, and with a devotion almost unparalleled, besought him for the sake of public peace, to put an end to his unfortunate, however blameless, life, and to quiet the tumultuous populace, by conceding the request for which they were so importunate.* The king gave at last a most reluc-

* Last letter from Thomas, Earl of Strafford, to King CHARLES I.

"May it please your Sacred Majesty,

"It hath bin my greatest griefe in all these troubles to be taken as a person which should endeavour to represent and set things amisse between your majesty and your people: and to give counsells tending to the disquiet of the three kingdomes.

"Most true it is, that this mine owne private condition considered, it hath beene a great madness, since through your gracious favour I was so provided, as not to expect in any kind tant assent; and Thomas Earl of Strafford, the firmest prop of the monarchy, was thus, in the forty-ninth year of his age, consigned to the scaffold. He suffered death with his characteristic firmness upon Tower Hill, 12 May, 1641. His lordship is allowed to have possessed many amiable qualities—to have been endowed with great natural parts—to have had a cultivated understanding,—a brave and noble bearing; but he is accused of pride, arrogance, and ambition—and the epitaph, which Plutarch says that Sylla wrote for himself, is quoted as most appropriate to his tomb, "That no man did ever exceed him in doing good to his friends, or in doing mischief to his enemies; for his acts of both kinds were most notorious." His government of Ireland has been characterized as tyrannical and rapacious. Amongst his bitterest foes was Sir Harry Vane, and he is said to have incurred the enmity of that celebrated person by taking the title of Raby, from Raby Castle, then in Vane's possession. The earl m. 1st, Lady Margaret Clifford, dau. of Francis, Earl of Cumberland, which lady d s p. He m. 2ndly, Lady Arabella Holles, dau. of John, Earl of Clare, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

ANNE, m. to Edward Watson, Earl of Rockingham, and had issue,

ARABELLA, m. to Justin McCarthy, son of the Earl of Clancarty, in Ireland.

to mend my fortune, or please my mind, more, then by resting where your bounteous hands had placed me.

"Nay, it is most mightily mistaken, for unto your majesty it is well knowne, my poore and humble advises concluded still in this, that your majesty and your people could never bee happy, till there were a right understanding betwixt you and them; no other means to effect and settle this happiness, but by the councill, and assent of parliament; or to prevent the growing evils upon this state, but by entirely putting your selfe in the last resort, upon the loyalty and good affections of your English subjects.

"Yet, such is my misfortune, this truth findeth little credit, the contrary seemeth generally to be believed, and myselfe reputed, as something of seperation between you and your people; under a heavier censure then which I am persuaded no gentleman can suffer.

"Now, I understand the minds of men are more incensed against me, notwithstanding your majesty has declared, that in your princely opinion, I am not guilty of treason, nor are you satisfied in your conscience to passe the bill.

"This bringeth me into a very great strait, there is before me the ruine of my children and family hitherto untouched, in all the branches of it with any foule crimes. Here is before me the many ills, which may befall your sacred person, and the whole kingdome, should yourselfe and parliament part less satisfied one with the other, then is necessary for the preservation both of king and people. Here are before me the things most valued, most feared, by mortal man, life or death.

"To say, Sir, that there hath not beene a strife in me, were to make me lesse man, then God knoweth my infirmities give me. And to call a destruction upon myselfe and young children (where the intentions of my heart, at least have beene innocent of this great offence), may be believed, will find no easie consent from flesh and blood.

"But with much sadness, I am come to a resolution, of that which I take to be most becoming in me, to looke upon that which is most principall in itself; which doubtless is the prosperity of your sacred person and the common-wealth, infinitely before any private man's interest.

"And therefore, in few words, as I put myselfe wholly upon the honour and justice of my peers, so clearly as to beseech your majesty might have spared that declaration of yours on Saturday last, and entirely to have left me to their lordships; so now to set your majesty's conscience at liberty, I doe most humbly beseech your majesty, in prevention of mistakes which may happen by your refusal to passe this bill; and by this means remove (prayed be God), I cannot say, this accused (but I confesse) this unfortunate thing forth of the way, towards that blessed agreement, which God, I trust shall ever establish betwene you and your subjects.

"Sir, my consent shall more acquit you herein to God, then all the world can doe besides. To a willing man there is no injury done. And as by God's grace I forgive all the world with a calmnesse and meeknesse of infinite contentment to my dislodging soule, so, Sir, to you can I give the life of this world with all the cheerfulness imaginable; in the just acknowledgment of your exceeding favours. And only begge that in your goodness, you would vouchsafe to cast your gracious regard upon my poore sonne, and his three sisters, lesse or more, and no otherwise, then as their (in present) unfortunate father, may hereafter appear more or lesse guilty of this death.

"God long preserve your Majesty,

"Your Majesties most faithful and

"humble Subject and servant,

"STRAFFORD.

WESTON—BARONS WESTON, OF NEYLAND, EARLS OF PORTLAND.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 13 April, 1628.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 17 February, 1633.

Lineage.

This family derived its origin from Hamon de Weston, Lord of Weston-under-Lizard, co. Stafford, temp. HENRY II. The first of the family to settle in Essex, about 14th EDWARD I., was

MICHAEL WESTON, younger son of Sir William de Weston, Knt., of Boston. He left two sons, Thomas (Sir), whose only dau. and heir, Margaret, m. John de Loveyn, Lord of Little Estayne, and whose dau. and heir, m. Sir William Bourchier, Knt., from whom the Earl of Essex, of that name derived; and

HUMFRY DE WESTON, who settled at Prested Hall, in Fering, co. Essex, where he was living in 1360, and where his descendants continued for several generations. Of these

WILLIAM WESTON, was of Prested Hall, and of London, in 1512; by Margaret, his wife, he had, with other issue,

Richard, his eldest son and heir, whose grandson, Robert, of Prested Hall, d. 6 June, 1601, leaving two daus. and co-heirs.

JOHN, 4th son, of whose line we treat.

The latter,

JOHN WESTON, left (besides a dau., Mary, wife of John Ball, of Suffolk) a son,

RICHARD WESTON, who, being bred to the law, laid the foundation of the greatness of the family. He was appointed one of the judges of the Common Pleas in 1559. He m. 1st, Wiburga, dau. of Michael Catesby, of Seaton, co. Lord Wharton m. 3rdly, Anne, dau. of William Carr, already mentioned as groom of the bedchamber to King JAMES I., and widow of Edward Popham, Esq., by whom he had a son, William, killed in a duel December, 1689. His lordship who was a violent Puritan, and an active parliamentary partisan, temp. CHARLES I., d. 5 February, 1695, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS WHARTON, 5th baron. This nobleman, who was esteemed a profound and eloquent statesman, having devoted himself zealously to accomplish the Revolution, was created by Queen ANNE, by letters patent, dated 24 December, 1706, VISCOUNT WINCHENDEN, co. Bucks, and EARL WHARTON, in Westmoreland. His lordship was advanced, 15 February, 1715, to the dignities of MARQUESS OF MALMESBURY, in Wiltshire, and MARQUESS OF WHARTON; and, 12 April, following, he was made a peer of Ireland, as Baron Trim, Earl of Rathfarnham, and Marquess of Catherlough. Lady Jane Coke, the survivor of the two sisters, bequeathed her estate by will, proved 19 January, 1761, to Miss Anna-Maria Drayton, of Clarges Street, London, afterwards the wife of George, 2nd Earl of Pomfret.

The marquess filled, with great éclat, the high appointment of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and took with him Addison as his Secretary. His lordship d. in London, 12 April, 1715, and was s. by his only son,

PHILIP WHARTON, 6th baron, and 2nd marquess, who was created DUKE OF WHARTON, 20 January, 1718. Of this, the profligate, eccentric, witty, and gifted Lord Wharton, Walpole thus speaks: "With attachment to no party, though with talents to govern any, this lively man changed the free air of Westminster for the gloom of the Escorial; the prospect of King GEORGE's garter for the Pretender's; and with indifference to all religion, the frolic lord, who had written the ballad on the archbishop of Canterbury, died in the habit of a Capuchin." After he had received a dukedom from GEORGE I. he became a strenuous opponent of the king's government, eventually espoused the tenets of the ancient church, and adopted the cause of the banished dynasty. In parliament his grace attained the reputation of an able and eloquent speaker; and his speeches against the ministers were delivered with much effect: in the instance of the South Sea affair Lord Stanhope was so excited by one of those tirades, that, in replying with extreme warmth, he burst a blood-vessel and died. On the bill of Pains and Penalties against Bishop Atterbury, his grace is accused of having deceived the minister by pretending to take part against the bishop, and having thus extorted from him, immediately prior to the third reading of the bill, the whole of his argument, came down to the House of Lords the next day, after a night of debauch without going to bed, and made one of the most masterly speeches in favour of the prelate, anticipating and answering all the arguments which could be adduced against him. His grace subsequently retired into Spain, openly adopting the colours of the "Pretender" (by whom he was given the title of "Duke of Northumberland"), was a volunteer in the Spanish army before Gibraltar in 1727, and was attainted by parliament in the following year. The duke m. 1st, Martha, dau. of Major-General Holmes, by whom he had an only child, Thomas, who d. an infant; and 2ndly, Maria-Theresa-O'Neill O'Beirne, maid of honour to the Queen of Spain, and dau. of Colonel Henry O'Beirne, an Irish officer, in the Spanish service, by Henrietta, his wife, dau. of Henry O'Neill, by whom (who survived until 1777) he had no issue. The duke retired at last into the Spanish monastery of St. Bernard, near Tarragona, and d. there 31 May, 1731, age thirty-two, when all his honours, save the Barony of Wharton, independently of the attainder, became EXTINCT; but were that act repealed the barony would be in abeyance between the Marquess Cholmondeley, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, Charles-J.-K. Kemeys-Tynte, Esq., M.P., of Halsewell House, in Somersetshire, Alexander-Dundas Ross-Wishart-Baillie-Cochrane, Esq., and George-Anthony Aufrere, Esq.

The Whitworths were an ancient and respectable Staffordshire family. The eldest of the six sons of RICHARD WHITWORTH, Esq. of Adbaston, in that co., by Anne, his wife, dau. of the Rev. Francis Mosley, rector of Winslow, co. Chester, uncle of Sir Oswald Mosley, 1st Bart., of Rolleston and Ancoats, was

CHARLES WHITWORTH, Esq., a distinguished diplomatist, celebrated for the number and importance of his embassies, who was raised to the peerage of Ireland, 9 January, 1720, as BARON WHITWORTH, of Galway; but d. s. p. 20 October, 1725, when the title EXPIRED. His lordship's youngest brother, FRANCIS, who represented Minehead, was grandfather of CHARLES, EARL WHITWORTH, in the peerage of England. (See that title.)

WHITWORTH — BARON WHITWORTH, VISCOUNT WHITWORTH, EARL WHITWORTH.

Irish Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 4 April, 1800.

Viscounty by Letters Patent, dated 14 June, 1813.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 25 November, 1815.

Lineage.

The Whitworths, an ancient Staffordshire family, produced a nobleman of the kingdom of Ireland, in the beginning of the last century, CHARLES WHITWORTH, Baron Whitworth, of Galway, between whom and his namesake, the eminent person of whom we are about to treat, there are many points of singular similarity. Like his noble kinsman (our English lord,) he was celebrated for the number and importance of his embassies, like him created Baron Whitworth, of Galway, and, as if to complete the resemblance, d. in the year 1725 (the last lord, it will be seen, d. in 1825,) leaving no heir to his title. The brother of this Lord Whitworth, of Galway,

FRANCIS WHITWORTH, Esq. (youngest son of Richard Whitworth, Esq. of Adbaston, co. Stafford, by Anne, his wife, dau. of Rev. Francis Mosley, rector of Winslow), was M.P. for Minehead, surveyor-general of woods and forests, and secretary of Barbadoes, settled at Leybourne, in Kent. He d. in 1743, and was s. by his son,

SIR CHARLES WHITWORTH, Knt., of Leybourne, co. Kent, and of Millington, co. Chester, M.P. for Saltash, Lieutenant-governor of Tilbury Fort, governor of Gravesend, and treasurer of the Foundling Hospital, who m. in 1749, Martha, eldest dau. of Richard Shelley, Esq., commissioner of the Stamp Office, brother of Sir John Shelley, Bart., and had three sons and four daus.,

1. CHARLES, his heir.

II. Francis (Sir), lieut.-col., d. 1805.

3. Priscilla, m. 1st, to Sir Bellingham Graham, Bart.; and 2ndly, to Francis Gerard, 2nd Viscount Lake.

III. Richard, capt. R.N., lost at sea.

II. Catherine, m. 1st, 1774, to Henry, 4th Lord Aylmer; and 2ndly, to Howel Price, Esq. She d. 1805.

III. Mary, m. to Thomas Lloyd, Esq.

IV. Anna-Barbara, m. 1782, Sir Henry Russell, Bart., chief justice of Bengal, and d. 1814.

Sir Charles d. at Bath, 22 August, 1778, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES WHITWORTH, Esq., baptised at Leybourne, 29 May, 1752, and educated at Tunbridge School, under the poet Cawthorne. Soon after he had completed his studies, Mr. Whitworth obtained a commission in the guards. In 1776 he removed with his father to Stanmore, having joined that gentleman in obtaining an act of parliament to authorize the sale of Leybourne to James Hawley, Esq., M.D. and F.R.S., which seat is now the residence of Dr. Hawley's descendant, Sir Joseph-Henry Hawley, Bart.

Mr. Whitworth's first diplomatic employment was at the court of Poland in 1786. Warsaw was then the centre of intrigues. A new partition of Poland happened to be in contemplation, and the generous effort for national independence, sealed then, as recently, the doom of this valiant and noble people. Mr. Whitworth was recalled from Poland in 1788, and accredited envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the court of Russia. In 1793, when the English cabinet had embarked in the confederacy against France, it was deemed proper to invest the ambassador at St. Petersburg with the order of the Bath, to add to the dignity of his mission; and Sir Charles Whitworth from that moment assumed a conspicuous position in the field of European politics. On his return from this embassy he was created, 4 April, 1800, a peer of Ireland, by the title of BARON WHITWORTH, of Newport Pratt, co. Galway; and his lordship repaired soon after, as plenipotentiary extraordinary, to Copenhagen. His next mission, his lordship having been previously sworn of the privy council, was in 1802, to the consular court of France, where his sojourn was but of brief duration. After numerous preliminary conferences with Talleyrand on the subject of the retention of Malta by the British government, Napoleon sent at length for the English ambassador, and a long and important interview ensued, unsatisfactory to both parties. A subsequent conference took place, when the First Consul instead of healing, appears to have widened the breach, and Lord Whitworth's prompt and dignified repression of Napoleon's intemperate address, before a full court, and all the foreign ambassadors, has been celebrated throughout Europe. He soon afterwards left Paris, and for the succeeding ten years remained in retirement. On 2 March, 1813, Lord Whitworth was made a lord of the bedchamber, and created 14 June following, a peer of the United Kingdom, as VISCOUNT WHITWORTH, of Athlerton, co. Stafford, within two months after he succeeded the Duke of Richmond as Viceroy of Ireland, and he was advanced, 25 November, 1815, to the dignities of BARON ADDASTON and EARL WHITWORTH. He continued in the government of Ireland until 1817. His lordship m. 7 April, 1801, Arabella-Diana, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir Charles Cope, Bart., of Brewern, in Oxfordshire, and widow of John-Frederick, 3rd Duke of Dorset, but had no issue. He d. 12 May, 1828, when all his honours became EXTINCT, and his estates devolved upon his widow, the Duchess of Dorset, at whose decease in the August following, they passed to her two daus. and co-heirs,

MARY, Countess of Plymouth, and ELIZABETH, Countess of Delaware.

WIDDRINGTON—BARONS WIDDRINGTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 10 November, 1643.

Lineage.

Sir WILLIAM WIDDRINGTON, Bart., of Widdrington, co. Northumberland, M.P., b. in 1611, descended from a very ancient Northumbrian family, having raised a considerable force for the royal cause, and participated in the victories of the Duke of Newcastle, under whom he fought, was elevated to the peerage by King CHARLES I., by letters patent, dated 10 November, 1643, as BARON WIDDRINGTON, of Blankney, co. Lincoln. His lordship eventually fell in the fight at Wigan Lane, when the Earl of Derby was defeated by Colonel Lilburne, in August, 1651. Of this nobleman, Lord Clarendon observes, that "he was one of the most goodly persons of that age, being near the head higher than most tall men, of a very fair fortune, and one of the four of which King CHARLES made choice to be about the person of the prince, his son, as gentleman of the privy chamber. He was a man of great courage, but of some passion; by which he incurred the ill-will of many, who imputed it to an insolence of nature, which no one was further from in reality." His lordship m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Sir Anthony Thorold, Knt., of Blankney, co. Lincoln, and had surviving issue,

I. WILLIAM, his successor.

II. Edward, captain of dragoons, who fell at the battle of the Boyne. He m. Dorothy, elder dau. and co-heir of Sir John Horsley, Knt., of Horsley, Northumberland, and left an only son,

I. Mary, m. Richard Towneley, Esq., of Towneley Hall, co. Lancaster, and d. July, 1731.

II. Elizabeth, m. Marmaduke, 4th Lord Langdale.

His lordship d. in 1695, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM WIDDRINGTON, 4th baron. This nobleman, with his brothers, engaging in the rebellion of 1715, for the restoration of the Stuarts, they were all three made prisoners at Preston, and subsequently tried and convicted of high treason, 7 July, 1716. But in the next year, his lordship, with the Messrs. Widdrington, and several more, received a royal pardon, while his honours became forfeited under the attainder. He m. 1st, Jane, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Tempest, of Stella, in the bishopric of Durham, and 2ndly, Mrs. Catherine Graham. WIDVILE OR WYDEVILE — BARONS RIVERS, EARLS RIVERS.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 29 May, 1448.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 24 May, 1466.

Lineage.

The family of Wideville, Widvile, Woodvile, or Wydeville may be traced to the 12th century.

RICHARD DE WYDVILL, of Grafton (great-great-great-grandson of William de Wydvil, of Grafton,) was constituted sheriff of Northamptonshire, 36th EDWARD III., and governor of the castle there, and again in two years after. In the 43rd of the same reign, he was made escheator for the cos. of Northampton and Rutland, and the year ensuing he was once more sheriff of Northamptonshire, and governor of Northampton Castle. He m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir John Lyons, of Warkworth, and widow of Sir Nicholas Chetwode, of Chetwode, and dying circa 1378, left issue, JOHN, his heir; Thomas, who m. twice, and had issue; Elizabeth, m. to John Paashley, of Kent; and Margaret, m. to William Hawe. The son and heir,

JOHN DE WYDEVILLE, of Grafton, was sheriff of Northamptonshire 4th, 9th, and 14th RICHARD II. He was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE WYDEVILLE, of Grafton, who d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

RICHARD DE WYDEVILLE, of Grafton, esquire of the body to HENRY V., and Constable of the Tower, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Belegate, by Mary, his wife, dau. of William Beauchamp, of Wellington, and had issue,

- I. RICHARD, his heir.
- II. Edward (Sir), commonly called "Lord Wideville," slain at St. Albin, in Brittany, 1488.
- I. Joan, m. 1429, William Haute.

The son and heir,

SIR RICHARD DE WYDEVILLE, of Grafton, was in the 3rd HENRY VI., governor of the Tower of London, and the next year he received the honour of knighthood from the king at Leicester. Soon after this, we find him lieutenant of Calais, under the Duke of Bedford, and residing there. From that period for several succeeding years, Sir Richard Wydeville was constantly engaged in the wars of France. In the interval, he married, without license, Jacqueline or Jacquetta of Luxembourg, dau. of Peter I., Comte de St. Pol, and Brienne, Chevalier de la Toison d'Or, and widow of his late commander, the king's uncle, John, Duke of Bedford; for which transgression, and for the livery of the castles, manors, and lands, constituting her grace's dower, he paid a fine of £1000. He served afterwards under Richard, Duke of York, and was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 9 May, 1448, as BARON RIVERS. His lordship was further rewarded by grants from the crown, amongst which was the manor of Westhall, co. Essex. He was made likewise a knight of the Garter, and appointed seneschal of Aquitaine. In the contest between the houses of York and Lancaster, Lord Rivers was a staunch supporter of the latter, until his daughter became Queen consort of EDWARD IV., and then of course he veered to the new order of affairs. His Lancastrian predilections were forgotten by his royal son-in-law, and he was raised to high honours, and entrusted with high offices. His lordship was first made treasurer of the exchequer, and afterwards Lord High Constable of England, for life, with remainder to his son, Anthony, Lord Scales, also for life. He was likewise advanced in the peerage to the dignity of EARL RIVERS, by letters patent, dated 24 May, 1466; but the next year he was taken out of his manor-house of Grafton, by Robin of Ridsdale, at the head of the revolted Lancastrians, and carried to Northampton, where his head was cut off. Stow gives a different version of the manner of his lordship's death. He states that being defeated in a battle by Robin of Ridsdale, near Banbury, the earl flying from the field, was made prisoner in the forest of Dene (or rather Whittlebury), and conveyed to Northampton, where he was beheaded by order of the Duke of Clarence, and the Earl of Warwick, then in hostility to King EDWARD. By Jacqueline of Luxembourg (who d. 1472), his lordship had issue,

- I. ANTHONY, his successor, who m. Elizabeth, widow of Henry Bouchier, and only dau. and heiress of Thomas, Lord Scales, in whose right he was summoned to parliament as BARON SCALES, from 22 December, 1462, to the 23rd of the ensuing February.

II. John (Sir), put to death with his father.

III. Lionel, bishop of Salisbury, d. 1485.

IV. Edward, d. s. p.

V. RICHARD, who s. his eldest brother in the honours of the family.

I. ELIZABETH, m. 1st, Sir John Grey, Lord Grey of Groby, by whom she had issue,

SIR THOMAS GREY, created MARQUESS OF DORSET.

Sir Richard Grey, beheaded in the 1st year of RICHARD III.

Lord Grey fell in the second battle of St. Albans, fighting under the Lancastrian banner, and her ladyship m. 2ndly, King EDWARD IV., by whom she was mother of

EDWARD V., King of England. } Supposed to have been murdered
RICHARD, Duke of York. } in the Tower, by the command of RICHARD III.

Elizabeth, m. to King HENRY VII.

Cecily, m. 1st, to John, Viscount Welles, and 2ndly, to Sir John Kyme, d. s. p.

Anne, m. to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, d. s. p.

Katherine, m. to William Courtenay, Earl of Devon.

- II. Margaret, m. 1464 to Thomas Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel.
- III. Anne, m. 1st, to William, Lord Bouchier, eldest son of Henry, Earl of Essex: 2ndly, to George Grey, Earl of Kent, and 3rdly, to Sir Anthony Wingfield, Knt.
- IV. Jacquetta, m. to John, Lord Strange, of Knockyn.
- V. Mary, m. 1466, to William Herbert, Earl of Huntingdon.
- VI. Katherine, m. 1st to Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; 2ndly, to Jasper Tudor, Duke of Bedford; and 3rdly, to Sir Richard Wingfield, K.G.
- VII. Another dau., stated by Dugdale to have been m. to Sir John Brounley, Knt., who is called son of the renowned Sir John Brounley, who recovered the standard of Guyen, in the memorable battle of Le Corby, against the French.

The melancholy death of the gallant and accomplished Lord Rivers occurred in 1469, and he was s. by his eldest son,

ANTHONY WIDVILLE, Lord Scales, as 2nd Earl Rivers, K.G. This nobleman, when Lord Scales, in the beginning of the reign of EDWARD IV., marched with the king into the north against the Lancastrians, and was one of the principal commanders at the siege of Alnwick Castle. He was soon afterwards made a knight of the Garter, and he obtained a grant in tail of the Isle of Wight; his lordship about this period acquired great fame in a tournament at London, wherein he contested successfully with Anthony, the Bastard of Burgundy, brother of Charles, Duke of Burgundy. Dugdale thus details the combat: "Upon Thursday next after Corpus Christi day, the king being present, they ran together with sharp spears; and parted with equal honour. Likewise, the next day on horseback; at which time this Lord Scales's horse having a long sharp pike of steel on his chaffron, upon their coping together, it ran into the nose of the bastard's horse. Which making him to mount, he fell on his side, with his rider. Whereupon the Lord Scales rode about him, with his sword drawn, till the king commanded the marshal to help him up: no more being done that day. But the next day coming into the lists on foot, with pole axes, they fought valiantly, till the point of this lord's weapon entered the sight of the bastard's helm. Which being discerned by the king, he cast down his warder, to the end the marshal should sever them. Hereupon the bastard requiring that he might go on in the performance of his enterprise, and consultation being had with the Duke of Clarence, then constable, and the Duke of Norfolk, marshal, whether it might be allowed or not, they determined that if so, then by the law of arms, the bastard ought to be delivered to his adversary, in the same condition as he stood, when the king caused them to be severed, which, when the bastard understood, he relinquished his further challenge." During the temporary restoration of HENRY VI., Lord Scales fled with his brother-in-law, King EDWARD, into Holland, and returned with him before the close of the year, bearing the title of EARL RIVERS, his father and brother having been put to death in the interval. After the re-establishment of the power of EDWARD, his lordship was constituted governor of the town and castle of Calais, of the tower of Rysebank, as also of the castle of Guynes, and the marches adjacent for seven years. He was likewise appointed captain-general of the king's army, and of all his forces, both by sea and land. In the 13th EDWARD IV., upon the creation of Prince Edward to be Prince of Wales, and Earl of Chester, Lord Rivers, being made governor to him, obtained the office of chief butler of England, and shortly after visited the shrine of St. James in Galicia, and from Spain passed into Italy where he journeyed to Rome and made many pilgrimages. The fate of this accomplished and gallant nobleman, after the decease of EDWARD IV., marks the commencement of an era in our history. He was one of the first victims to the ambition of RICHARD III.; an ambition which not long after closed the dynasty of the Plantagenets. His lordship, with his nephew, Sir Richard Grey, was treacherously seized by the Duke of Gloucester and his partisans, at Northampton, and some time afterwards beheaded in front of Pontefract Castle, where he had been confined, by order of the governor, Sir Richard Ratcliffe, without any form of trial, or being allowed to speak one word in his own vindication. Walpole assigns Lord Rivers a place in his Noble Authors, and observes, "that though Caxton knew 'none like to the Erie of Worcester', and thought that all learning in the nobility perished with Tiptoft, yet there flourished about the same period, a noble person (Anthony, Earl Rivers,) by no means inferior to him in learning and politeness; in birth his equal, by alliance his superior, greater in feats of arms, and in pilgrimages more abundant." After the decease of his 1st wife, the heiress of Scales, his lordship m. Mary, dau. and heir of Henry Fitz-Lewis, but by her had no issue.* His unhappy decease took place in 1483, when he was s. in all his honours, but the Barony of Scales, by his only surviving brother.

* The earl had an illegitimate daughter, Margaret, m. to Sir Robert Poyntes, Knt.

RICHARD WIDVILE, 3rd Earl Rivers. This nobleman d. unm. in 1491. By his testament, bearing date, 20 February, 1490, his lordship directed his body to be buried in the Abbey of St. James s., near Northampton. He bequeathed to the parish church of Grafton all such cattle as he then had at Grafton, viz., two oxen, five kine, and two bullocks, to the intent that they should yearly keep an obit for his soul, and he appointed his nephew, Thomas, Marquess of Dorset, his heir, to whom he devised all his lands whatsoever; desiring that there might be as much underwood sold, in the woods of Grafton, as would purchase a bell, to be a tenor to the bells already there, for a remembrance of the last of his blood. At the decease of his lordship, the Barony and Earldom of Rivers became EXTINCT.

WILLIAMS—BARON WILLIAMS OF THAME.

By Writ of Summons, dated 2 April, 1554.

Lineage.

This nobleman descended, it is stated, from a common progenitor with the Sir Robert Williams, Knt., who assumed the name of CROMWELL, and was ancestor of the Protector. The first person of this branch of the family,

JOHN WILLIAMS, 2nd son of Sir John Williams, of Burfield, in Berkshire (by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Richard More, Esq., of Burfield), was a servant to King HENRY VIII., and had in the 18th of that monarch £10 per annum, granted to him by patent, for the keeping of a greyhound. In some years afterwards he was clerk of the king's jewel office; and had interest enough to procure a patent for the office of master or treasurer of the same office. This, however, he was obliged to surrender, and to accept of a new patent jointly with Thomas Cromwell, then secretary of state. Having by these lucrative employments amassed considerable wealth, he purchased, in the 30th HENRY VIII., from Giles Ileron, Esq., of Shakeswell, co. Middlesex, the manors of Great and Little Ricott, in Oxfordshire. In the next year, being then a knight, he had a grant from the crown of the chief stewardship of the manors of Grafton and Hertwell, co. Northampton, with the keepership of the parks there: as also of the manors of Wytham, Weston-on-the-Green, and Botley. And he was soon after constituted chief supervisor of all the swans within the river Thames, and all other waters in England excepting those of the Duchy of Lancaster. Moreover, about this time he had a special patent for retaining ten persons, gentlemen and yeomen, in his household, and to give livery badges to them; and he had another grant of the office of treasurer of the court of augmentation. Upon the demise of EDWARD VI., Sir John Williams was one of the first who appeared in behalf of Queen MARY, and upon the accession of her Majesty to the crown, was solemnly created LORD WILLIAMS, of Thame, at the palace of St. James's. He was summoned the next year (2 April, 1554) in that dignity to parliament, but no patent of creation was ever enrolled. After which, upon surrendering his office of treasurer of the court of augmentations, he had in lieu thereof a grant of £320 per annum from the crown; and was constituted, on the marriage of the queen, lord chamberlain of the household to King PHILIP. Nor did his lordship enjoy less favour from Queen ELIZABETH, being, in the first year of her Majesty's reign, appointed lord president of Wales. He subsequently resided as lord president in the Castle of Ludlow. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, widow of Andrew Edmondes, of Gressing Temple, in Essex, and dau. and co-heir of Thomas Bledlow, Esq. (son and heir of Thomas Bledlow, sheriff of the city of London, in 1472), by whom he had issue,

Henry, who m. Anne, dau. of Henry, Lord Stafford, and d. s. p., v. p.

Francis, also d. s. p., v. p.

Isabel, m. Richard Wenman, sheriff of Oxfordshire, 1562, and had a son, Sir Richard Wenman, Knt. of Thame, co. Oxford, who m. Jane, dau. of William, Lord De la Warr, and had with junior issue, an eldest son and successor, Richard, 1st Viscount Wenman, whose only son, Thomas, 2nd Viscount Wenman, left two daus., his co-heirs, viz., Frances, m. to Richard Sanwell, Esq., of Upton Hall, co. Northampton, and Penelope, m. to Sir Thomas Cave, Bart., of Stanford Hall, co. Leicester; in the heirs-general of these marriages a co-heirship of the Barony of Williams is vested.

Margery, m. to Sir Henry Norreys, Knt., to whom she conveyed the manor of Ricott, or Rycote, in Oxfordshire, and Sir Henry was summoned to parliament from 8 May, 1572, to 24 October, 1597, as BARON NORREYS, of Rycote; their grandson,

FRANCIS NORREYS, Lord Norreys, of Rycote, was created in 1620, Viscount Thame, and Earl of Berkshire, his lordship's heir-general is the EARL OF ABINGDON, one of the co-heirs of the Barony of Williams.

He m. 2ndly, Margery, dau. of Thomas, Lord Wentworth, but had no issue. His lordship d. in 1559, when his estates devolved upon his daus., as co-heirs, and the Barony of Williams, of Thame, fell into ABETANCE between the same ladies, as it still continues with their representatives. Of Margery, the younger sister, the Earl of Abingdon is now heir-general.

WILLINGTON—BARONS WILLINGTON.

By Writ of Summons, dated 14 June, 1329.

Lineage.

JOHN DE WILLINGTON, of Willington, co. Derby, lived at, or immediately after, the time of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, since we find that his son, NICHOLAS DE WILLINGTON, of Willington, was contemporaneous with Robert, Abbot of Barton in the reign of King STEPHEN. He was s. by his son, NICHOLAS DE WILLINGTON, of Willington. A dau. and heiress of this Nicholas m. Hugo de Ffinderne, from which marriage descends Sir J. Harpur-Crewe, Bart., of Calks Abbey, in Dugdale's Monomicon, it appears that both this Nicholas and his father were liberal benefactors to the convent of Repton, and according to Lysons, the manor and church of Willington were given to the convent by these Willingtons. His brother,

RALPH DE WILLINGTON, settled at Sandhurst, in Gloucestershire, temp. King JOHN, whence the manor-house obtained the name of Willington Court. In the 8th HENRY III., he was governor of Bristol Castle, and had a grant of the wardenship of the forest, with that of the chase of Rainham, in the 17th of the same reign. He was governor of Devizes Castle, in Wiltshire. He founded St. Mary's Chapel, in the abbey of St. Peter's, at Gloucester, now called "the Ladye Chapel." He m. Olympias, dau. and heir of Sir Humphrey Franc, Knt. He d. about 21st HENRY III., and was father of

SIR RALPH DE WILLINGTON, living 37th HENRY III., who m. Joan, dau. and heir of Sir William Champenowne, of Umberleigh, co. Devon. After this marriage, their descendants, as is recorded by Sir William Pole, in his History of Devon, left their own arms, and took those of Champenowne, omitting the billets, viz., gules, a saltier, vairé. Their son,

SIR RALPH DE WILLINGTON, of Willington Court, co. Gloucester, and of Umberleigh, co. Devon, styled by Radon, "a worthy warrior," was governor of the castle at Exeter, 38th HENRY III., and sheriff of Devon. He m. Juliana (supposed by Sir William Pole to be), the dau. and heir of Sir Richard de Lomen, as the lands of Lomen came to their descendants. They had issue,

JOHN WILLINGTON, who, in the reign of EDWARD I., had several grants from the crown, but in that of EDWARD II., being involved in the Earl of Lancaster's insurrection, all his lands were seized, but his life was spared. He and his younger brother, Sir Henry de Willington, were taken prisoners at the battle of Borobridge, when the sentence against Sir Henry was that he should be drawn for his treason, and hanged for his homicides, which being carried into effect in 1322 (see Parliamentary Writs, vol. 2, div. 2, part. 2, pp. 261, 262), miracles were afterwards said to be worked by his body in 1323, then hanging in chains, at Bristol, on account of which a commission issued for the trial of Reginald de Montfort, and others who were alleged to have feigned the same. This Sir Henry Willington m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Alexander Frevill, and Joan, his wife, a co-heiress of the Marmions of Tamworth. John de Willington was restored to favour by King EDWARD III., and by that monarch was summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 14 June, 1329, to 15 November, 1338. He d. the following year, and was s. by his son,

RALPH DE WILLINGTON, 2nd baron, who was summoned to parliament, 25 February, 1342. He was in the wars of Scotland and France. He m. Elynor, dau. of John, 1st Lord Mohun, of Dunster, but d. s. p. in 1348, when his uncle, Reginald de Willington, became his heir. Reginald d. s. p., 29th EDWARD III., leaving John, the son of Henry, and grandson of Henry, who had been executed at Bristol, his heir. This line became EXTINCT in the male descent, 20th RICHARD II., when John Willington, brother of Ralph, and son of the John who was the heir of Reginald, d. leaving two sisters, his co-heirs, who m. into the families of Worth and Beaumont, whence, through heiresses, descend the Bassets, present owners of Umberleigh; as also the Baronet family of Chichester, and the Marquess of Donegal. A younger branch of the Willingtons, after remaining in Gloucestershire for two or three descents, settled in Warwickshire, temp. King HENRY VII. In which county William Willington was seated at Barcheston, and, having m. Anne, dau. of Richard Littleton, of Pillaton, d. leaving seven daus., co-heiresses, for whose marriages see BURKE's Landed Gentry.

THOMAS WILLINGTON, a younger brother of William Willington, of Barcheston, settled at Hurley, co. Warwick, where his descendants were resident for several centuries, becoming EXTINCT in the male line in 1815; from him descended the Willingtons, of Whateley and Tamworth.

WILLOUGHBY—BARONS WILLOUGHBY, OF PARHAM.

By Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1547.

Lineage.

The family of Willoughby, by a pedigree drawn up in the time of ELIZABETH, appears to be descended from SIR JOHN DE WILLOUGHBY, a Norman knight, who had the lordship of Willoughby, in Lincolnshire, by gift of the CONQUEROR. From this successful soldier we pass to

SIR WILLIAM DE WILLOUGHBY (son of Robert Willoughby, and Margaret, his wife, dau. and heiress of John de Orreby), who, in the 5th HENRY III., was signed with the cross, and accompanied Prince Edward into the Holy Land. He m. Alice, dau. of John, Lord Beke, of Eresby, and eldest co-heir of her brother Walter, Lord of Eresby, and had issue,

ROBERT (Sir), his successor.

Thomas, m. Margaret, sister and co-heir of Alun de Munby and had a son, who, assuming the surname of his mother, became William Munby. He d. s. p., and his estates were divided amongst his sisters.

Margaret, m. to Walter, son of Sir Walter Hamby, Knt.

Sir William was s. by his elder son,

SIR ROBERT DE WILLOUGHBY, who inherited in the 4th EDWARD II., as next heir the estates of Anthony Bec, bishop of Durham, and was summoned to parliament in three years afterwards as BARON WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY. He m. Margaret, dau. of Edmund, Lord Deincourt. From this nobleman we pass to his lineal descendant,

WILLIAM WILLOUGHBY, 5th Baron Willoughby de Eresby, who m. 1st, Lucy, dau. of Roger, Lord Strange, of Knokyn, and had issue, ROBERT, his successor, and 6th Baron Willoughby de Eresby. Thomas (Sir), of whose descendants we are about to treat.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Joane, widow of Edward Plantagenet, Duke of York, and dau. of Thomas Holland, 2nd Earl of Kent. He d. in 1409, and was s. in his title by his elder son, ROBERT; but we proceed with the younger,

SIR THOMAS WILLOUGHBY, of Parham, co. Suffolk; a gallant soldier, and one of the heroes of Agincourt. He m. Joane, dau. and heir of Sir Richard Fitz-Alan, Knt. (son of John Fitz-Alan, Lord Maltravers, 2nd son of Sir Richard Fitz-Alan, 3rd Earl of Arundel), and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT WILLOUGHBY, who m. Cecilia, dau. of Leo, Lord Welles, and had two sons,

ROBERT, } both knights.
Christopher, }

Sir Robert d. 30 May, 1465, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR ROBERT WILLOUGHBY, who d. in minority, and was s. by his brother,

SIR CHRISTOPHER WILLOUGHBY, who was made a knight of the Bath, 6 July, 1483, at the coronation of RICHARD III. In the next reign he raised forces to assist the king against the Earl of Lincoln, Lambert Simnel, and their adherents, and was afterwards at the battle of Stoke. He m. Margaret,

dau. of Sir William Jenny, of Knotshall, in Suffolk, and had issue,

WILLIAM, who inherited the Barony of Willoughby de Eresby at the decease of JOANE WELLES in 1508, after the dignity had been out of the Willoughby family for half a century. His lordship became possessed also of the manors of Grimsby and Grimesthorp, with the greater part of the estates of the Lord Welles.

CHRISTOPHER, of whom presently.

George.

THOMAS, from whom the extant Willoughbys, Lords Middleton derive.

John.

Dorothy.

Catherine, m. to Sir John Heydon, Knt., of Baconsthorp, co. Norfolk.

Elizabeth, m. to William, Lord Eure.

The 2nd son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER WILLOUGHBY, received the honour of knighthood for his valiant conduct at the siege of Tournay, temp. HENRY VIII. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir George Talboys, and sister of Gilbert, Lord Talboys, of Kyme, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Dorothy, m. to Ralph Hopton, Esq., of Wytham, co. Somerset.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Breuse, of Wenham, co. Suffolk.

Anne, m. to Robert Hall, Esq., of Greford, co. Lincoln.

Sir Christopher was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM WILLOUGHBY, Knt., who was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 20 February, 1547, in the dignity of LORD WILLOUGHBY, of Parham. His lordship having distinguished himself in the wars of HENRY VIII., was made lieutenant of Calais, and the adjacent marches, in the 4th EDWARD VI., and he resided there during the remainder of that king's reign. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Heneage, Knt., of Hainton and Knaith, co. Lincoln, by whom he acquired considerable estates, and had issue,

CHARLES, his successor.

Mary, m. to William Metham, Esq., of Bollington, co. Lincoln.

He m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Robert Garnish, Esq., of Kenton, in Suffolk, and widow of Walter, 1st Viscount Hereford. His lordship d. in 1574, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES WILLOUGHBY, 2nd Baron Willoughby, of Parham, who m. Lady Margaret Clinton, dau. of Edward, 1st Earl of Lincoln, and had issue,

I. WILLIAM, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Christopher Hildyard, Knt., of Winestead, in Yorkshire, and dying v. p., left with other issue,

WILLIAM, successor to his grandfather.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir William Hickman, of Gainsborough, co. Lincoln.

Catherine, m. to Joseph Godfrey, Esq., of Thorock, in the same shire.

Mary, m. to Sir William Booth, of Killingholm, also in Lincolnshire.

II. Ambrose (Sir), of Matson, co. Gloucester, m. Susan, dau. of Richard Brookes, Esq., and sole heir of her maternal grandfather, Richard Pate, Esq., of Matson, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Robert Lovett, of Lipscombe,) he left an only son,

EDWARD, who m. Rebecca, dau. of Henry Draper, Esq., and had surviving issue,

HENRY, who emigrated to Virginia, and d. there in 1685, leaving by Mary, his wife, a son,

HENRY, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of William Pidgeon, Esq., of Stepney, co. Middlesex, and had issue,

1 HENRY, declared 15th baron in 1767.

2 William, who m. —, dau. of — Knochtou and left a son,

William, who d. s. p.

3 Edward, } d. s. p.
4 Joseph }

5 FORTUNE, who m. Hannah, dau. of Thomas Barrow, and widow of Cook Tollet, Esq., of Swanscomb, in Kent, and dying 1720, left a son,

GEORGE, who s. as 16th baron.

Richard, whose line ceased with his sons.

Sarah, m. to — Birt.

Rebecca, m. to Richard Hull.

III. Edward, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Francis Manby, Esq., of Elsham, and widow of John Prescott, and had a son, Edward, who d. young.

GEORGE, his successor.

JOHN, } who became successively Lords Willoughby.
 CHARLES, }

Frances, m. 1st, to Sir John Harpur, Knt. of Swarkeston, co. Derby: 2ndly, to Charles-Henry Kirkhoven, Baron Wotton, in England, and Earl of Bellomont, in Ireland; and 3rdly, to Henry Heveningham, Esq., of Heveningham, in Suffolk.

Anne, m. to Sir John Harpur, Bart., of Calke, co. Derby.

Catherine, m. to Charles Cockayne, 3rd Viscount Cullen, in Ireland.

Lord Willoughby d. in 1673, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE WILLOUGHBY, 7th baron, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Henry Fiennes, otherwise Clinton, Esq., by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his successor.

Anne, d. young.

Elizabeth, m. to the Hon. James Bertie, 2nd son of James, 1st Earl of Abingdon, and was mother of Willoughby, 3rd Earl of Abingdon.

His lordship d. at Knaith, in 1674, and was s. by his son,

JOHN WILLOUGHBY, 8th baron, who d. in 1678, unm., when the barony reverted to his uncle,

JOHN WILLOUGHBY, 9th baron. This nobleman m. Anne Bolton, and dying s. p. in 1678, was s. by his brother,

CHARLES WILLOUGHBY, 10th baron, who m. Mary, dau. of Sir Beaumont Dixie, Bart., of Bosworth, co. Leicester, but d. s. p. in 1679, devising his estate to his niece, Elizabeth, wife of the Hon. James Bertie. At the decease of his lordship, the barony, by right, should have devolved upon the descendant of Sir Ambrose Willoughby, 2nd son of Charles, the 2nd lord; but that gentleman's grandson, Henry Willoughby, having emigrated to America, the second branch remained in ignorance of the failure of the elder, and as the senior line put in no claim to the title, it was presumed to have become likewise EXTINCT; the Barony of Willoughby, of Parham, under these circumstances, was adjudged erroneously to the son and heir of Sir Thomas Willoughby, youngest son of the 2nd lord (refer to issue of Charles, 2nd baron,) and he was summoned to parliament accordingly, 19 May, 1685, by writ, addressed "Thomas Willoughby de Parham, Chl'r." This

THOMAS WILLOUGHBY, Baron Willoughby, of Parham, m. Eleanor, dau. of Hugh Whittle, Esq., of Horwath, Lancashire, and had, with other issue,

HUGH, his successor.

Francis, m. to Eleanor, dau. of Thomas Rothwell, of Haigh, co. Lancaster, and had issue,

Thomas, d. unm. 1703.

EDWARD, who s. his uncle as Lord Willoughby.

CHARLES, who s. his brother.

His lordship d. in 1692, and was s. by his eldest son,

HUGH WILLOUGHBY, Baron Willoughby of Parham. This nobleman m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Lawrence Halliwell, Esq., of Tockholes, in Lancashire, and had a son,

Thomas, who d. young.

His lordship m. 2ndly, in 1692, Honora, widow of Sir William Egerton, and dau. of Sir Thomas Leigh, son and heir of Thomas, 1st Lord Leigh, but d. s. p. in August, 1712, when he was s. by his nephew,

EDWARD WILLOUGHBY, Baron Willoughby, of Parham, who, when the honour devolved upon him, was abroad as a private soldier in the confederate army, under John, Duke of Marlborough. His lordship did not, however, enjoy the peerage long, for he d. in 1713, and was s. by his brother,

CHARLES WILLOUGHBY, 14th baron, b. 25 December, 1681, who m. Hester, dau. of Henry Davenport, Esq., of Darcy Lever, by whom he had, HUGH, his successor. Helena, m. to Baxter Roscoe, of Anglezark, Bolton; and Elizabeth m. to John Shaw. He d. 12 July, 1715, and was s. by his son,

HUGH WILLOUGHBY, Baron Willoughby, of Parham. This nobleman was elected vice-president of the Royal Society in 1752, and president of the Society of Antiquaries in two years afterwards. His lordship was esteemed a man of abilities, but according to Cole's MSS. in the British Museum, he was a presbyterian of the most rigid class. "I have heard" (says Cole) "Mr. Coventry, of Magdalen College, Cambridge, declare that his conscience was so nice, that he could not bring himself to receive the sacrament in the church of England on his knees, without scruple, and thought it idolatry. He had a very small estate, and when he came to it, with the title, was in a very humble capacity in the army." He d. unm. 21 January, 1765, when the barony was claimed by

HENRY WILLOUGHBY, representative of the elder branch (refer to Sir Ambrose Willoughby, 2nd son of the 2nd lord,) and the House of Lords adjudged, in 1767, "That he had a right to the title, dignity, and peerage of Willoughby, of Parham; which was enjoyed from the year 1690 to 1765 by the male line (now EXTINCT.) of Sir Thomas Willoughby, youngest son of Charles, Lord Willoughby, of Parham, who were successively summoned to parliament by descent, in virtue of letters patent, bearing date 16 February, 1st EDWARD VI., and sat as heirs male of the body of Sir William, created Lord Willoughby of Parham, by the said letters patent, contrary to the right and truth of the case; it now appearing that Sir Ambrose Willoughby, the 2nd son of the said Charles (and elder brother of the said Thomas,) who was averred to have died without issue, left a son; and that Henry Willoughby, Esq., the claimant, is great-grandson and heir male of the body of such son, and consequently heir male of the said Sir William, who was created Lord Willoughby, of Parham, the male line of the elder son, Charles, Lord Willoughby, of Parham, having failed in or before the year 1690." Mr. Willoughby became, therefore, 16th Baron WILLOUGHBY, of Parham, and took his seat in the House of Peers, 25 April, 1767. His lordship m. Susannah, dau. of Robert Gresswell, Esq., of co. Middlesex, by whom he had one surviving dau., Elizabeth, who m. 1st, John Halsey, Esq., of Tower Hill, and 2ndly, Edward Angles, Esq. He d. 29 January, 1775, and was s. by his nephew,

GEORGE WILLOUGHBY, 17th baron, who d. s. p., 29 October, 1779, since which period the Barony, created by patent, 20 February, 1547, has remained DORMANT.

A short extract from the Vicissitudes of Families will appropriately conclude this memoir of the Willoughbys of Parham:

"The Barony of WILLOUGHBY OF PARHAM was conferred by letters patent, in 1547, on Sir William Willoughby, Knt., and the heirs male of his body, and devolved at his death, on his son and heir, Charles, 2nd lord, who had with other children, three sons, who all left issue. In the descendants of the eldest son, the barony continued vested until the decease, without issue, of the 10th lord, in 1679. At his lordship's decease, the title ought, by right, to have gone to the heir of Sir Ambrose, the second son of the second lord; but as his branch had emigrated to America, it was presumed to have become extinct, and the Barony of Willoughby of Parham, was adjudged erroneously to the son of the second lord's youngest son, and that personage and his descendants continued to sit in parliament as Lords Willoughby of Parham. Meanwhile, the descendant of Sir Ambrose came back from America, proved his pedigree, and thus created a remarkable state of things. He, the true lord, was excluded from his rights as a peer, while his cousin, the false lord, sat and voted. In course of time, however, right prevailed. 'Dormit aliquando jux, moritur nunquam.' The male line of the false lord expired, and Henry Willoughby, Sir Ambrose's representative, claimed his peerage, and had it adjudged to him by a memorable decision of the House of Lords, which admitted that the intermediate lords had 'sat contrary to the right and truth of the case.'

"The decision, one should have supposed, would have ended all perplexity connected with the title of Willoughby of Parham. But it was not so. As the first false lord was summoned to parliament under the erroneous presumption that he was a peer, and took his seat accordingly under the writ, an independent barony in fee was thereby created, descendible to his heirs general.

"For instance, when the eldest son of an earl is summoned up in the name of a barony not vested in his father and it afterwards turns out that the earl had no such barony, then a substantive barony by writ is created; whereas, on the contrary, had the earl possessed a barony, the effect of the writ to his heir-apparent, would only be to accelerate the descent of the dignity, and to make it still descendible according to the original limitation.

"There still being an heir-general of the false Lord Wilmot, is not such heir-general, in this view of the case, entitled to a barony in fee?"

WILMOT—VISCOUNTS WILMOT IN IRELAND, BARONS WILMOT AND EARLS OF ROCHESTER, IN ENGLAND.

Irish Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 4 January, 1620.

English Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 29 June, 1643.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 13 December, 1652.

Lineage.

SIR CHARLES WILMOT, or WILLMOTT, lord president of Connaught, and privy-councillor to JAMES I. and CHARLES I., was raised to the peerage of Ireland, as VISCOUNT WILMOT, of Athlone, 4 January, 1620: taking the locality of his title from the seat of his government (Athlone) as lord president of Connaught. His lordship received very considerable grants of land in Ireland. "In regard of the long and faithful services done to Queen ELIZABETH and the crown by Sir Charles Willmott, and the better to encourage and enable him to persevere therein, the King was pleased, at his humble suit, to direct by privy seal, dated at Westminster, 15 June, 1614, and at Windsor, 4 September, the Lord Deputy Chichester, to accept of him (Sir Charles Willmott), by grant or surrender, an estate in fee simple of lands in Ireland of the clear yearly value of £200 English and his surrender (within twelve months), of two pensions of £250 a-year granted to him for life, and 10s. a-day Irish harpes, granted to him in respect of his government of Kerry, during pleasure, in consideration whereof he was to receive a grant to him and his heirs, or such as he should nominate, in fee simple so many crown lands as should amount to £200 a-year English, according to the rents rateably for each parcel remaining of record. And Sir Charles having by petition, declared ye many difficulties and great expence of time he must suffer in acquiring lands fit for his majesty to accept, all which time his grant was to stay, the king was pleased, by letters from Windsor, 4 September, 1614 to enlarge his warrant, and to direct the lord deputy, without delay, to pass patent to him of £100 lands of the said £200 a-year before he should surrender, and lands to the king and to take caution of him to make the said surrenders, within one year." Accordingly, were granted by this patent the abbey and monastery of Carrickfergus, co. Antrim, with lands in the co. of Waterford and various other counties. Sir Charles had subsequently other extensive estates assigned to him throughout Ireland, including the monastery and lordship of Baltinglass, co. Wicklow. Lord Willmott m. twice; by his 2nd wife, Mary, widow of Garret, 1st Viscount Moore, and dau. of Sir Henry Colley, of Castle Carbery, co. Kildare, which lady was buried "at Drogheda in the Lord Moore's tomb, 3 July, 1654," he does not appear to have had issue; but by his 1st wife, he was father of ARTHUR, who m. a dau. of Sir Moyses Hill, but d. s. p. 31 October, 1632; and of CHARLES, his successor. This latter, Lord Willmott's only surviving son,

HENRY WILMOT, 2nd Viscount Wilmot, of Athlone, had been previously, to the death of his father, created a baron of England, by letters patent, of King CHARLES I., dated 29 June, 1643, as LORD WILMOT, of Adderbury, co. Oxford. He was at that time lieutenant of the horse, in his majesty's armies throughout England and Wales, and attained high reputation, particularly at the battle of Roundway Down. His lordship afterwards remained faithfully attached to King CHARLES II., during his exile, and was mainly instrumental in enabling his Majesty to effect his escape after the fatal battle of Worcester. In consideration of these eminent services he was advanced by letters patent, dated at Paris, 13 December, 1652, to the EARLDOM OF ROCHESTER. His lordship m. Anne, widow of Sir

Henry Lee, of Ditchley, co. Oxford, and dau. of Sir John Sir John, Bart., of Lyddiard Tregoz, co. Wilts, and of Battersea and Wandsworth, so created 22 May, 1611, and grandaunt of the celebrated statesman and author, Viscount Bolinbroke. The earl d. at Dunkirk, in 1659, and was s. by his only surviving son,

JOHN WILMOT, 2nd Earl of Rochester. This is the nobleman who became so celebrated in the reign of CHARLES II., as the gifted, witty, but licentious companion of the merry monarch. His lordship, Walpole characterises as a poet, whom the muses inspired, but were ashamed to own, and who practised without the least reserve, the secret which can make verses more read for their defects than for their merits. Lord Rochester's poems are truly described by the same author, as having more obscenity than wit, more wit than poetry, and more poetry than politeness. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Mallet, Esq., of Enmore, co. Somerset, "la triste héritière," named by Grammont, and of whom mention is made by Burnet. By her he had issue,

I. CHARLES, his successor.

II. ANNE, of whom presently, as eldest sister and co-heir of her brother

III. Elizabeth, m. Edward Montague, 3rd Earl of Sandwich, and was by him (who d. 20 October, 1729) mother of Edward-Richard, Viscount Hinchinbroke, who d. 1727, father of John, 4th Earl of Sandwich, the diplomatist and statesman, from whom derives the present Earl of Sandwich.

III. Malet, m. John Vaughan, Viscount Lisburne, so created 26 June, 1695, and by him (who d. in 1720) was mother of Wilmot, 3rd Viscount Lisburne, ancestor of the present Earl of Lisburne.

The earl d. in 1680, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES WILMOT, 3rd Earl of Rochester, who d. unm. and in minority the year after his father, when all his honours became EXTINCT, and his co-representation devolved on his eldest sister,

LADY ANNE WILMOT, who m. twice: her 2nd husband was the Hon. Francis Greville, ancestor by her of the Grevilles, Earls of Warwick: her 1st husband was Henry Baynton, Esq., of Bromham, Wilts, M.P. for Chippenham in 1658, eldest son and heir of Sir Edward Baynton, of Bromham, M.P. for Calne, in 1658, high-sheriff for Wilts, 16th CHARLES I., 1664; commissioner of parliament in the Scots army, and created at the Restoration a knight of the Bath, derived 8th in descent, through a succession of knightly ancestors and distinguished alliances, from Sir John Baynton, Knt., of Falston, 25th HENRY IV., and Joan, his wife, dau. by Sir Richard Dudley, Knt., of Elizabeth, in her issue, heiress of her nephew, Richard de Beauchamp, 2nd Baron St. Amand, who d. 1505, and dau. of Sir Walter de Beauchamp and Elizabeth, his wife, heiress of Bromham, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Roche, Knt., of Bromham. By this gentleman, who was baptised 17 November, 1664, and d. in 1691, Lady Anne was mother of one son and one dau. The former of whom,

JOHN BAYNTON, Esq., m. Catherine Brounker, and dying s. p. 1716-17, was s. by his sister and heir.

ANNE, heiress of Bromham. This lady m. twice: 1st, Edward Rolt, Esq., of Saccomb Park, co. Hertford, M.P. for Chippenham, son of Sir Thomas Rolt, Knt., of Saccomb Park, President of the East India Company at Surat, knighted at Whitehall, 1 October, 1682, and high-sheriff of Hertfordshire 1696. She m. 2ndly, in 1724, James Somerville, 13th Baron Somerville, and the eldest surviving grandson of this marriage, Kenelm, 17th Baron Somerville, was father of HUGH, 18th BARON SOMERVILLE.

By her 1st marriage the heiress of Bromham had issue,

I. THOMAS, in whose line the representation of the line continued.

II. EDWARD, of whom presently.

III. John Rolt, Rector of Bromham and Yatesbury, who had issue and d. 25 October, 1793.

IV. Henry Rolt, cornet, horse guards, 1737.

V. Wilmot Rolt, d. unm.

VI. James Rolt, Gentleman Usher to the Princess Amelia, d. 5 March, 1795, m. seventy-four.

* GUIDO DE TABLIER, Lord of Falston, was father of a dau. and heir, EDITH, heiress of Falston, who by her husband, Richard de Grimsted, was mother of a dau. and co-heir, MARGARET, heiress of Falston, who m. Thomas de Baynton, and was mother of NICHOLAS DE BAYNTON, Lord of Falston, s. 1335, living 45th EDWARD III., who m. Joan, dau. of Gilbert de Berwick. Their son, NICHOLAS DE BAYNTON, Lord of Falston, was father of NICHOLAS DE BAYNTON, s. 1352, living 6th HENRY IV., who m. JANE, dau. and co-heir (with her sister, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Walter de Beauchamp,) of Sir John Roche, Knt., of Bromham, Wilts, and was father by her of Sir John Baynton, Knt., of Falston, father, as above stated (by JOAN, in her issue, heiress of Richard Beauchamp, 2nd Baron St. Amand), of Sir John Baynton, Knt., of Falston.

I. Elizabeth, m. John Pridesaux, Esq., brigadier-general, 2nd son of Sir John Pridesaux, Bart., and was by him mother of Sir EDMUND-SAUNDERSON PRIDEAUX, 9th baronet.

II. Anna-Maria Rolt, d. unm. 27 November, 1723.

The 2nd son of the heiress of Bromham and Mr. Rolt, viz.,

EDWARD ROLT, Esq., of Spyre Park, Bromham, assumed the additional surname of BAYNTUN, and was created a baronet 9 July, 1762. Sir Edward Bayntun-Rolt, who was M.P. for Chippenham, and groom of the bedchamber to the Prince of Wales, m. Mary Poynter, of Herryard, co. Southampton, and had issue, one son and two daus.,

SIR ANDREW BAYNTUN-ROLT, of whom presently.

Elizabeth, who m. Andrew Stone, Esq., and d. 5 June, 1782. Her son, Bayntun Stone, lieut.-col. 58th foot, by Anne, his wife, only dau. and heir of John Stone, Esq., of Badbury, Wilts, was father of an eldest son, Henry Stone, Esq., of Badbury, sometime an officer in the 6th Inniskilling dragoons. This gentleman b. in 1824, m. 17 January, 1850, Catherine-Charlotte-Mary, sister of Anthony-John Wright-Biddulph, Esq., of Burton Park, co. Sussex, and elder dau. of Anthony-George Wright, Esq., who assumed the additional surname of Biddulph after that of Wright, on succeeding to Burton Park, and had issue.

WINDSORE—BARON WINDSORE.

By Writ of Summons, dated 22 August, 1381.

Lineage.

At the time of the General Survey,

WALTER FITZ-OTHER possessed three lordships in Surrey, two in Hampshire, three in Bucks, and four in Middlesex; of which Stanwell, in the latter county, was the chief place of abode of himself and his descendants for several succeeding ages. Those lordships, manors, and lands, moreover, were held by his father, Sir Other, in the reign of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. Walter Fitz-Other was warden of all the forests in Berkshire, and castellan of Windsor in the time of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The name and family of his wife are in doubt, as likewise the seniority of his three sons,*

WILLIAM, his successor.

Robert, Lord of Eston, afterwards called Estains, in Essex, in which he was s. by an only son,

William, who left a dau., his heir,

Delicia, m. to Robert de Hastings, and had a dau., Delicia, who m. Henry de Cornhill, whose only dau. and heir, Jane, being m. to Sir Godfrey de Lovaine, was mother of Sir Matthew de Lovaine, who held the said manor of Estaine by barony.

* GERALD, is called, in the Duke of Leinster's pedigree, the eldest, although placed youngest on the pedigree of the Earls of Kerry, and the latter disposition is supported by Segar, Dugdale, and Anstis, all eminent members of the Herald's College. These Herald's maintain, that the appellation of Fitz-Walter was given to Gerald because he was the youngest son. Lopez, however, protests against such a conclusion, and says, "It deserves an inquiry, how the consequences of his being a younger son can be drawn from his having the appellation of Fitz-Walter! The custom of that age," he continues, "warrants the affirmation of the contrary; and that the eldest son, especially, assumed for his surname the christian name of his father, with the addition of Fitz, &c. And this continued in use until surnames came to be fixed about the time of EDWARD I., and among many families until long after that time, younger sons being not so frequently known, or called by their fathers' christian name, as by that of his office or employment. For which reason the two brothers of Gerald are not called Fitz-Walter, but Windsor."

Gerald, who bore the surname of FITZ-WALTER, and being successfully employed by King HENRY II., against the Welsh, was constituted governor of Pembroke Castle, and afterwards made president of the co. Pembroke. He m. Nesta, dau. of Rhese, Prince of Wales, and from their union sprang the Fitz-Geralds, Earls of Kildare, Dukes of Leinster, and other eminent families.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM bore the surname of WINDSORE, and s. his father in his offices of warden of the forests of Berkshire, and Castellan of Windsor. The Empress MAUD confirmed to him, at Oxford, all the grants made to his ancestors of the custody of Windsor Castle, and of all lands, in as full a manner as they had enjoyed them in the time of her father, HENRY I. He assumed the designation of Windsor from his office, and left two sons,

WILLIAM, his successor.

Hugh de Windsor, lord of the manor of West Horsley, co. Surrey, which, by heirs female, devolved upon the Barons de Berners.

The elder son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM DE WINDSORE, was also a powerful baron in the reign of HENRY II., and in 1165, upon the assessment for a marriage portion for that monarch's daughter, he certified that he held sixteen knights' fees and a half de veteri feoffamento, and three and a half de novo, for which he afterwards paid £12 2s. 6d. In 1194, he attended the king in his expedition into Normandy, when he raised the siege of Vernuel, and beat the French in several skirmishes. Sir William de Windsor, it is supposed, eventually fell in that campaign. He left two sons, WALTER and William, and was s. by the elder,

WALTER DE WINDSORE, who had accompanied his father in the expedition into France. This baron having no male issue, divided, by virtue of a fine levied in the 9th RICHARD I., the whole barony of his father, with his brother, William de Windsor. He d. about the year 1205, leaving two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

Christian, m. to Duncan de Lascelles.
Gunnora, m. to Ralph de Hodeng.

In the division of the estates, as mentioned above, the deceased lord's brother, and the male representative of the family,

WILLIAM DE WINDSORE, had the lordships of Stanwell and Hakeburn, with other lands, &c., of considerable value; and in 1212, he paid into the exchequer, £100 for livery of some part of the estates which was possessed by his nieces. He was s. by his son and heir,

WILLIAM DE WINDSORE, who d. about the year 1275, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM DE WINDSORE, of Stanwell, who m. Margaret, dau. of John Drokensford, and sister of Sir John Drokensford, Knt., and had issue, RICHARD, his successor, Walter, and a dau., Margaret, who took the veil, and was a nun at Ankerwyke Monastery, near Staines. He was s. by his elder son,

SIR RICHARD DE WINDSORE, who, attaining majority in the 13th EDWARD I., had livery of the manor of Stanwell, in Middlesex, and of West Hakeburn, in Berkshire. In the 23rd and 25th of the same reign he was returned one of the knights for the co. Berks. In 1297, he had a military summons to march under Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, into Gascony, and he subsequently sat in parliament as one of the knights for the co. Middlesex. In the 17th EDWARD II., upon an inquisition in every county, returned into chancery, of such as inherited arms from their ancestors, Sir Richard de Windsor was named amongst those of the cos. Middlesex and Berks. He d. in two years afterwards, seized of the manors of Stanwell, in Middlesex, and West Hakeburn, in Berkshire; as also the ward of the castle of Windsor. He left issue by his wife, Julian, dau. of Sir Nicholas Stapleton, of Hachilsay, co. York, William, rector of the church of Stanwell, and an elder son, his successor,

RICHARD DE WINDSORE, who served in parliament, temp. EDWARD III., for the cos. Middlesex and Berks. He m. twice: by his 1st wife, Joane, he had one child, a daughter. He m. 2ndly, Julian, dau. and co-heir of James Molyns, of the co. Southampton, and had two sons,

JAMES (Sir), his successor, ancestor of the Lords Mountjoy, Earls of Plymouth, &c.

WILLIAM (Sir), of whom presently.

Richard de Windsor m. 3rdly, Claricia, dau. of John Drokensford, and widow of John Yorke. He d. in 1367, and was s. in his estates by his elder son, but we pass to the younger,

SIR WILLIAM DE WINDSORE, an eminent warrior and statesman, in the reigns of EDWARD III. and RICHARD II.; by the former monarch he was constituted Lieutenant of Ireland, and by the latter summoned to parliament as a Baron, from 22 August, 1381, to 3 March, 1384. His lordship m. about the year 1378, the famous and beautiful ALICE PIERCE or PERRERS,* but appears to have d. s. p. in 1384, as by the post-mortem inquisition taken before Nicholas Brembre, mayor of London, after enumerating his estates, it is stated, "that he died September 15th, 8th RICHARD II., leaving his three sisters his heirs, viz.,

"Isabel, thirty-eight years of age, unm.

"Christian, thirty-four years of age, m. to Sir William Moraux, Knt.

"Margery, aged thirty-two, m. to John Duket."

At his lordship's decease the Barony of Windsor became EXTINCT. Sir William Dugdale says, that Lord Windsor left daughters, but Collins considers those the issue of his wife, Alice, by another husband, and he quotes, in corroboration, a passage from her will; wherein styling herself widow of Sir William Windsor, she bequeaths to Joan, her youngest dau., her manor of Gaynes. This Joane m. Robert Skerne, of Kingston upon-Thames.

WINDSOR—EARL OF PLYMOUTH.

By Letters Patent, dated 6 December, 1682.

Lineage.

This baronial family descended from

WALTER FITZ-OTHER, warden of all the forests in Berkshire, and castellan of Windsor in the reign of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and in which offices he was s. by his son and heir,

WILLIAM FITZ-WALTER, who assumed the surname of WINDSOR, from his office. His eldest son and heir,

* Of this celebrated woman, BARNES, in his History of the Reign of King Edward III., states, "That being a person of extraordinary beauty, she was (48th EDWARD III.) made Lady of the Sun, and rode from the Tower of London through Cheap-side, accompanied with many lords, knights, and ladies; every lady leading a lord or knight, by his horse's bridle, till they came into West Smithfield; where presently began solemn jousts, which held for seven days together. That she had been constantly misrepresented by most of our writers (one taking it from another), as being King EDWARD's concubine, but that it was improbable, from the reputation she had of being taken in marriage by so considerable a person as the Lord William Windsor; and that King EDWARD, who never else is said to have gone astray, even in the flower of his age, should, within five years of the queen's death, when he was very infirm, burn in flames. That the records wherein she is mentioned are not severe on her reputation, as appears from the charge against her, brought into parliament in the 1st RICHARD II., in these words:—

"Dame Alice Perrers was introduced before the lords, and by Sir Richard le Scrope, Knt., steward of the king's household, charged for pursuing of matters, contrary to orders taken two years before; namely, that no woman should, for any advantage, present any cause in the King's Court, on pain of losing all they had, and being banished the realm for ever. That, particularly she had procured Sir Nicholas Dagworth to be called from Ireland, whether he was sent; and that she also procured, from the king, restitution of lands and goods, to Richard Lyon, merchant of London, whereas the same lands, having been forfeited by him, had been given to the king's own sons. To all which the said Dame Alice replied, that she had not pursued any such thing for any advantage of her own. Whereupon divers officers, counsellors, and servants to King EDWARD III., being examined, proved that she made such pursuit; and that, in their conceits, for her own private gain. Then judgment was given by the lords against the said dame, that according to the order aforesaid, she should be banished, and forfeit all her goods and lands whatsoever."

Sir Robert Cotton, in his Abridgment of Records, makes this remark on the above judgment: "To say truth of the devil is counted commendable, and therefore surely the record against the said lady, being very long, proves no such heinous matter against her; only it sheweth, that the same dame was in such credit with EDWARD III., as she sat at his bed's head, when all of the council, and the privy chamber, stood waiting without doors; and that she moved those suits that they dared not; and these two suits, whereof she was condemned, seemed very honest; her mishap was, that she was friendly to many, but all were not so to her."

The effect of this conviction was, however, subsequently removed.

WILLIAM DE WINDSOR was a powerful baron in the reign of HENRY II., which monarch he attended in his expedition into Normandy, where he d., leaving two sons, Walter, who left only two daus., and

WILLIAM DE WINDSOR, who became male heir, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM DE WINDSOR, surnamed the "Great Seal," who d. about 1275, leaving, by Agnes, his wife, two sons, WILLIAM and Hugh, who left an only dau., Joan, m. to Sir Richard de Dray, Knt. The former,

WILLIAM DE WINDSOR, was seated at Stanwell. He m. Margaret, sister of Sir John Droghda, Knt., and dying 7th EDWARD I., was s. by his eldest son,

SIR RICHARD DE WINDSOR, who served in several parliaments for Berkshire and Middlesex. He was summoned with other great men to attend the king at Berwick-upon-Tweed, well appointed with horse and arms, to march against the Scots. He m. 1st, Julian, dau. of Sir Nicholas Stapleton, Knt., of Hachilsay, co. York, and by her had two sons, RICHARD, his heir, and William, in holy orders, rector of Stanwell. Sir Richard had no issue by his 2nd wife, Joan, and dying 19th EDWARD II., was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD DE WINDSOR, M.P. for Berks and Middlesex, who m. thrice, having male issue only by his 2nd wife, Julian (dau. and co-heir of James Molyne, of co. Hants, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and co-heir of William de Binstworth), two sons,

JAMES, his heir.

William (Sir), a great military commander, who distinguished himself in the wars in Ireland (of which country he was appointed lieutenant, 43rd EDWARD III.), Scotland, and France, and was summoned as a baron of the realm, 24 March, 4th RICHARD II., to the parliament held at Northampton. His lordship d. without male issue, 15 September, 8th RICHARD II., leaving his three sisters, heirs to his estates, Isabel; Christian, wife of Sir William Morieux, Knt.; and Margery, wife of John Duket.

Sir Richard d. 1367, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES DE WINDSOR, of Stanwell, knighted by EDWARD III., who m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Strehie, Knt., of Wombro, Wilts, and d. 2 October, 44th EDWARD III., leaving an only son and heir,

BRIAN DE WINDSOR, who, by Alice, his wife, dau. of Thomas Drewe, Esq., of Segrave, co. Leicester, had two sons: Miles, the heir, d. unm., and was s. by his brother,

RICHARD DE WINDSOR, who m. Christian, dau. of Richard Falconer, and had an only son and heir,

MILES DE WINDSOR, went on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and d. on the way, 30 September, 1451, leaving, by Joan, his wife, dau. of Walter Green, Esq., of Bridgenorth, a son and heir,

THOMAS WINDSOR, Esq., of Stanwell, who m. Elizabeth, elder of the two daus. and co-heirs of John Andrews, Esq. of Baylham, co. Suffolk, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and co-heir of John Stratton, Esq., and Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Hugh Luttrell, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Robert Litton, Knt.), had issue. He d. 1st HENRY VII., and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR ANDREWS WINDSOR, K.B., of Stanwell, who, in June, 1513, embarked with the king in his expedition to France, and having distinguished himself at the siege of Terrouenne and subsequent battle, was created a knight banneret. In the following year he was one of the knights banneret who attended the Princess Mary, sister to HENRY VIII., on her marriage with Lewis XII. of France. In 1529 Sir Andrews was summoned to parliament by writ addressed "Andrew de Windsor," and 1 December in that year, took his seat. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of William Blount, and sister and co-heir of Edward Blount, Lord Montjoy, and had issue,

By Letters Patent, dated 29 May, 1660.

Lineage.

KATHERINE WOTTON, eldest dau. and co-heir of Thomas Wotton, 2nd Lord Wotton, of Marley, and widow of Henry, Lord Stanhope, was created, by King CHARLES II., COUNTESS OF CHESTERFIELD for life, 29 May, 1660. She m. 2ndly, John Kirckhoven, alias Pollander, Lord of Heenvliet, in Holland, and 3rdly, Colonel Daniel O'Neill. Her ladyship d. in 1667, when the title became EXTINCT (see WOTTON, BARONS WOTTON).

WRIOTHESLEY—BARONS WRIOTHESLEY, EARLS OF SOUTHAMPTON, EARLS OF CHICHESTER.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 1 January, 1544.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 16 February, 1547.

Earldom of Chichester, by Letters Patent, dated 3 June, 1644

Lineage.

Of this family the first mentioned,

JOHN WRIOTHESLEY (commonly called Wrythe), was Falcon Herald in the reign of EDWARD IV., and had letters patent for the office of Garter King of Arms, in the 1st RICHARD III. He had two sons,

THOMAS, who was first a Herald, by that title of Wallingford, and in the 20th HENRY VII. was constituted Garter King of Arms.

William, was also a member of the College of Arms as York Herald.

The younger son,

WILLIAM WRIOTHESLEY, York Herald, left a son,

THOMAS WRIOTHESLEY, who, in the 27th HENRY VIII., was made coroner and attorney in the court of common pleas; and in three years afterwards, being then one of the principal secretaries of state, was sent ambassador to treat of a marriage between his royal master and Christiana, 2nd dau. of the King of Denmark. In the 32nd of the same reign, subsequently to his having had the honour of knighthood, he was made constable of the castle of Southampton. He was soon afterwards accredited one of the commissioners to treat with the Emperor CHARLES V., and he was elevated to the peerage, by letters patent, dated 1 January, 1544, in the dignity of BARON WRIOTHESLEY, of Titchfield, co. Hants; which Titchfield was one of the dissolved monasteries he had obtained by grant from the crown. Soon after this, upon the decease of Lord Audley, his lordship was constituted Lord Chancellor of England, and the same year he was made a knight of the Garter. He was subsequently appointed, by King HENRY, one of his executors, and named of the council to his son EDWARD VI.; three days before whose coronation he was created, by letters patent, dated 16 February, 1547, EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON. His lordship did not long, however, maintain his influence in this reign. Prior to the accession of the king he was opposed to the Duke of Somerset, and he had little chance, under the new order of affairs of sustaining himself against so powerful a rival. The earl, in order that he might have the greater leisure to attend to public business, had, of his own authority, put the great seal into commission, and had empowered four lawyers, two of whom were canonists, to execute, in his absence, the duties of his high office. Complaints were made of this irregularity to the council, which, influenced by the Protector, readily seized the opportunity to depress his lordship. The judges were consulted upon the occasion, and gave it as their opinion, that the commission was illegal, and that the chancellor, by his presumption in granting it, had justly forfeited the great seal, and had even subjected himself to punishment. His lordship was immediately cited before the council, and, notwithstanding a most able defence, it was declared that he had forfeited the chancellorship, that a fine should be imposed upon him, and that he be confined to his own house during the king's pleasure. This eminent person was esteemed a man of learning, a good lawyer, and a most excellent chancellor. He was accustomed to observe, that "Force ayeil, but justice governeit the world;" and that "he loved a bishop to satisfy his conscience, a lawyer to guide his judgment, a good family to keep up his interest, and an university to preserve his name." He m. Jane, dau. and heir of William Cheney, Esq., and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Mary, m. 1st, to William Shelley, Esq., of Michelgrove, Sussex, and 2ndly, to the son and heir of Sir Michael Lyster, Knt.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Ratcliffe, Earl of Sussex.

Katherine, m. to Thomas Cornwallis, Esq.

Mabel, m. to Sir Walter Sands, Knt.

Anne, m. to Sir Oliver Lawrence, Knt.

His lordship d. in 1550, and was s. by his son,

HENRY WRIOTHESLEY, 2nd Earl of Southampton. This nobleman was a friend of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, and involved himself in trouble by promoting the contemplated marriage of that nobleman with MARY Queen of Scots, "to whom and her religion (says Dugdale,) he stood not a little affected." He m. Mary, dau. of Anthony Browne, Viscount Montagu, and had issue,

HENRY, Lord Wriothesley.

Mary, m. to Thomas, Lord Arundell, of Wardour.

His lordship d. in 1581, and was s. by his son,

HENRY WRIOTHESLEY, 3rd Earl of Southampton. This nobleman was the companion in arms of the Earl of Essex, and a participator in the treason by which that unhappy nobleman forfeited his life in the reign of ELIZABETH. Lord Southampton was also tried, condemned, and attainted, but his life was spared; and upon the accession of King JAMES I., he was released from prison, restored in blood by act of parliament, and created by a new patent, dated 21 July, 1603, EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, with the same rights, precedence, and privileges that he had formerly enjoyed. He was also made a knight of the Garter, and constituted captain of the Isle of Wight, and castle of Carisbroke. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Vernon, Esq., of Hotnet, co. Derby, by Elizabeth, sister of Walter Devereux, 1st Earl of Essex, and dying in 1624, left issue,

THOMAS, Lord Wriothesley.

Penelope, m. to William, Lord Spencer, of Wormleighton.

Anne, m. to Robert Wallop, Esq., M.P., of Farley Wallop, co. Southampton.

Elizabeth, m. to Sir Thomas Estcourt, Knt., one of the Masters in Chancery.

The earl was s. by his son,

THOMAS WRIOTHESLEY, 4th Earl of Southampton, who was a staunch supporter of King CHARLES I., was installed a knight of the Garter at the Restoration, and was constituted lord treasurer of England. His lordship m. 1st, Rachel, dau. of Daniel de Massu, Baron de Ruigny, in France, by whom he had two sons, who both d. young, and three daus., viz.,

Elizabeth, m. to Edward Noel, eldest son of Baptist, Viscount Campden.

Rachael, m. 1st, to Francis, son and heir of Richard, Earl of Carbery, in Ireland, and 2ndly, to the celebrated patriot, William, Lord Russell, beheaded in 1683, son of William, 5th Earl of Bedford.

Magdalen, who d. young.

He m. 2ndly, Frances, dau. of Francis Leigh, Baron Dunsmore, which nobleman, was created, 3 June, 1644, EARL OF CHICHESTER, with remainder, failing his own male issue, to his son-in-law, the Earl of Southampton and the heirs male of his body by his lordship's dau., the said Frances Leigh. He d. in 1653, and the honours of Lord Southampton, were then augmented by the Earldom of Chichester. By this lady, his lordship had four daus.,

Andrey, who d. unm.

Penelope, d. young.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, Joceline, Earl of Northumberland, and 2ndly, to Ralph, Duke of Montagu, of Boughton.

Penelope, d. in infancy.

The earl m. 3rdly, Frances, dau. of William, Duke of Somerset, and widow of Richard, Viscount Molineux, but had no issue. He d. at Southampton House, "near Holburne, in the suburbs of London," 16 May, 1667, when all his honours, including the Earldom of Chichester, became EXTINCT.

Arms—AZ, a cross, or, between four falcons close, arg.

YELVERTON—VISCOUNTS LONGUEVILLE, EARLS OF SUSSEX.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 21 April, 1690.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 26 September, 1717.

Lineage.

Of this family, one of great antiquity in the co. of Norfolk, was

ANDREW YELVERTON, living in the reign of EDWARD II., who was father of

ROBERT YELVERTON, who was seated, temp. EDWARD III., at Rackheath, in the vicinity of Norwich, and marrying Cecilia, dau. of Sir Thomas Bardolfe, left a son and heir,

JOHN YELVERTON, of Rackheath, who had, by his 1st wife, a son and successor,

ROBERT, who d. about the year 1420, leaving a son,

THOMAS, of Rackheath, who d. s. p.

John Yelverton m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of John Read, of Rougham, co. Norfolk, and had a son.

SIR WILLIAM YELVERTON, a lawyer of great eminence, who was constituted one of the judges of the court of king's bench in the 22nd HENRY VI. This learned person appears to have stood equally well with the monarchs of both the Houses, as we find him not only continued in his judicial office by King EDWARD IV., but made a knight of the Bath, in order to grace that prince's coronation; and upon the temporary restoration of King HENRY, appointed by patent, dated 9 October, 1470, one of the judges of the court of common pleas. He m. Agnes, dau. of Sir Oliver de Gross, of Crostwick, co. Norfolk, Knt., and was s. by his son,

JOHN YELVERTON, Esq., of Rackheath, who m. Margery, dau. of William Morley, Esq., and had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), his successor.

Anne, m. to Thomas Farney, Esq., of Helmingham.

He was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM YELVERTON, Knt., who was retained by indenture, anno 1474, to serve the king (EDWARD IV.) in person in his wars in France, with two men at arms, and four archers. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of John Paston, Esq., of Paston Hall, co. Norfolk, by whom he had issue,

WILLIAM, who d. v. p., s. p.

Anne, m. to Thomas Jermy, Esq., son of Sir John Jermy, Knt.

Margaret, m. to John Palgrave, Esq., of Norwood Barningham, co. Norfolk.

Eleanor, m. to John Conyers, Esq., son and heir of Sir Robert Conyers.

Sir William m. 2ndly, Eleanor, dau. of Sir Thomas Brewse, Knt., and had a son, his successor,

WILLIAM YELVERTON, Esq., of Roughton and Rackheath. This gentleman m. Catherine, dau. of John Randes, Esq., of the co. Essex, and had five sons, viz., WILLIAM, his successor, John, Nicholas, Edward, and Adam, and a dau., Anne, m. to Matthew Canne, Esq., of Wessingham, in Norfolk. He was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

WILLIAM YELVERTON, Esq., of Roughton, who, by Margaret, his wife, (and executrix of his Will, proved 17 August, 1541), he had two sons, WILLIAM and John, and three daus., viz.,

Mary, m. 1st, to William Baker, Esq., and 2ndly, to Henry Wuyte, Esq.

Susan, m. 1st, to Edward Eston, Esq., of Rainham, in Norfolk, and 2ndly, to Edward Harvey, Esq.

Eleanor, m. to Richard Draper, Esq., of Marham, Norfolk.

William Yelverton d. in the year 1541, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM YELVERTON, Esq., of Roughton. This gentleman m. 1st, Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Henry Fermor, Knt., of East Barham, in Norfolk, by whom he acquired a great increase to his landed possessions, and had issue,

HENRY, who inherited Roughton, and the other estates of his father, as son and heir. He m. Bridget, dau. of Sir William Drury, of Hawsted, in Suffolk, Knt., and had issue,

WILLIAM, his successor, created a baronet in 1620. He m. Dionesse, dau. of Richard Stubbs, Esq., of Sedgeford, in Norfolk, and left

WILLIAM (Sir), 2nd baronet, who m. Ursula, dau. of Sir Thomas Richardson, Knt., speaker of the House of Commons, and afterwards lord chief justice of the King's Bench, by whom he had, WILLIAM, and two daus., Elizabeth and Ursula. He d. in 1648, and was s. by his son, WILLIAM (Sir), 3rd baronet, who d. s. p., 15 November, 1649, when the baronetcy expired.

Henry (Sir), m. Alice, dau. and co-heir of the Right Rev. William Barlow, bishop of Lincoln.

Margaret, m. to Thomas Tyrrell, Esq., of Gippinge, co. Suffolk.

William, m. Grace Newport.

CHRISTOPHER, of whom presently

Launcelot.

Winifred, m. to Owen Duckett, Esq., of Worthing, in Norfolk.

Anne, m. 1st, to Thomas Reade, Esq., of Wishbyche, and 2ndly, to John Hawkins, Esq., of Essex.

Martha, m. 1st, to Thomas Fyncham, Esq., of Fyncham, co. Norfolk, and 2ndly, to John Higham, Esq., of Gifford, in Sussex.

Mr. Yelverton m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of Edward Cocket, Esq., of Ampton, in Suffolk, by whom he had,

Edward.

Charles.

Jane, m. 1st, to Edmund Lummer, Esq., of Mannington, in Norfolk, and 2ndly, to John Dodge, Esq., of Wrotham, in Kent.

Chrysol, m. 1st, to the son and heir of Sir Nicholas L'Estrange, of Hunstanton, and 2ndly, to Sir Philip Wodehouse, Bart., of Kimbley, M.P.

The 3rd son of William Yelverton, by his 1st wife, Anne Fermor,

CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON, being bred to the bar, and called to the degree of serjeant-at-law, was constituted queen's serjeant in the 31st ELIZABETH. Some years afterwards he was chosen speaker of the House of Commons, and in the 44th of the same reign he was constituted one of the judges of the court of King's Bench. On the accession of King JAMES, his patent, as a judge, was renewed, and he was then made a knight. Sir Christopher m. Mary, dau. of Thomas Catesby, Esq., of Whiston, co. Northampton, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

Christopher (Sir).

Isabel, m. to Sir Edward Cope, of Canon's Asby, co. Northampton.

Anne, m. 1st, to Thomas Sherland, Esq., of co. Suffolk, and 2ndly, to Sir Edward Cocket, Knt., of Ampton, in the same shire.

Mary, m. to Sir William Gardiner, of Lagham, in Surrey.

Judith, m. to Edmund Abdy, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn.

His lordship d. in 1607, at Easton-Mauduit, a seat which he had purchased in Northamptonshire, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY YELVERTON, Esq., of Easton-Mauduit. This gentleman having, like his father, adopted the profession of the law, was appointed solicitor-general in 1613, and knighted about the same period. In 1617, Sir Henry Yelverton was made attorney general; previously, however, he is said to have displeased the king by refusing to appear against the Earl of Somerset, at his trial for the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, and in the October of the year in which he was advanced to the attorney-generalship we find him writing a letter to his royal master, complaining "of his unhappiness to fall under his Majesty's displeasure, who had made him almost the wonder of his favour; that he conceived it to arise from some accident, befel in the late business of the marriage of Sir John Villiers; as also from a report, as if he had uttered some speeches to the dishonour of the Earl of Buckingham." He pleaded his cause so successfully, however, that he very soon recovered any ground which he might have lost in JAMES's opinion, but he was not so fortunate with the Duke of Buckingham, who seems, for a long time afterwards, to have regarded him with an evil eye. In 1620, principally through the machinations of that favoured nobleman, he was involved, with the lord mayor of London, and others, in a star-chamber prosecution, regarding the passing of certain clauses in a charter to the city of London, not authorized by the king's warrant; for this offence, although he made every submission, and that the charter was given up, he was adjudged to pay a fine of £4000, to be deprived of the office of attorney-general, and to be committed to the Tower. He was subsequently prosecuted before parliament upon another account, and the House of Lords, 16 May, 1621, proceeded to sentence, and declare, "That the said Sir Henry Yelverton for his speeches, uttered here in court, which do touch the king's majesty's honour, shall be fined to the king in ten thousand marks, be imprisoned during pleasure, and make submission to the king: and for those which touched the Marquess of Buckingham, he should be fined five thousand marks, &c." Upon which Buckingham stood up, and did freely remit his portion of the fine; and the prince and the House agreed to move his Majesty to mitigate the other part of the judgment. What proportion of the fine was ultimately forgiven is nowhere mentioned, but his misfortunes very soon afterwards terminated. The Duke of Buckingham visited him incognito in the Tower, and Sir Henry making a sufficient apology to his grace, he was presently set at liberty, and became again a practising barrister, until April, 1625, when a gentleman from the duke brought him a warrant from the king, appointing him one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. In this situation he remained until his decease, 24 January, 1629-30, when his remains were interred in the parish church of Easton-Mauduit. Of this eminent person the following character is given by one of his own profession:

"Memorandum, That upon Sunday morning, being the 24th of January, 1629-30, died Sir Henry Yelverton, pious judge of the Common Pleas, who before had been attorney-general to King JAMES, and afterwards incurring his displeasure, was displeased and censured in the star-chamber. He then became a practiser again at the bar, from which he was advanced, by King CHARLES, to be a judge. He was a man of profound knowledge in the common laws, and ingenious and eloquent in expression; and for his life, of great integrity and piety, and his death universally bewailed." His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Robert Beale, Esq., clerk of the council to Queen ELIZABETH, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON, Knt., of Easton-Mauduit, who was created a baronet 30 June, 1641. He m. in 1630, Anne, youngest dau. of Sir William Twisden, Bart., of Boydon Hall, Kent, by whom he had issue, ZOUCHE—BARON ZOUCHE, OF ASHBY, CO. LEICESTER.

By Writ of Summons, dated 25 January, 1297.

Lineage.

That the Zouches branched from the Earls of Brittany, is admitted by all genealogists, but they do not coincide in the exact line of descent.

WILLIAM LA ZUSCHE, in confirming to the monks of Swavesey, in Cambridgeshire, the grants made by his ancestors to the abbey St. Segius and Bacchus, in Anjou (to which the priory of Swavesey was a cell), calls Roger la Zusche, his father, and Alan la Zusche, Earl of Brittany, his grandfather. This William d. in the 1st JOHN, and was s. by his brother,

ROGER LA ZUSCHE, who, for his fidelity to King JOHN, had a grant from that monarch of the manors of Petersfield and Maple Durham, co. Southampton, part of the lands of Geoffrey de Mandeville, one of the rebellious barons then in arms. In the next reign he was sheriff of Devonshire, and had further grants from the crown. By Margaret, his wife, he had issue,

ALAN, his successor.

William, who left an only dau.,

Joice, who m. Robert Mortimer, of Richard's Castle, and had issue,

HUGH MORTIMER, summoned to parliament as Lord Mortimer, of Richard's Castle.

WILLIAM MORTIMER, who assumed the surname of ZOUCHE, and was summoned to parliament as LORD ZOUCHE, of Mortimer.

He was s. by his elder son,

SIR ALAN LA ZOUCHE, who, in the 26th HENRY III., had a military summons to attend the king into France, and in ten years afterwards had the whole county of Chester, and all North Wales placed under his government. In the 45th of the same reign he obtained a charter for a weekly market at Ashby-la-Zouche, in Leicestershire, and for two fairs in the year at Swavesey. About the same time he was constituted warden of all the king's forests south of Trent, as also sheriff of Northamptonshire. In the 46th he was made justice itinerant for the cos. Southampton, Buckingham, and Northampton; and upon the arbitration made by LEWIS, King of France, between HENRY III. and the barons, he was one of the sureties on behalf of the king. In three years afterwards he was constituted constable of the Tower of London, and governor of the castle at Northampton. Sir Alan Zouche was violently assaulted in Westminster Hall, in 1268, by John, Earl of Warren and Surrey, upon occasion of a dispute between them regarding some landed property, and with his son, Roger, who happened to be with him, severely wounded. He m. Elena, dau. and heir of Roger de Quinci, Earl of Winchester, and by her (who d. 1296,) had issue,

ROGER, his successor.

Eudo, from whom the Zouches, Barons Zouche, of Harynworth (extant) derive.

Alan le Zouche d. in 1269, and was s. by his elder son,

ROGER LA ZOUCHE, who m. Ela, dau. and co-heir of Stephen de Longespée, 2nd son of William, Earl of Salisbury, and dying in 1285, was s. by his son,

ALAN LA ZOUCHE. This feudal lord, b. 1267, having dis-tingulated himself in the wars of Gascony, and Scotland, temp. EDWARD I., was summoned to parliament by that monarch as a Baron, 26 January, 1297, and he had regular summonses from that period until 7th EDWARD II., 26 November, 1313. In the 5th EDWARD II. his lordship was constituted governor of Rockingham Castle, in Northamptonshire, and steward of Rockingham Forest. He d. in 1314, leaving by Eleanor, his wife, dau. of Nicholas de Segrave, three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

I ELLEN, m. 1st, Nicholas St. Maur, and 2ndly, Alan de Charlton: the eventual heiress-general of Ellen le Zouche, was (see p. 469).

ALICE ST. MAUR, who m. William, 5th Lord Zouche of Haryngworth, and was ancestress of EDWARD, 11th Lord Zouche, of Haryngworth, who d. 1625, leaving two daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

I ELIZABETH ZOUCHE, who m. Sir William Tate, of Delapré, and was great-grandmother of Bartholomew Tate, Esq., of Delapré, who d. 1704, leaving one son, whose issue failed, and two daus.; I CATHERINE m. 1720, to Charles Hedges, Esq., ancestor by her of HARRIET-ANNE, BARONESS DE LA ZOUCHE, and of KATHERINE-ANNABELLA, wife of Sir George-Richard Pechell, Bart., and 2 MARY, m. 1723, to Samuel Long, Esq., and had, besides daus., three sons, of whom the eldest, ROBERT LONG, Esq., left three daus. and co-heirs, viz., JANE, wife of John Oliver, Esq.; MARY-CHARLOTTE, wife of Samuel Scudamore Heming, Esq., and LUCY-ANN, wife of Thomas-Bayley Howell, Esq., of Prinknash Park, co. Gloucester.

2 MARY ZOUCHE, m. 1st, Thomas Leighton, Esq., and had issue; and 2ndly, William Connard, Esq., by whom she had no issue.

II. MAUD, m. Robert, Lord Holland: their great-grand-dau. and heir-general, MAUD HOLLAND, m. 1373, JOHN LOVEL, Lord Lovel, of Tichmarsh, and the descendants and co-heirs-general of this marriage are HENRY, Lord Beaumont and Montagu, Earl of Abingdon (see p. 333).

III. ELIZABETH, a nun at Brewood, co. Stafford.

Amongst these three daus. and co-heirs of Alan le Zouche, a partition was made in the 8th EDWARD II., of their father's lands, excepting the manor of Ashby-de-la-Zouche, which the deceased lord gave to his kinsman, WILLIAM DE MORTIMER, who thereupon assumed the surname of ZOUCHE. At the decease of Lord Zouche, the Barony of Zouche, of Ashby, fell into abeyance between his daus., as it still continues with their representatives.

ZOUCHE—BARON ZOUCHE, OF MORTIMER.

By Writ of Summons, dated 26 December, 1323.

Lineage.

WILLIAM DE MORTIMER, younger son of Robert Lord Mortimer, of Richard's Castle, by Joice, dau. and heir of William la Zouche, having obtained the lordship of Ashby-de-la-Zouche, from his kinsman Alan, Lord Zouche, of Ashby, assumed the surname of ZOUCHE; and was summoned to parliament as BARON ZOUCHE, of Mortimer, from 26 December, 1323, to 14 January, 1337. In the reign of EDWARD III., his lordship was made justice of all the forests, south of Trent, and constable of the Tower of London. He m. 1st, Alice de Tony, widow of Guy de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and had a son, ALAN, his successor. He m. 2ndly, Alianore, dau. and heir of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, by whom also he had a son. His lordship d. and was s. by his son.

ALAN LA ZOUCH, one of the eminent warriors of the reign of EDWARD III. He was constantly engaged in the French and Scottish wars, and was in the celebrated battle of Cressy, shortly after which he died and was s. by his son.

HUGH LA ZOUCHE, who, says Courthope (Historic Peerage), "d. 1368, s. p., when ROBERT LA ZOUCHE, his uncle, was found to be his heir and then abt. fifty; but Robert, the uncle, also dying s. p., by a second inquisition, 1st HENRY IV., 1399, JOYCE, wife of Hugh, 2nd Baron Burnell, and granddau. of John, Baron Botetourt, son of Joyce, sister of Alan, his father, and Robert, his uncle, was found to be his cousin and next heir, and then abt. thirty; she d. s. p., 1406." The manor of Ashby-de-la-Zouche came afterwards into the possession of the Earls of Ormonde, and on the attainder of John Butler, 5th Earl of Ormonde and Earl of Wiltshire, fell to the crown. It was subsequently granted to William de Hastings, ancestor of the family of Hastings, Earls of Huntingdon and Marquesses of Hastings.

CAMPBELL—BARON CLYDE.

By Letters Patent, dated 16 August, 1858.

Lineage.

SIR COLIN CAMPBELL, G.C.B., K.S.I., D.C.L., a general in the army, colonel of the coldstream guards, was created a Peer of the United Kingdom, 16 August, 1858, as BARON CLYDE, of Clydesdale, in Scotland. This eminent military commander was b. near Glasgow, 20 October, 1792; the son of Mr. John M'Liver, a native of Mull, and a cabinet maker in Glasgow: he descended, through his mother, from a family of CAMPBELLS, who settled in Islay near two centuries ago, along with their chief, the ancestor of the Earls of Cawdor. His maternal kinsmen often served in the army; one uncle, after whom he was called, was killed a subaltern in the war of the American Revolution, and another, under whose directions he was educated, was the late Colonel John Campbell. Young Colin M'Liver entered the British army 26 May, 1808, being gazetted an ensign in the 9th foot, under the name of Campbell, which he bore ever afterwards. He proceeded at once on foreign service, served at Vimiera and at Corunna, and was in the Walcheren expedition, after which, returning to Spain, he shared in all the remainder of the Peninsular War, until 1814, being at the battles of Barossa and Vittoria, and being severely wounded twice in the forlorn hope at the siege of San Sebastian, and again at the passage of the Bidassoa. When the Peninsular War was over, Campbell, then a captain, was drafted into the 60th rifles, and served in America during 1814 and 1815. He became a lieut.-col. in 1832, and a colonel and aide-de-camp to the Queen in 1842, and in that year he commanded the 98th at the siege and capture of Chinkeannoo, during the Chinese war. In 1848, he went to India as commander of the 3rd division of the Punjab, in the second Sikh war. Here he mainly contributed to the British being masters of the field in the terrible battle of Chillianwallah, and he again did good work at the victory of Goojerat. For these services he was created a K.C.B. and received the thanks of Parliament and of the East India Company. Sir Colin Campbell was at the head of the highland brigade and highland division during the Crimean war, and to him, in a great measure, belonged the credit of the victory of the Alma. He received the thanks of parliament for his services in that campaign. He was made a major-general 20 June, 1854, and colonel of the 67th foot, 24 October same year; and he received the local rank of general, in Turkey, 1855, and that of lieut.-general in the army 4 June, 1856; he became a general 14 May, 1858. He was appointed commander-in-chief of the forces in India in 1857, with the local rank of general; and his success there in crushing the Sepoy rebellion proved most effective, his principal achievements being the storming of Lucknow, in November, 1857, when he relieved Sir Henry Havelock and Sir James Outram; and his final capture of the same place, in March, 1858. He concluded by completely restoring order and re-establishing British supremacy. Sir Colin Campbell was raised to the peerage 16 August, 1858, as LORD CLYDE, of Clydesdale. He received again the thanks of parliament, in 1859, for his services in India, and he was appointed colonel of the coldstream-guards. He was made a knight of the Star of India in 1861.

This great and gallant soldier, who rose from a lowly station to the highest position in the British army, achieved his success "by the mere force of sterling ability, complete knowledge of his profession, sound sense, high honour, and an honest, industrious, and laborious performance of duty. Perhaps he owed as much to the qualities of his heart as to those of his head and his will. The positions he won are hardly open to equal abilities, if marred by an impracticable or ungenerous nature. But his nature was so retiring, and his modesty so complete that he excited no personal envy or jealousy. His rise was felt to be simply the natural recognition of talents which the country could not spare; and at the same time his entire generosity prevented his retaining any grudge at past disappointments, and made him always ready to serve others, whenever and wherever he was wanted." Lord Clyde d. at the Government House, Chatham, 14 August, 1863, and on the 22nd of that month his remains were buried near the grave of Outram in Westminster Abbey, but, agreeably to his own wish, with little of the ceremony that commonly attends interment there.

As his lordship d. unm. the title became extinct.

CANNING—VISCOUNT AND EARL CANNING.

Viscounty by Letters Patent, dated 22 January, 1823.
Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 21 May, 1859.

Lineage.

The surname of Canning is derived from the manor of Bishop's Cannings, in Wiltshire, where the family was originally seated, and where the senior line continued until it terminated in co-heiresses, in the time of HENRY VII. A younger son settled in Bristol in the reign of EDWARD II., and the branch founded by him formed the most eminent family of that city during the greater part of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. William Cannings represented Bristol in several successive parliaments, and was six times mayor between 1360 and 1390. He d. in 1396, having had, with other issue, John Cannings, his son and heir, who was member for Bristol and also, in 1392 and 1398, mayor. He d. in 1406, leaving three sons and three daus., all then under age. Thomas, his 2nd son, was Lord Mayor of London in 1456; William, his 3rd son, was the celebrated Mayor of Bristol of the reign of EDWARD IV., and the re-founder of the church of St. Mary Redcliffe, in that city. He d. in 1476, being then in holy orders, and dean of the priory of Westbury, which he had previously founded.

JOHN CANNING, the eldest son of John, was the father of

THOMAS CANNING, who acquired the estate of Foxcote, by his marriage with Agnes, the eldest dau. and co-heir of John Salmon, and Eustatia his wife, dau. and heir of John le Marshall, in whose family Foxcote had been vested from the time of the Conquest.

RICHARD CANNING, of Foxcote, the son and heir of Thomas and Agnes, m. Mary, dau. of Humphrey Compton, and had two sons, THOMAS, his heir, and JOHN, ancestor of the Cannings of Todendani. The elder son and heir,

THOMAS CANNING, of Foxcote, m. Jane, dau. of Richard Boughton, Esq., of Condecot, co. Gloucester, and was father of RICHARD CANNING, Esq., of Foxcote, co. Warwick, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Petty, of Ilmington, and had issue,

- I. RICHARD, ancestor of the Cannings of Foxcote, co. Warwick. (See BURKE's Landed Gentry.)
- II. THOMAS, of Bristol, merchant.
- III. William, of Haddingshaw Blackwell Hall, London, merchant; had a grant in the co. of Derry by patent.
- IV. Isaac, a Turkey merchant, d. at Constantinople.
- V. Edward, of Euston, co. Oxford, m. and had issue.
- VI. Robert.
- VII. Paul, ambassador to the Great Mogul, d. at Agra.
- VIII. GEORGE, of whom presently.
- I. Maria, m. to John Riland, of Queenton, co. Gloucester.
- II. Anne, m. to Thomas Rowrie, of Darlingscot, co. Worcester.

The 8th son,

GEORGE CANNING, Esq., of Coleraine, co. Derry, had a grant of the manor of GARVAGH by patent from Queen ELIZABETH. He had also a lease from the Ironmonger's Company of their estate of Agivey, co. Derry, which expired about the year 1780. He m. Anne, dau. of Gilbert Walker, of Walford, co. Worcester, and had two sons, PAUL CANNING, his heir, who built the church of Garvagh, and d. s. p.; and

WILLIAM CANNING, Esq., of Garvagh, who was killed at the time of the rebellion in 1641, leaving a son and heir,

GEORGE CANNING, Esq., of Garvagh and Agivey, attainted by the parliament held by JAMES II. He m. (marriage licence dated 31 July, 1667) Mary Stepney, of Dublin, and had an only child,

GEORGE CANNING, Esq., of Garvagh, b. in Derry, lieut.-col. of the militia, and justice of the peace for the co. Londonderry. He m. 1697, Abigail, 4th dau. of Robert Stratford, Esq., M.P. for the co. of Wicklow in 1662, and aunt of John, 1st Earl of Albemarle, by whom he left a son and heir,

STRATFORD CANNING, Esq., of Garvagh, b. in 1703, lieut.-col. of militia, and justice of the peace co. Londonderry; who m. 1734, Letitia, dau. and heir of Obadiah Newburgh, Esq., of Ballyhaise, co. Cavan, and had issue,

- I. GEORGE, of whom presently.
- II. PAUL, who s. at Garvagh. This gentleman m. 20 July, 1776, Jane, dau. of Conway Spencer, Esq., of the co. Antrim, and sister and co-heir of Gen. Sir Brent Spencer, G.C.B., and was s. by his only son,

GEORGE CANNING, Esq., of Garvagh, who was created 28 October, 1818, BARON GARVAGH, of Garvagh, co. Londonderry. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)

III. Stratford, a merchant of London, who left at his decease, in 1787,

- 1 Henry, consul-general at Hamburg. m. and left issue.
- 2 William, in holy orders, canon of Windsor.
- 3 Charles, aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington, killed at Waterloo.
- 4 Stratford (the Right Hon. Sir), G.C.B., formerly ambassador to the Porte, created VISCOUNT STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE. (See BURKE's Extant Peerage.)
- 5 Elizabeth, m. to George-Henry Barnett, Esq.

I. Mary, m. to the Rev. Henry Bernard, son of William, lord bishop of Londonderry, and d. in 1770.

II. Elizabeth, m. to Westby Perceval, Esq.

The eldest son,

GEORGE CANNING, Esq., of the Middle Temple, author of a volume of poems, m. May, 1768, Miss Mary-Anne Costello, of Wigmore Street, London, and d. 8 April, 1771, having incurred the displeasure of his father and the penalty of disinheritance by this improvident marriage, leaving an only child,

THE RIGHT HON. GEORGE CANNING. This celebrated orator and statesman, b. in London, 11 April, 1770, was educated at Eton and Oxford, entered Parliament in 1793, and, in 1798, became Under Secretary of State. In 1807, he was appointed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, but resigned in consequence of a duel with Lord Castlereagh. In 1812, he was elected M.P. for Liverpool, in 1814 went as Ambassador to Portugal, and in 1816 was given the office of President of the Board of Control. In 1822, he was selected as the Marquess of Hastings' successor, in the government of India, but, while he was preparing for his departure, Lord Londonderry's death occurred, and Mr. Canning was constituted Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in his stead. Finally, on 17 February, 1827, he attained to the highest position under the Crown, and was nominated First Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer, but his tenure of power was very brief. After the stormy session of 1827, broken in health and spirit, he sought repose and change of air at the Duke of Devonshire's villa at Chiswick, but hopelessly. On the 8th of August following, he breathed his last, in the very room in which Fox died; and his remains were laid in Westminster Abbey, close to the resting place of William Pitt. Mr. Canning m. 8 July, 1800, JOAN, youngest dau. and co-heir of Major-General John Scott, of Balcomie, co. Fife, by Margaret his wife, youngest dau. of Robert Dundas, of Arniston, lord president of the Court of Session, by HENRIETTA BAILLIE, the heiress of Lamington. A few months after Mr. Canning's decease his widow, JOAN, was elevated to the peerage of the United Kingdom, as VISCOUNTESS CANNING, of Aulbram, co. Kilkenny, 22 January, 1828. Her ladyship d. 15 March, 1837: the issue of her marriage consisted of three sons and one dau., viz.,

- I. George-Charles, b. 25 April, 1801, d. 31 March, 1820.
- II. William-Pitt, captain R.N., drowned while bathing at Madeira, 25 September, 1828.
- III. CHARLES-JOHN, of whom presently.
- I. Harriet, m. 4 April, 1825, to Ulrick-John, Marquess of Clanricarde, K.P., and her 2nd son, LORD HUBERT DE BURGH, has assumed the surname and arms of CANNING.

The 3rd and last surviving son,

CHARLES-JOHN CANNING, K.G., G.C.B., P.C., Viscount Canning, b. at Brompton, Middlesex, 14 December, 1812, was educated at Eton and Oxford, graduating as a First Class in "litera humanioribus." In 1841, he became Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and in 1846, Chief Commissioner of Woods and Forests. In 1852, he joined Lord Aberdeen's Ministry as Postmaster General, and in 1855, was given the high appointment of Governor-General of India, during his tenure of which the great Indian Mutiny broke out and was suppressed. His lordship m. 6 September, 1835, the Hon. Charlotte Stuart, eldest dau. and co-heir of the late Lord Stuart de Rothesay, which lady d. s. p. at Calcutta, 18 November, 1861. His lordship was raised to the EARLDOM OF CANNING, 21 May, 1859, and made a K.G. 21 May, 1862. He d. 17 June, 1862, when his honour became EXTINCT.

DE BURGH—EARLS OF ULSTER.

Lineage.

RICHARD DE BURGH, surnamed the Great, Lord of Connaught, son of William FitzAdelm de Burgh, Lord Deputy of Ireland temp. HENRY II., was also Viceroy of that kingdom from 1227 to 1229. This Richard built the Castle of Galway, 1232: he d. on his passage to France, January, 1243, whither he was proceeding, attended "by his barons and knights," to meet the King of England at Bordeaux. He m. Una or Agnes, dau. of Hugh O'Connor, King of Connaught, son of Cathal Crohdearg, or the red hand, and had two sons, I. WALTER, his successor, and II. WILLIAM. The elder son,

WALTER DE BURGH, Lord of Connaught, m. Maud, dau. and heir of Hugh de Laci, Earl of Ulster (by Emmeline, his wife, dau. and heir of Walter de Riddlesford, Lord of Bray), and became in consequence EARL OF ULSTER, in her right at her father's decease in 1243, and in his own right in 1264. The issue of this marriage consisted of four sons, viz.,

- I. RICHARD, his successor.
- II. Theobald, who d. at Carrickfergus on Christmas night, 1303, on his return from assisting the King in Scotland.
- III. William (Sir), who performed many signal services in conjunction with his brother, the Earl.
- IV. Thomas, who d. 1315.

The eldest son,

RICHARD DE BURGH, 2nd Earl of Ulster, usually called the Red Earl, the most powerful subject in Ireland, and general of all the Irish forces in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and Gascony, was a great soldier and statesman. He founded the Carmelite monastery at Loughrea, built the Castles of Ballymote, Corran, and Sligo, and eventually retired to the monastery of Athassil, where he d. 28 June, 1326; he m. Margaret dau. of John de Burgo, Baron of Lanville (son of John, grandson of John, the great-grandson of Hubert, Earl of Kent), and had issue,

- II. JOHN, d. v. p.
- III. Thomas, d. s. p. 1316.
- IV. Edmond na Feisoge, murdered by his kinsman, Edward Bourke McWilliam; he m. Slany, dau. of Turlogh O'Brien, Lord of Thomond, and was ancestor of the BURKES, Lords of CASTLE CONNELL and BRITTAS.
- V. William, d. after the year 1337.

- i. Ellen, m. in 1302, Robert Bruce, Earl of Carrycke, crowned King of Scotland in 1306.
- ii. Maud, m. in 1308, to Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester.
- iii. Joan, m. 1st, 16 August, 1312, to Thomas the 2nd Earl of Kildare; and 2ndly, in July, 1329, to Sir John Darcy, lord justice, and d. 12 March, 1359.
- iv. Catherine, m. to John Bermingham, Earl of Louth.
- v. Margaret, m. 16 August, 1312, Maurice, Earl of Desmond.
- vi. Eleanor, m. to John, Lord Multon of Egremont.

The 2nd son,

JOHN DE BURGH, m. Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester, by his 2nd wife, the PRINCESS JOAN, of Acres, and d. 1313, having had one son,

WILLIAM DE BURGH, 3rd Earl of Ulster, b. 1312, who s. his grandfather in 1326, was knighted at London, 1328, and sat in the parliament held in Dublin the following year. He was murdered 6 June, 1333, by Robert Fitz-Richard Mandeville and others. He m. Maud, 3rd dau. of Henry Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Ralph de Ufford, lord justice of Ireland), had an only child, LADY ELIZABETH DE BURGH, b. 1332, m. 1352, Prince Lionel, of Antwerp, K.G., 3rd son of EDWARD III., who became, in consequence, 4th Earl of Ulster, and Lord of Connaught, and was made Chief Governor of Ireland in 1361; and created DUKE OF CLARENCE, 13 November, 1362. By the great heiress of De Burgh, he had an only child, PHILIPPA, wife of EDMOND MORTIMER, 3rd Earl of March, Viceroy of Ireland in 1380, jure uxoris 5th Earl of Ulster, ancestor, through his grand-dau., the LADY ANNE MORTIMER, wife of Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, of EDWARD IV., King of England, and of the subsequent SOVEREIGNS of Great Britain.

DE COURCY, OR DE CURCY—EARL OF ULSTER.

Lineage.

Shortly after the death of Strongbow in 1176, HENRY II. granted "Ulidia," the present counties of Down and Antrim, and afterwards called among the Anglo-Irish "Ulster," to John de Curci, one of his most successful and valiant soldiers, who erected a castle at Downpatrick, but was in 1178 obliged to fly wounded to Dublin, from a battle in which he was utterly defeated by the Chief of Firiil. In the latter end of 1185, he was appointed deputy to Prince John, Lord of Ireland, and continued in office as viceroy till 1189.

He m. Affreca, dau. of Godred Crovan, King of Man and the Isles, and by Scandinavian and Irish help managed to maintain his possessions of Ulidia against all the power of the Viceroy Hugh de Lacy, whom he defeated in a battle at Down in 1204; however, in May, 1205, King JOHN bestowed the Earldom on de Curci.

In 1204 de Curci had a safe conduct to go to the king, and in 1210 proceeded to Ireland in his service, being then in receipt of a pension of £100 per annum.

He appears to have died about 1219, as in that year Affreca is described as his widow. By her, who d. in Grey Abbey, co. Down (endowed by her for Cistercians in 1193), his contemporary, Cambrensis, alleges he had no children, which appears the more probable, as neither he nor his brother-in-law, Reginald, King of Man, in their numerous endowments to monasteries ever make mention of them among the relations whose souls are to be prayed for.

Moreover, the connexion between John de Curci, Earl of Ulster, and the English Barons of Stoke-Courcy becomes very problematical when we learn from a fine roll of 1218, quoted in Gilbert's erudite Viceroys of Ireland (from which we have drawn much of the information in this article), that he had relinquished to HENRY III. rights in Ireland, claimed as of his father Roger de Chester.

DE FOIX—EARL OF KENDAL.

Lineage.

SIR JOHN DE FOIX, K.G., Comte de Longueville and de Benanges, Captal de Buch, son of Gaston de Foix, Captal de Buch, Comte de Longueville, in Normandy, by Margaret D'Albret, his wife, and grandson of Archambaud de Grailly, Captal de Buch, by Isabelle de Foix, his wife, Comtesse de Foix, and Vicomtesse de Castelbon, is stated to have been created a Peer of England, as EARL OF KENDAL, by patent, 22 August, 1446;

"but," says Nicolas, "it may be doubted if this John de Foix was ever regularly created Earl of Kendal in England, for, though Dugdale cites the Rolls of Parliament, 28th HENRY VI., n. 31, as his authority, it does not appear that positive proof of the fact is afforded therein." John de Foix eventually surrendered the Garter, and became the liege subject of the King of France; he m. Margaret, dau. of Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and d. in 1485, leaving two sons, GASTON, Comte de Candale (Kendal), and JOHN, Vicomte de Meilles, Comte de Guron and de Fleix, ancestor of the Ducs DE BENDAN, who styled themselves afterwards COMTES DE CANDALE (Kendal). The elder son, GASTON, 2nd Comte de Candale, m. Catherine, sister of Gaston, Prince de Viane, and was father of GASTON, 3rd Comte de Candale, who m. Martha, dau. and heir of John, 3rd Comte d'Astarac, and had a son, FREDERIC, Comte de Candale, who m. 1540, Frances, dau. of Francis, 2nd Comte de la Rochefoucauld, and was father of HENRY DE FOIX, Comte de Candale, who m. 1567, Mary, a dau. of ANN, Duc de Montmorency, and d. 1573, leaving a dau. and heiress, MARQUERITE, Comtesse de Candale, m. 1587, to John-Louis Nogaret de la Vallette, Duc d'Espernon, and had issue,

Lineage.

MALDRED, son of Crinan, m. Alghitha, dau. of Uchtred, Earl of Northumberland, by Elgiva, his wife, dau. of King ETHELRED, and was father of

COSPATRIC, made Earl of Northumberland by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. Soon after, he was deprived of that Earldom and fled to Scotland, where King MALCOLM CANMORE gave him Dunbar and the lands adjoining. The monks of Durham celebrated 15 December, 1069, the death of this Cospatricus, Earl and Monk; and, in 1821, a stone coffin inscribed on its lid, "Cospatricus Comes," was found in the monks' burial ground at Durham. His son, COSPATRIC, a great benefactor to the abbey of Kelso, is described in many of his charters to that community "Cospatricus Comes." He d. 1139, and was s. by his son COSPATRIC, styled in the Register of Kelso, "Cospatricus Comes, filius Cospatricii Comitum." He left issue; of which the eldest son,

EARL COSPATRIC, founded the Cistercian Convents of Coldstream and Eccles, co. Berwick, and was a liberal benefactor to the abbey of Melrose: he d. 1166, leaving two sons, WALDEVE, his heir, and PATRICK, witness to a charter A.D. 1228, as "filius Comitum Cospatric ac frater Comitum Waldevi, Dominus de Greenlaw;" ancestor of the HOMES, EARLS OF HOME. The elder son,

WALDEVE, 5th Earl, was the first who had the territorial designation of Dunbar, about 1174. He was one of the hostages for the due performance of the treaty for the liberation of King WILLIAM I. He d. 1182, leaving by Aelina, his wife, two sons, PATRICK and CONSTANTINE, and a dau., Alicia, m. to Philip de Seton. The elder son,

PATRICK DUNBAR, 6th Earl of Dunbar, was Justiciary of Lothian and Keeper of Berwick. In 1218, he founded the House of the Red Friars, at Dunbar, and eventually, when far advanced in years, retired to a monastery, where he d. in 1232. He m. 1st, Ada, illegitimate dau. of King WILLIAM THE LYON; and 2ndly, a lady, whose Christian name was Christina; by the former he had issue,

- i. PATRICK, his heir.
- ii. William, designed "Willielmus, filius Comitum Patricii," in a charter to the monastery of Kelso, m. Christiana, dau. and heir of Walter de Corbet, of Mackerston, and d. 1253, leaving issue.
- iii. Adam.
- iv. Robert.
- i. Ada, m. 1st, to — Courtenay; and 2ndly, to William Dunbar, ancestor by her of the EARLS OF HOME.

The eldest son,

PATRICK DUNBAR, 7th earl, a potent noble of Scotland, joined the Crusade under Louis IX., commanded the Scots, and d. at the siege of Damietta, 1249. He m. Eupheme, dau. of Walter, Lord High Stewart, and had a son,

PATRICK DUNBAR, 8th Earl, who took an active part in Scotch politics, and was one of the leaders of the English party. His surprisal of the castle of Edinburgh delivered ALEXANDER III. and his Queen from the Comyns. He was, after the death of that monarch, one of the Regents of Scotland, and one of the SEVEN EARLS OF SCOTLAND—a distinct body separate from the rest of the estates of the Kingdom. The Earl of Dunbar d. in 1289, aged seventy-six, leaving by Christiana, his wife (who founded "ane house of religioun in ye town of Dunbar,") dau. of Robert Bruce, Lord of Annandale,

PATRICK DUNBAR, 9th earl, surnamed "Black Beard," and styled also Earl of March, who swore fealty to EDWARD I. of England, and was a steadfast adherent of the English interest, but his wife, Marjory Comyn,* dau. of Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, sided with the opposite party, and held the castle of Dunbar for Baliol, until forced to surrender it to EDWARD. In 1296. In 1298, the Earl of March was appointed the King's Lieutenant in Scotland, and in 1300 was at the siege of Carlaverock. By Marjory, his wife, he had issue, PATRICK, his heir; and GEORGE, ancestor of the family of DUNBAR, of Mochrum, the direct line of which ended in the three daus. and co-heirs of Patrick Dunbar, of Mochrum, who all married Dunbars. Their uncle the heir-male was Cuthbert Dunbar of Blantyre. The eldest son,

PATRICK DUNBAR, 10th earl, was with his father at Carlaverock; and, after the battle of Bannockburn, gave refuge to EDWARD II. in his castle of Dunbar, and secured the king's escape in a fishing boat to England. Making peace, however, with Robert Bruce, he signed the letter to the Pope in 1320, was appointed Governor of Berwick Castle, and held that fortress against EDWARD III., until the defeat of the Scots at Halidon Hill necessitated its surrender. Not long after, his Countess, known in history as "Black Agnes," dau. of the renowned Regent of Scotland, Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, and grand niece of Bruce, defended in the absence of her husband, in January, 1337-8, the castle of Dunbar against the English, under the Earl of Salisbury, during a fierce and determined siege of nineteen weeks, and at length forced the Earl to abandon the attempt. This gallant resistance of the Countess of Dunbar is memorable in Scottish annals, and has given subject to many a minstrel's song. "Black Agnes" became eventually heiress of her brother, John Randolph, 3rd Earl of Moray, and her husband added the Earldom of Moray to his other dignities. They left issue,

- I. GEORGE, 11th Earl of Dunbar and March.
- II. JOHN, Earl of Moray (see p. 449).
- I. Agnes, m. to Sir James Douglas, Lord Dalkeld, and from her came the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Earls of Morton.
- II. Elizabeth, m. to John Maitland, of Lethington, ancestress of the Duke of Lauderdale, who took as his second title the Marquessate of March.

The 10th Earl of Dunbar and March commanded the left wing of the Scottish army at the battle of Durham. At the age of eighty-four he denuded himself of his title, and d. plain Sir Patrick de Dunbar, Knt., in 1369. His eldest son and heir,

GEORGE DUNBAR, 11th earl, Warden of the Marches, a great and powerful noble, accompanied Douglas in his foray in England, in 1388, and, after the battle of Otterburn, took command of the Scots, and conducted them safely home. But subsequently he became the rival of the Douglasses, and, in consequence of the daughter of Archibald, the Grim Earl of Douglas, having been preferred to his own as bride for the Duke of Rothesay, the king's son, Dunbar renounced his allegiance, fled to England, and offered his services to HENRY IV., who gladly received him into his protection. The earl fought on the English side at Homildon Hill, as well as at the battle of Shrewsbury, against Owen Glendower and the Percys. At last, reconciled to the Douglasses, he returned to Scotland after the death of ROBERT III. in 1409, and d. there in 1420, aged eighty-two. He m. Christine, sister of Sir William Seton, and had issue,

- I. GEORGE, his heir.
- II. Gawin (Sir), of Cumnock.
- III. Patrick (Sir), of Bell.

* The marriage of Patrick, 9th Earl of March, with Marjory Comyn is proved by a letter written by George, 11th Earl of March to King HENRY IV., in which the earl claims cousinship with the King, but mis-states the royal connexion. It was Marjory's niece and not sister of whom HENRY IV. was grandson.

IV. John.

V. David.

VI. Columba, Bishop of Moray, d. 1435.

I. Elizabeth, who should have been Duchess of Rothesay, d. unm.

II. Janet, m. 1st, to John, Lord Seton, and 2ndly, Sir Adam Johnstone, of Johnstone, by whom she had a son, Matthew, ancestor of the Baronets of Westerhall.

III. Margery, m. to Sir John Swinton.

The son and heir,

GEORGE DUNBAR, 12th earl, knighted at the Coronation of JAMES I., seemed to all appearance to enjoy the confidence of the new monarch, and was on many occasions employed on State affairs, but, in 1434, without any previous warning, the King seized on the castle of Dunbar, and the parliament of Perth, having declared the forfeiture of the earl, confiscated his estate, and annexed it to the crown. There had long been an effort on the part of the Scottish monarch to diminish the power of these ambitious and turbulent Earls of Dunbar, whose possession of the great fortress of Dunbar gave rise to the saying that they held the key of Scotland in their girdles; and JAMES I. seized this as a proper moment to carry his plan into effect. To make some amends for the spoliation, the Earldom of Buchan was bestowed on the forfeited Earl, but Dunbar disdained to accept the title, and retired with his son Patrick to England. Thus passed away, mainly through the jealousy of the Scottish sovereigns, and the hostility of their great rivals, the Douglasses, the famous and historic Earls of Dunbar and March, who had, for nearly four centuries, stood so foremost amongst the Scottish nobles, and acted so prominent a part in the national annals. The estate of Kilconquhar in Fife, being held under the bishop of St. Andrews, was saved from forfeiture, but the rest of the great Dunbar estate was all swept away.

King HENRY IV. gave the fugitive earl a grant of part of the estate of Thomas, Lord Bardolph, who had been involved in the forfeiture of the Earl of Northumberland. In the charter he is called Sir George de Dunbar, Knt. His only son, PATRICK DUNBAR, styled of Kilconquhar, was father of PATRICK DUNBAR, who m. Janet, youngest of the three co-heirs of Patrick Dunbar of Mochrum, and got, as his share, Mochrum Loch. Their grandson, ANDREW DUNBAR, d. s. p., and his eldest sister MARGARET is now represented through the Macdowalls of Freuch, and her descendant Patrick, 5th Earl of Dumfries, by the present MARQUESS OF BUTE 7th Earl of Dumfries, and heir of COSPATRICK, Earl of Northumberland, temp. Conquestoris. The families of Dunbar now existing are derived from SIR ALEX DUNBAR, of Westfield, Sheriff of Moray, which estate he got from his sister, the heir to her father James Dunbar, 5th Earl of Moray, grandson of JOHN I., Earl thereof. The two eldest of Sir Alexander's six sons m. Anne-Eupheme and Margaret, the two eldest daus. and co-heirs of Patrick Dunbar, of Mochrum, and founded the long lines of Westfield and Mochrum, many other Dunbars trace to the other sons of the founder, Sir Alexander of Westfield.

Arms—Gu., a lion rampant, arg., within a bordure of the last, charged with eight roses of the 1st; Nisbet says that the bordure of roses was the badge of the comital office of Patrick, who was first designed "Earl of March." The earlier seals exhibit simply the lion rampant.

DUNGAN, OR DONGAN—VISCOUNTS DUNGAN AND EARLS OF LIMERICK.

Viscounty, by Letters Patent, dated 14 February, 1661.

The 4th son,

SIR ALLEYNE FITZHERBERT, G.C.B., M.A., b. 1 March, 1763, and educated at Eton and Cambridge, commenced his diplomatic career at Brussels in 1777. After negotiating as sole plenipotentiary, a peace between France, Spain and the States-General, in 1783, he had a leading share in that concluded with America at the same period. In 1783, he was appointed envoy extraordinary to the court of St. Petersburg, and in 1787, sworn of the Privy Council, and made Chief Secretary for Ireland. In April, 1789, he went as ambassador extraordinary to the Hague, and in the following November, in the same capacity to Madrid, where he negotiated the convention between the crowns of Great Britain and Spain, which was signed at the Escorial 28 October, 1790; but the climate disagreeing, he went ambassador to the Hague in 1791, till the government was overthrown by the invasion of the French in the following winter. His last foreign mission was to St. Petersburg, March, 1801, to congratulate the Emperor ALEXANDER on his accession, whose coronation he attended at Moscow the following September, and having accommodated the differences between Great Britain and the three Baltic powers, he finally closed his diplomatic labours. This eminent diplomatist was created a peer of Ireland as BARON ST. HELENS, 26 January, 1791, and a peer of the United Kingdom, as BARON ST. HELENS, of the Isle of Wight, 31 July, 1801. His lordship d. unm. in 1839, when his honours became extinct.

The 2nd son.

THE HON. THOMAS NUGENT, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, was made BARON NUGENT, of Riverston, co. Westmeath, by writ, 3 April, 1689; but the title being conferred after the king (JAMES II.) had abdicated the English crown, is not acknowledged. The Barony of Riverston, like others at the same time, and owing perhaps to the hurry and confusion of that distracted epoch, was created by a peculiar instrument, a writ of summons with remainder, as in letters patent, and this writ is actually enrolled on the patent roll of JAMES II., to the heirs-male of the Right Hon. Thomas Nugent, 2nd son of Richard, Earl of Westmeath, and lord chief justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland. It is dated 3 April, 1689, seven days it has been observed subsequent to that which the Act of Parliament itself (9 WILLIAM III., chap. 2.) decided as the date at which was to be fixed the commencement of the Rebellion against WILLIAM III., and consequently while JAMES II. was recognised by that Parliament as being de jure et de facto still King of Ireland, and lawfully at the head of his army and government therein. The title was recognised by General de Ginkell, King WILLIAM's commander and representative in his pass, dated 5 October, 1691, allowing Lord Riverston to proceed to his castle of Pallas. The arms of Thomas, Lord Riverston are also enrolled as such in Ulster's Office. Thomas, Lord Riverston, m. 1680, Marianne, dau. of Henry, Viscount Kinsland, and d. in 1715, leaving issue,

I HYACINTH-RICHARD, called Lord Riverston, m. Susan, dau. of Sir Marcus Beresford, afterwards Earl of Tyrone, but d. s. p. 6 March, 1768.

Lineage.

NIALL THE GREAT, Monarch of Ireland at the close of the 4th century, having subdued the Picts and Britons, and ravaged the coasts of Gaul, was assassinated on the banks of the Loire, near Boulogne. His son, Prince Owen, was the ancestor of the house of O'Neill. Daniel O'Neill, surnamed Ardmach, the 46th monarch of the Hy-Niall race, d. A.D. 1004; he was s. by Malachy, a South Hy-Niall Prince, in whose reign the ancient dynasty was interrupted by Bryan Boru (O'Brien), King of Munster, who obtained the crown, but at his death at the battle of Clontarf, 1014, Malachy resumed the sceptre, and d. 1048. Thenceforward, for nearly a century and a quarter, Princes of other houses, the O'Connors of Connaught, and the O'Briens of Munster, contended for the sovereignty.

HUGH DUFF O'NEILL, King of Ulster, 6th in descent from the Monarch, Daniel Ardmac, d. 1230; he was ancestor of the house of O'NEILL, of Clanaboy, as his brother Prince Neill Roe, was of O'NEILL, of Tyrone. Aodh-Buidhe, i.e., Hugh-boy or Yellow Hugh O'Neill, King of Ulster, 1260, grandson of Hugh Duff, recovered from the English the territories in the cos. Antrim and Down, called after him Clan-Hugh-boy, Anglicè Clanaboy, and had for his chief castle, Edenduffcarrig, now Shane's Castle. The last of this royal house who bore the title of King of Ulster, was DONALD O'NEILL, who d. 1325. In the celebrated appeal made by him, and the princes, nobles, and Irish people in general to Pope JOHN XXII., against the English, in 1315, as recorded by John Fordun, he is styled "Donald O'Neyl, King of Ulster, and rightful successor to the throne of all Ireland."

O'NEILL—EARL OF TYRONE, AND BARON DUNGANNON.

Earldom, by Letters Patent, dated 1 October, 1542.

Barony, by Letters Patent, dated 1 October, 1542.

Lineage.

The O'Neills of Ulster were for ages the most formidable of the aboriginal clans in Ireland.

HENRY MACOWEN O'NEILL, chief of his nation, in the 15th century, m. the dau. of McMurrough, and by her, who was living 1452, he had issue,

- i. CON MORE, of whom presently.
- ii. Henry, slain at the house of Art O'Neill, of the Fewa, 1493, he had a son Felim.
- iii. Donald, competitor with his brother Henry, d. 6 August, 1509.
- iv. Bryan.

The eldest son,

CON MORE O'NEILL, who founded the Franciscan Monastery of Ballinacagart, in Tyrone, 1493, m. Elinor, dau. of Thomas, 7th Earl of Kildare, and was murdered by his brother Henry, 1493. He had issue,

- i. CON BACCACH, of whom presently.
- ii. Art Oge, slain by Art O'Neill, of the Castle. He had issue, Neil Conalagh, who m. Rose, dau. of Manus O'Donnell, Lord of Tyrconnel, and was father of Sir Tirlagh Luineach O'Neill, Captain of all Tyrone, who assumed the title of O'Neill on the death of Shane a Diomais, was knighted 6 October, 1588, and d. 1595, leaving issue.

- iii. John, of Drommorrie, alias Kinard, co. Tyrone, father of Sir Henry O'Neill, of Drommorrie, and of two younger sons, John surnamed Gealagh, from whom a family resident in France were said to have been descended, and Art O'Neill: the eldest son, Sir HENRY O'NEILL, had a son and heir,

Sir Henry Oge O'Neill, who was knighted 28 August, 1604, and slain in the king's service, leaving four sons and one dau., viz.,

- 1 Tirlagh, who d. v. p., leaving by Catherine, his wife, two sons,

Phelim Roe (Sir), the first actor in the great war of 1641, attainted and executed in Dublin, 1652. He m. 1st, Lady Jane Gordon, dau. of George, Marquess of Huntly, and widow of Claud, Earl of Abercorn; and 2ndly, a dau. of General Thomas Preston, and had a son, Gordon, brigadier-general, d. at St. Germain-en-Laye, in France, in 1704, having had Charles, d. in France, and Mary-Anne, wife of Richard Bourke, commonly called Baron Castle Connell.

Tirlagh, of Ardgonnell.

- 2 Bryan, had custodiam of lands during minority of Phelim Roe. He had a son, Cormac, father of Colonel Con O'Neill, who had three sons, Art, Cormac, and John.

- 3 Cormac, father of John, father of Bryan.

- 4 Con, had custodiam of lands of Phelim, father of Con Oge.

- 1 Catherine, m. to Art Oge O'Neill, Esq., of Tassagh

- iv. Tirlagh, governor of Kinnard, father of Neill, father of Neill Oge.

- v. Bryan, father of Con, father of Tirlagh, father of Rory, father of Art.

- i. Joane, m. to Manus O'Donnell.

The eldest son,

CON BACCACH O'NEILL, having, according to Morison, joined in the Geraldine Rebellion, and fearing the king's vengeance "sailed into England," and renouncing the title of O'Neill, had a regrant of his lands by patent, dated 1 October, 34th HENRY VIII., and was created 1 October, 1542, Earl of TYRONE, for life with remainder to his son MATTHEW, otherwise FEARDORAGH, O'NEILL, and the heirs male of his body. He m. Alice, dau. of Gerald, 8th Earl of Kildare, and had issue,

- i. Shane or John a Diomais, the Proud, who went to London in 1561 (to effect a reconciliation with Queen ELIZABETH), attended by his body guard of galloglasses with their Captain, MacSweeney, and his standard bearer, MacCaffry. Camden relates how the Londoners were astonished at the appearance in their streets of these stalwart warriors, habited in the military costume of their country. Shane a Diomais was slain by the MacDonnells in 1567, he m. Margery, dau. of Manus O'Donnell, Lord of Tyrconnel, and by her had issue,

- 1 Henry, escaped into Ulster when Hugh Roe O'Donnell effected his second and successful escape from Dublin Castle.

- 2 Art, died in the co. Wicklow from fatigue in his flight from confinement in Dublin.

Shane had, by Lady Jane, wife of Calvagh O'Donnell, Lord of Tyremnell, an illegitimate son, HUGH MA GAVALLACH, who was hanged by order of the Earl of Tyrone, and not, as Camden insinuates, by that Chieftain's own hand.

- ii. Phelim Caach, father of Tirlagh O'Neill Breasaalagh, who had issue, 1 Hugh, 2 Cormack, 3 Con, 4 Art, 5 Phelim, 6 Edmund, 7 Tirlagh, 8 Bryan-Ceannshionain, 9 Ever-an-locha.

iii. Tirlagh.

1. Mary, m. to Sorley Boy MacDonnell, father of the 1st Earl of Antrim.

Con Baccach O'Neill, 1st Earl of Tyrone had also by Alison, the wife of a blacksmith at Dundalk, an illegitimate son,

MATTHEW O'NEILL, called "Feardoragh," who was created by patent, 1 October, 1542, Baron DUNGANNON. He m. Joanna, dau. of Constantine Maguire, son of Constantine, son of Bryan, son of Philip, son of Thomas Maguire, and by her (who was afterwards the wife of Henry O'Neill of the Fewa) he had issue,

- i. Bryan, murdered by McDonnell.

- ii. Hugh, of whom presently.

- iii. Cormac (Sir), knighted 23 August, 1605, by Sir Arthur Chichester. He m. the dau. of Sir Hugh O'Donnell, Lord of Tyrconnel, and dying in the Tower of London, about 1613, had a son, Constantine O'Neill, who d. s. p.

- iv. Barnaby.

- v. Art, who had three sons,

- 1 Art Oge, father of HUGH O'NEILL, a major-general, and governor of Limerick, 1650, who assumed the title of Earl of TYRONE, as appears by his letter, soliciting the restoration of his family to the favour of the King, dated from Madrid, 27 October, 1660, addressed to the Marquess of Ormonde, and supported by the recommendation of the English ambassador, Henry Bennet, who sets forth Hugh's lineal succession to the title (Caste MSS. vol. 31, p. 3).

- 2 OWEN ROE, the famous General of the Confederates in 1642: who achieved the victory of Benburb, and was one of the greatest of Irish commanders. He d. 1649, in the castle of Cloughouter, co. Cavan, and was buried in the cemetery of the ancient Franciscan monastery in the town of Cavan, leaving by his wife, Rose O'Dogherty, widow of Calvagh O'Donnell, four sons, Henry, born in Spain, executed by order of Sir Charles Coote, at Derry, 1650, having had a son Hugh, who d. s. p.

Bryan, father of Owen, titular Earl of Tyrone, d. s. p.

Con (captain) had two sons, Owen, a colonel in the French service, and Lewis, an officer in the French service.

John, a priest.

- 3 Con, had two sons, Daniel and Bryan Roe, father of Con, who d. young in Spain.

The 2nd son,

HUGH O'NEILL, Earl of Tyrone, was chiefly educated at the Court of Queen ELIZABETH, where he learnt, from the English statesmen Burghley, Leicester, and Hatton, that knowledge of political craft which marked his entire career. Eventually, throwing off his allegiance to the English Sovereign, "the Arch Rebel," as he was styled, disclaimed the title of Earl of Tyrone (which had been confirmed to him by charter, 10 May, 1587) and proclaimed himself the O'Neill. He conquered every army sent against him by ELIZABETH; until after the siege of Kinsale in 1603, he found his cause hopeless and surrendered to Lord Mountjoy, by whom he was received into protection. Subsequently, in 1607, he fled to France, and thence proceeded to Louvain, and finally to Rome where he was maintained on a monthly allowance granted by PAUL V. and the King of Spain. He m. 1st, a dau. of Sir Brian McPhelim from whom he was legitimately divorced; 2ndly, Judith, dau. of Manus O'Donnell, and sister of the celebrated Red Hugh O'Donnell, and by her had issue,

TEMPLE—VISCOUNT PALMERSTON.

By Letters Patent, dated 12 March, 1722.

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Knt., a learned and eminent person in the reign of ELIZABETH, removed into Ireland, and was appointed provost of Trinity College, Dublin, which university he represented in parliament in 1613. He received the honour of knighthood, 4 May, 1622, from the Lord Deputy St. John, and was appointed one of the Masters in Chancery. Sir William m. Martha, dau. of Mr. Robert Harrison, of the co. Derby, by whom he had two sons, John and Thomas, in holy orders, minister of Battersea (ancestor, it is presumed, of the TEMPLES of the co. of Westmeath), and two daus., Katherine m. 1st, John Archdall, of Archdall, co. Fermanagh; and 2ndly, Sir John Veal, Knt.; and Mary m. to Job Ward, Esq., Sir William d. 15 January, 1626-7, and was s. by his son.

SIR JOHN TEMPLE, Knt., b. in 1600, who was constituted Master of the Rolls in Ireland, and sworn of the privy council there. He filled, for a series of years, high and confidential places in the government of Ireland; and was appointed, in 1648, joint commissioner of the great seal with Sir William Parsons. He joined, however, the standard of Cromwell, but was nevertheless retained as Master of the Rolls after the Restoration, when he was constituted vice-treasurer of Ireland. He m. Mary, dau. of John Hammond, M.D., of Chertsey, in Surrey, and had two surviving sons and two daus., viz.,

I. WILLIAM (Sir), created a baronet in 1645, and sworn of the privy council. Sir William's "Memoirs" and "Letters" display much acquaintance with men and books, and are important also, in an historical point of view. The great Sir William Temple d. January, 1693, and was buried in Westminster Abbey: by direction of his will, his heart, in a silver box, was placed under the sun-dial in his garden, at Moor Park, opposite to the window from which he used to contemplate the works of nature. He m. Dorothy, 2nd dau. of Sir Peter Osborne, of Chicksands, co. Bedford, and had (with other issue, who d. young), a son,

JOHN, of Moor Park, whose melancholy death by suicide in 1689, is so graphically narrated by Macaulay: he left by his wife, a French lady, Mary, dau. of Monsieur Du Plessis Rambouillet, two daus.,

ELIZABETH, m. to John Temple, Esq.

DOROTHY, m. to Nicholas Bacon, Esq., of Shrubland Hall, Suffolk.

II. Mary, m. 1st, to Abraham Yarner, Esq.; and 2ndly, to Hugh Eccles, Esq.

Sir John d. 14 November, 1677. His younger son,

SIR JOHN TEMPLE, Knt., who was solicitor and attorney-general, and Speaker of the House of Commons in Ireland, had several grants of land in Ireland, including one adjoining the Phoenix Park, Dublin, near Chapel Izod, which was called "Palmerston." He m. 4 August, 1663, Jane, dau. of Sir Abraham Yarner, Knt., of Dublin, and had issue,

HENRY, his successor.

John, who m. Elizabeth, elder dau. of John Temple, Esq., of Moor Park, in Surrey, and grand-dau. of Sir William Temple, Bart., by whom he acquired that estate, and had a numerous family. His male issue soon became extinct.

Catherine m. 1st, to Charles Ward, Esq., of Killough; and 2ndly, to Charles King, Esq., of Dublin.

Dorothy m. 1st, to Francis Colvill, Esq.; and 2ndly, to Sir Basil Dixwell, Bart., and d. s. p.

Elizabeth d. unm.

Mary, m. 1683, to Thomas Flower, Esq., of Durrow.

Frances, m. William, Lord Berkeley, of Stratton, and had with other issue, who d. s. p., a son, Charles, whose only surviving child, SOPHIA, m. JOHN, LORD WODEHOUSE, great-grandfather by her of John, present Lord Wodehouse.

Sir John d. in 1704, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY TEMPLE, Esq., Chief Remembrancer of the Court of Exchequer, in Ireland, who was created a peer of that kingdom, as Baron Temple, of Mount Temple, co. Sligo, and VISCOUNT PALMERSTON, of Palmerston, co. Dublin, by letters patent, bearing date 12 March, 1722, and describing Henry Temple the grantee, "præclaris ortum majoribus." His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Abraham Houbion, Esq., of London and by that lady (who d. 8 December, 1735), had issue,

HENRY, who m. 1st, 18 June, 1753, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Col. and Lady Elizabeth Lee, and sister of Caroline, wife of Gen. William Haviland, of Penn. Bucks, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, in 1738, Jane, dau. of Sir John Bernard, Bart.,

2 B

- I. HUGH, Baron of Dungannon, d. at Rome, 1609, unm.
- II. HENRY, a colonel of an Irish regiment, in the archduke's service, killed in Spain.
- III. JOHN, called El Condé de Tyrone, in Spain, in which kingdom he had attained the rank of lieutenant-general, killed in Catalonia.
- IV. BRYAN or BERNARD, page to the archduke, murdered at Brussels, 1617.
- V. CON, a prisoner in the Tower of London, 1617.

He m. 3rdly, Mabel, sister of Sir Henry Bagenall, marshal of the Queen's forces in Ireland, to whom he was m. by Jones, bishop of Meath, 1591, she d. s. p.; and 4thly, the dau. of the Lord Iveagh, who accompanied him to Rome where she died. This lady is described by Peter Lombard, archbishop of Armagh, thus: "Ætate quidem juniorem, sed educatione, prudentiâ, pietate maturam;" de Reg. Hib. p. 383. Tyrone d. at Rome, blind and old, 20 July, 1616, and was buried with great pomp in the church of San Pietro Montorio, where the tombs of O'Donnell and O'Neill, Baron of Dungannon, are objects of attraction to English and Irish sojourners in the Eternal City. The tomb of the Earl of Tyrone is no longer in existence, but happily the inscription it bore is still preserved in the Book of Obits, of San Pietro's monastery, and runs thus:

D. O. M.
Hic Quiescunt Ossâ
Hugonis Principis O'Neill.

It would appear that this brief epitaph was suggested by that on the tomb of Tasso in the neighbouring church of St. Onofro. Hugh, Earl of Tyrone, was attainted in 1612.

- I. PHILIP, of Alvanley, m. Lucy, dau. and heir of Roger de Montalt, and had an only dau. and heiress Agnes, wife of Walkelynde Arderne.
- II. FULKE.

The 2nd son,

FULKE DE ORREBY, justice of Chester in the 44th HENRY III., to whom the custody of the castles of Chester, Beeston, Vaenor, Shotwick, and Dyserth, was then committed. He m. (ORMEROD's Cheshire) the dau. and heir of Strange, Lord of Dalby, and had a dau., Alicia, m. to Peter Corbet, of Leighton, and a son,

SIR JOHN DE ORREBY, of Dalby and Fulke Stapleford, co. Chester, who was summoned to parliament from 4 March, 2nd EDWARD II., 1309, to 16 June, 4th EDWARD II., 1311. He m. 1st, Isabella, youngest sister and co-heiress of Robert, Lord de Tatteshall; and 2ndly, Jane, by whom (who re-m. Henry Fitz-Henry) he left (according to ORMEROD's Cheshire) a son and heir,

PHILIP DE ORREBY, who was never summoned to parliament, neither was his son,

JOHN OF PHILIP DE ORREBY, who left a dau. and heir, JOAN, the 2nd wife of Henry, 3rd Lord Percy, by whom she had an only child, Mary, who m. John, Lord Ros of Hamlake, and d. s. p. Inq. p. m., 6th HENRY IV.

In 1806, he contested unsuccessfully with Lord Henry Petty, the representation of the University of Cambridge, and again in 1807, with a similar result, but in 1811, he was more fortunate, being then returned for that constituency, which he continued to represent up to 1831. He had meanwhile entered the House of Commons as M.P. for Helston, and had held office as a Lord of the Admiralty in 1807. From 1809 to 1828 he was secretary at war; and Foreign Secretary from 1830 to 1834, from 1835 to 1841, and from 1846 to 1851. In December, 1852, he was constituted Secretary of State for the Home Department; and 8 February, 1855, FIRST LORD OF THE TREASURY, which office he resigned 26 February, 1858, but resumed it 24 June, 1859, and held it up to the period of his decease. His lordship, after his retirement from the representation of the University of Cambridge, sat for Hetchingley, 1831, for South Hants from 1832 to 1834, and for Tiverton since 1835. He m. 16 December, 1839, Emily-Mary, dau. and (by the deaths of her brothers, Viscount Melbourne, the Prime Minister, and Lord Beauvale,) sole heiress of Peniston Lamb, 1st Viscount Melbourne, and widow of Peter-Leopold, 5th Earl Cowper, but had no issue. His lordship, a most distinguished, able, and popular statesman, d. 18 October, 1868, deeply lamented by the nation at large, irrespectively of politics or party, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, in a grave closely adjoining those of Pitt and Canning. At his death the honours of his family became EXTINCT.

JOHN BURKE, Lord Leitrim, is stated to have had two sons, JOHN, executed for treason, and Redmond, who was a fugitive in Spain, in 1615.

DE DREUX—EARLS OF RICHMOND.

I have found it impossible to reconcile the conflicting accounts of the earlier generations of the ancestry of the Earls of Richmond: Dugdale's statement differs materially from the descent given in the third general Report of the Lords' Committee on the dignity of a Peer, a descent followed by Nicolas and Courthope, whereas the pedigree in the Art de Vérifier les dates is again quite dissimilar. My esteemed and accomplished friend, the present Lord Gort, has afforded me the advantage of his researches on the subject of the De Dreux pedigree, and I have rested my narrative on what appeared to me to be the most reliable sources of information.

FLEMING—EARLS OF WIGTON.

The following is the earlier LINEAGE of this noble family:—
SIR MALCOLM FLEMING (elder son of Sir Robert Fleming, of Cumbernauld, the adherent of ROBERT BRUCE, and brother of Sir Patrick Fleming, of Biggar, jure uxoris, a dau. and co-heir of Sir Simon Fraser,) fought in the second body of the Scots army, at Halidonhill, 19 July, 1333, and was one of the few who were not slain. His subsequent participation in the conveyance of King DAVID II., to France, and his many gallant services were requited on the king's return, in 1341, by a grant of a charter, dated 9 November, 1341, conferring on him the title of EARL OF WIGTON. The earl was taken prisoner at the battle of Durham, 17 October, 1346, and with his royal master, endured a long and dreary captivity in the Tower of London, but eventually he sat in the parliament of Scotland, at Edinburgh, 26 September, 1357. He is said to have had two daus., one m. to Sir John Danielston, and Marjory, m. to William de Fawsyd; he had also a son,

JOHN FLEMING, one of the hostages for the ransom of King DAVID II., under the style of "Johan Flemyng, heir au Comte de Wygeton." It is, however, probable that he was dead before 1351, and that Johan is a mistake for Thomas. His son,

THOMAS FLEMING, 2nd Earl of Wigton, was, under the style of Thomas Fleming, grandson of the Earl of Wigton, one of the hostages for DAVID II., when he was permitted to visit his dominions, 4 September, 1351. By deed of sale, dated at Edinburgh, 8 February, 1371-2, this Thomas sold "pro una certâ et notabili summa pecunie" the Earldom of Wigton to Archibald Douglas, and the sale was confirmed by the king. Henceforward, he was styled "Thomas Flemyng, dudum Comes de Wigton." He was s. by his cousin,

SIR MALCOLM FLEMING, of Biggar (son of Sir Patrick Fleming, of Biggar, by his wife, a co-heiress of Sir Simon Fraser, of Oliver Castle), who had charters from King DAVID II., of the lands of Leigne, forfeited by John Kennedy. He had two sons,

- I. DAVID, of whom presently.
- II. Patrick, ancestor of the Flemings of Bord.

The elder son,

SIR DAVID FLEMING, of Biggar and Cumbernauld, distinguished himself at the battle of Otterburn, in 1388, and had several charters from King ROBERT III. He m. 1st, Jean, only dau. of Sir David Barclay, of Brechin, and by her had one dau.,

MARION, m. to William Maule, of Panmure, who in his right, claimed the Barony of Brechin.

He m. 2ndly, Isabel, heiress of Monycabon, by whom he had two sons,

- I. MALCOLM (Sir).
- II. David, whose son, Malcolm Fleming, of Boghull, and Elizabeth de Horeston, his wife, had a charter of the lands of Boghull and Haddolston, in the shire of Renfrew, 15 June, 1452.

The elder son,

SIR MALCOLM FLEMING, of Biggar and Cumbernauld, was knighted by King ROBERT III. He m. Lady Elizabeth Stewart, 3rd dau. of Robert, Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, and by her had issue,

- I. MALCOLM, who appears to have d. v. p., and s. p.
- II. ROBERT, of whom presently.
- III. Margaret, m. to Patrick, Master of Gray.

Sir Malcolm was arrested with the Duke of Albany, in 1425, but was soon after released. Eventually, accompanying William, Earl of Douglas, to Edinburgh Castle, he was, after a hurried trial, there beheaded, 1440. His 2nd son,

SIR ROBERT FLEMING, of Biggar and Cumbernauld, was created a peer of parliament as LORD FLEMING, but the date of his creation is not known. He m. 1st, Lady Janet Douglas, 3rd dau. of James, 7th Earl of Douglas, and by her had issue,

- I. MALCOLM, his heir.
- II. Robert, mentioned in the records of parliament, 12 June, 1478.
- I. Elizabeth, m. to John, Lord Livingston.
- II. Beatrix, m. to Sir William Stirling, of Kier.

He m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of John Lindsay, of Covington, but by her had no issue. The elder son,

MALCOLM FLEMING, of Monycabon (who d. v. p.), m. Eupheme, dau. of James, Lord Livingston, and had issue,

- I. David (Sir), d. in the life-time of his grandfather.
- II. JOHN, 2nd Lord Fleming.
- I. Elizabeth, m. to George Fleming, son and heir apparent of William Fleming, of the Bord.
- II. Isabel.

The 2nd son,

JOHN FLEMING, 2nd Lord Fleming, succeeded his grandfather, 1494, went as ambassador to France, and became Chamberlain of Scotland. He m. Eupheme, 5th dau. of David, Lord Drummond, and by her (who was poisoned with two of her sisters, in 1501), had issue,

- I. MALCOLM, 3rd Lord Fleming
- I. Elizabeth, m. to William, Lord Crichton, of Sanquhar.
- II. Margaret, m. to John Cunningham, of Glengarnock.
- III. Johanna, m. 1st, to John Sandilands, of Calder; and 2ndly, to David Crawford, of Kerse.

He m. 2ndly, Lady Margaret Stewart, eldest dau. of Matthew, 2nd Earl of Lennox, which lady m. 2ndly, Alexander Douglas, of Mains. Lord Fleming m. 3rdly, Agnes Somerville, relict of the deceased John, Lord Fleming. The 2nd Lord Fleming was assassinated 1 November, 1524. His son and heir,

MALCOLM FLEMING, 3rd Lord Fleming, s. his father as Great Chamberlain of Scotland; he m. Johanna, or Janet Stewart, natural dau. of King JAMES IV., by Isabel Stewart, dau. of James, Earl of Buchan, and had issue,

- I. JAMES, 4th Lord Fleming.
- II. JOHN, 5th Lord Fleming.
- I. Janet, m. 1st, John Livingston, eldest son of Alexander, 5th Lord Livingston.
- II. Agnes, m. to William, 6th Lord Livingstone.
- III. Margaret, m. 1st, to Robert, Master of Montrose; 2ndly, to Thomas, Master of Marr; and 3rdly, John, 4th Earl of Atholl, high chancellor of Scotland.
- IV. Mary, m. 6 January, 1567, to William Maitland, of Ledington.

The 3rd Lord Fleming founded the Collegiate Church of Biggar. He was slain at Pinkie, 1547, and s. by his son,

JAMES FLEMING, 4th Lord Fleming, Great Chamberlain of Scotland, m. Lady Barbara Hamilton, eldest dau. of James, Duke of Chatelherault, governor of Scotland, and by her had a dau., Jane, m. 1st, to John, Lord Thirlestane, high chancellor of Scotland. The 4th Lord Fleming, one of the eight commissioners chosen by parliament to represent the Scottish nation at the nuptial of MARY, Queen of Scots, with the Dauphin of France, d. at Paris, 15 December, 1558. He was s. by his brother,

JOHN FLEMING, 5th Lord Fleming, Great Chamberlain of Scotland, who m. Elizabeth, only child of Robert, Master of Ross, and by her had a son,

- I. JOHN, 6th Lord Fleming.
- I. Mary, m. to James Douglas, of Drumlanrig.
- II. Jane, m. to William Bruce, of Airth.
- III. Margaret, m. to Sir James Forrester, of Carden.

The 5th Lord Fleming, a devoted adherent of Queen MARY, was accidentally wounded at Edinburgh, and d. shortly after, 6 September, 1572. The son and heir,

JOHN FLEMING, 6th Lord Fleming, was created EARL OF WIGTON, Lord Fleming and Cumbernauld by patent, dated at Whitehall, 19 March, 1606.

LIVINGSTONE—BARONS LIVINGSTONE AND EARLS OF LINLITHGOW.

In the United States of America may be found descendants of some of the ancient nobility of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The family of Livingstone, of New York (unquestionably descended in the direct male line from the old Lords Livingstone) is a memorable case in point: its immediate ancestor was the celebrated divine, John Livingstone, b. in 1603, who, from religious persecution, went or was exiled to Holland. He was a man of talent and influence, and was sent to the Hague to solicit King CHARLES II. to resume the throne. He m. a Flemish lady, and d. in 1672, leaving issue. His diary, on parchment, as well as his portrait (by Rembrandt), is still preserved. The diary has been printed. To his son, ROBERT LIVINGSTONE, Queen ANNE, granted a very considerable tract of land, in the State of New York, which became the manor of Livingstone, and continues to be the seat of the family.

The original grant was of vast extent, and its proprietors, the Livingstones, were all called lords of the manor, until the War of Independence destroyed titles and entails. At the death of the 3rd and last lord of the manor, the manor was divided into four portions, HENRY-WALTER LIVINGSTONE, of Teriotdale, inheriting two of those portions. Beside the possession of their landed estates, the Livingstones of America have gained distinction by their conspicuous abilities and great public services.

ROBERT-B LIVINGSTONE, b. at New York, 27 November, 1746, was one of the committee who drew up the Declaration of Independence. In 1780, he was appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and, on the adoption of the constitution of New York was constituted chancellor of that state. In 1801, he went, as minister plenipotentiary to the court of France, and gained the especial favour of Napoleon, who gave Livingstone, his portrait, by Isabey, surrounded by valuable diamonds. During his diplomatic residence at Paris, Livingstone accomplished, with the aid of Mr. Munroe, the transfer of Louisiana to the United States. His memoirs have been published as well as the life of his brother Edward Livingstone, a famous American legislator. Robert Livingstone formed the acquaintance, while in Paris, of Robert Fulton, and was associated with that eminent engineer (who married his niece Harriet Livingstone) in great steam navigation enterprises. Chancellor Livingstone, who was founder and first president of the New York Academy of the Fine Arts, d. 26 March, 1813, honoured as an able statesman, an upright and useful citizen, and "highly distinguished public servant."

Another eminent member of the family was Governor Livingstone (governor of the State for life), whose dau. m. the celebrated John Jay. Some years ago, several members of the American family visited Admiral Sir Thomas Livingstone, in Scotland (then keeper of the Royal Palace of Linlithgow), who received them with great kindness, and afterwards corresponded with them until his death.

MAGENNIS—VISCOUNT MAGENNIS, OF IVEAGH.

The following curious documents describe the condition of the Lords Iveagh after the Restoration—

The state of the Claim of the Lord of Iveaghe is as followeth:—

The Lord of Iveaghe had two Mannor Houses in the county of Down before the warres, vizt., Rathfrilan and Narrow-water, both of them are now demolished.

At Rathfrilan, one Mr. Hawkins, an Adventurer, hath built a house, which, as he alleadgeth cost him £300 or thereabouts.

The lande about that Mannor for 2 miles every way is not worth six pence per Acre as they stand now in Lease from the said Adventurer, and the most parte of the land contiguous thereto being in Mortgage with Colonell Hill for £1000; soe as all the said inconveniences and encumbrances being in that place hath hindered the Lord of Iveaghe to make his Election there.

The Mannor of Narrow-water is, 1500 acres contiguous about it, leased by one Mr. Barker Deane, an Adventurer, to Mr. Charles Bolton for £40 per annum for severall years to come, which lease is also given over by Mr. Bolton to the Lord of Dungannon, so as the Lord of Iveaghe could not fix on 2000 acres in that place.

Wherefore he hath made his election on a place called Keilmore. On this Keilmore the late Lord of Iveaghe built a house before the warres, and was dwelling therein the summer before his death, and his Lady. It was proved by two witnesses in the Court of Claimes that the said late Lord dwelled there, and that Sir William Brownlow and Mr. Burly the then High Sheriffe of the county of Doune did dine with His Lordship at Keilmore. Wherefore the now Lord of Iveaghe made his election and claime of 2000 acres contiguous, at Keilmore, although the house built thereon be demolished as the other houses are, which election he humbly conceiveth is suitable to His Matie's intentions and Royall favours declared in the Act of Explanacon intended for him as one of the Nominees therein menconed.

Notwithstanding it was objected by the Councill and the persons in possession of the premises that it was not due election, none of the said Mannor Houses being fixed upon, and it is further alledged that the most parte of the said 2000 acres was in the Dowager Lady Iveaghe's possession in Anno 1641, as parte of her joynture, given her uppon a writt of Dower sued out of the Comon place after the late Lord of Iveaghe's death, in the minority and wardshippe of the now Lord of Iveaghe.

In answer to these objections the said Lord offers that his father having built and lived at Keilmore as aforesaid that it is grounds sufficient enough for him to make his election there. And as to the other parte of the objection he saith that it appeareth by a Deede of feoffment inserted in an office taken after the death of Arthure Lord Viscount of Iveaghe, the now Lord of Iveaghe's grandfather, that upon the intermarriage between the late lord of Iveaghe and the Lady Dowager now living, that other lands were made over to the said Lady in lieu of her joynture, which lands were in particular nominated in the said Deede of which lands the 2000 acres of Keilmore aforesaid claimed by the now lord is noe parte; that a writt of Dower could not give her any other joynture but what was made over to her as aforesaid, that she taking then advantage of the now Lord of Iveaghe's minority, tooke out the said writt of Dower unknowne to the Master of the Wardes, and to his guardian the Lord Marquis of Antrim.

That for all the reasons aforesaid hee humbly prayeth his said election may stand, and that the said 2000 acres may forthwith be assigned out, in regard he hath not a foote of land in Conaught or elsewhere to subsist by or live uppon as the other Nominees have; and that the rather as the said Lady Dowager now living hath not a foote of land as a Dower or joynture nor provided of any wayes either by the Acte of Settlement or Explanacon.

Patrick Ma Ginn to His Grace the Duke of Ormonde.

Whitehall, this 9th April, 1666.

My Lord,—At this very instant I received a letter from poore my Lord Iveaghe's agent acquainting me how he is hindered in order to getting his 2000 akers by the power and credit of his adversaries. The poore man hath no body to support him there, nor I noe friend to rely upon but your Grace. Therefore I humbly begg of your Grace to shew yourselfe in this conjuncture his friend, specially seeing his right is so cleere as the Commissioners themselves tould me there, it being a generall rule that any nominee could chuse out of their estates any 2000 akers. You know my Lord how troublesome I have been heretofore both to the King and to your Grace for this poore man, and how often your Grace gave me all the hopes I could expect to favour him: Now is the time:

My Lord, one word in his behalfe to the Commissioners will do his businesse, which I dare promise myselfe your Grace will doe as well for his sake as for the justness of his cause. I will trouble you noe more upon this subject but wish your Grace all happinesse and long health, for which shall ever pray,

My lord,

Your most humble and addicted servant,
PATRICK MA GINN.

Carte MSS., Vol. 35, p. 140.

Magennis, styling himself Viscount Iveagh, was colonel of the Irish brigade in Spain, at or shortly before the breaking out of the great French Revolution. Documents signed by him, as "Viscount Iveagh," are in existence.

MASSUE DE RUVIGNY—EARL OF GALWAY.

DANIEL DE MASSUE, Baron de Ruvigny, (son of Nicholas de Massue, by Helen D'Ally, his wife), was father of a dau., Rachel, wife of Thomas Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton (and mother of Rachel, Lady Russell), and of a son, HENRY, MARQUIS DE RUVIGNY, who emigrated from France, and left, by Marie Tallemant, his wife, two sons; the elder was HENRY MASSUE DE RUVIGNY, EARL OF GALWAY; and the younger, named CAILLEMOT, the famous Williamite officer, slain at the battle of the Boyne.

"THE MARQUESS OF RUVIGNY," says Macaulay, "had been during many years an eminently faithful and useful servant of the French government. So highly was his merit appreciated at Versailles, that he had been solicited to accept indulgencies which scarcely any other heretic could by any solicitation obtain. Had he chosen to remain in his native country, he and his household would have been permitted to worship God privately according to their own forms. But Ruvigny rejected all offers, cast in his lot with his brethren, and, at upwards of eighty years of age, quitted Versailles, where he might still have been a favourite, for a modest dwelling at Greenwich. That dwelling was, during the last months of his life, the resort of all that was most distinguished among his fellow exiles. His abilities, his experience, and his munificent kindness, made him the undisputed chief of the refugees. He was at the same time half an Englishman: for his sister had been Countess of Southampton, and he was uncle of Lady Russell. He was long past the time of action. But his two sons, both men of eminent courage, devoted their swords to the service of WILLIAM. The younger son, who bore the name of CAILLEMOT, was appointed colonel of one of the Huguenot regiments of foot. The two other regiments of foot were commanded by La Melloniere and Cambon, officers of high reputation. The regiment of horse was raised by Schomberg himself, and bore his name. Ruvigny lived just long enough to see these arrangements complete."

PRESTON—VISCOUNTS TARA.

In the Carte MSS., Bodleian Library, Oxford, Vol. 42, p. 191, occurs the following Royal Letter with reference to Thomas, last Viscount Tara:—

Whitehall, August 14, 1662.

My Lo. Orrery,—When I came first to Bruges in Flanders nd was far from being in a good condition, I found my Lord of aragh there, who invited me to his hous where I lodged neer a month till I could provide another place for myself; and during the whole time of my abood in those parts he gave me frequent evidences of his good affection and dutye to me, which I resolved to have requited if he had lived. And therefore since hee and his wife are dead, I must particularly recommend his children to you, and likewise their Aunt, Miss Warren, who was there likewise at Bruges, to your care, that they may be out of hand put into the possession of ye severall [] which belong to them, of which you are to advertise the other Lords Justices to the end that you may all give effectual orders to the Commissioners to that purpose, and let them know I expect a good account of this business.

Your very affectionate friend,

CHARLES R.

UFFORD—BARON UFFORD.

Gilbert, in his History of the Viceroy of Ireland, speaking of Sir Ralph de Ufford, viceroy temp. EDWARD III., relates that "the colonial chroniclers of the time, reflecting to some extent the feelings of the settlers, declared that d'Ufford's death was hailed with joy by clergy and laity, who,
in consequence, celebrated their Easter with merry hearts;

the tempests and floods, which had continually prevailed from the day of his arrival, suddenly ceasing when he died.
They denounced him as an unjust man, greedy of gain; doing everything by violence, equitable to none, a robber and oppressor of both rich and poor; adding, that he revoked and cancelled grants which he had made under the king's seal, and extorted money by indicting and imprisoning ecclesiastics as well as laymen. Much of his severity was ascribed to the counsels of his wife, of whom the colonial writers recorded, with malignant satisfaction, that she, who had for a time maintained the state of a queen, subsequently, with her people, bearing d'Ufford's remains in a leaden coffin, in which her treasure was secreted, passed privately from Dublin Castle, evading her clamorous creditors, and returned ingloriously to England, 'in horrible grief of heart, sad, and mournful, with the doleful badges of death, sorrow, and heaviness.' The viceroy was interred by his widow in the nunnery of St. Clare, at Cumpsey, or Camescy, near the town of Ufford, in Suffolk, the burial place of her first husband, William de Burgh, Earl of Ulster; and, through the influence of her brother, Henry, Earl of Lancaster, she obtained license from EDWARD III. to found there a chantry of five priests, to offer up prayers perpetually for the repose of their souls."

The fact, stated by Gilbert, that Ufford's remains were interred by his widow in the nunnery of St. Clare, at Cumpsey, near the town of Ufford, the burial place of her first husband, William de Burgh, clearly proves that the second marriage of de Ufford mentioned by Dugdale could not have taken place and that Vincent's account of the Ufford pedigree is the more accurate.

THE MONTROSE CLAIM.

LETTER TO SIR BERNARD BURKE FROM LORD LINDSAY.

Duneeht, September, 1865.

My dear Sir Bernard,

I venture to believe that the following narrative of my father's claim to the (original) Dukedom of Montrose, as urged before the House of Lords in 1853 (on grounds still maintained by him to be sound and valid), will not be unacceptable to you for insertion in the appendix to the new edition of your Dormant and Extinct Peerage of Great Britain. The claim is one of great interest and curiosity, not only from its connection with history and the important precedents which are involved in its discussion, but from the extraordinary divergences of opinion between the claimant and the noble and learned lords who moved the Resolution as to matters of simple fact, patent before the eyes of the Committee of Privileges, and from the novel interpretations of peerage law, and law generally, started and applied for the first time by the noble and learned lords in question, and which, if hereafter sustained and acted upon, must revolutionize from this time forward the whole system of peerage law.

In 1488, on the occasion of the rebellion against JAMES III. of Scotland (headed by the king's eldest son, afterwards JAMES IV., and which ended in the defeat and death of the king, on the 11th June that year, at the battle of Stirling), David, 5th Earl of Crawford, having joined the royal standard with a large force of his vassals and friends, was in reward of his loyalty created by the king DUKE OF MONTROSE by charter or patent, dated the 18th of May in that year, "changing" his earldom into a dukedom, with limitation to him "et heredibus suis." This patent and the rights conveyed by it could only, by peerage law, be annulled in one of three modes, that is to say, by attainder of the family, by special annulment, or by resignation to the crown, none of which, it is admitted, took place. After the duke's death the dignity was not assumed by his heirs, and it has been dormant (in the claimant's view) ever since. But dormancy is no bar in peerage claims.

In 1850 my father, James, 24th Earl of Crawford, heir and representative of Duke David in terms of the patent, petitioned the Queen to recognize his right to the dukedom; and his petition was referred to the House of Lords for their opinion and advice. The case was heard and reported upon in July and August, 1853. It was admitted (as I have said) that there had been no attainder, that no resignation of the dukedom had taken place, and that there had been no special annulment of the patent. But it was objected that the dukedom had been annulled by a statute—styled, for convenience in the discussion, the Act Rescissory—passed on the 17th October, 1488, by the victorious party assembled in parliament, and purporting to annul, in general terms and without specification, "all alienations of lands, heritage, lang tacks, feu-farmes, offices, tailzies, blench-farm, creation of new dignities," conferred "sene (since) the second day of Februar last by-past be" "wha while our Sovereign Lord's fader, whom God assoillzie!" "quhilk might be prejudicial to our Sovereign Lord and to the crown that now is," with the inductive clause, "because that sic alienation, gifts, and privileges were grantit, sene (since) the said time, for the assistance to the pervert counsaile that were contrar the common good of the realm, and cause of the slaughter of our Sovereign Lord's fader." In reply to this objection the claimant, after pointing out certain legal considerations which governed the interpretation of the statute, adduced evidence to prove that the Act Rescissory took no effect whatever on any of the grants struck at by it, and least of all on the Dukedom of Montrose; and further that by peerage law, as established by a leading case and precedent (that of the Dukedom of Norfolk) in the same century, such a general and penal act could not per se and without specification affect a dignity. But the Committee of Privileges disallowed the argument from law and overruled the evidence on the matter of fact; and the House reported to the Crown "that the charter bearing date the 18th day of May, 1488, by which JAMES THE THIRD of Scotland granted the Dukedom of Montrose to David, Earl of Crawford 'et heredibus suis,' was annulled and made void by the Act of the first year of the reign of JAMES THE FOURTH of Scotland, called the Act Rescissory,—that the grant of the dukedom made by King JAMES THE FOURTH to the said David, Earl of Crawford in 1489" (a matter quite, as the claimant holds, of a secondary nature in regard to the present claim, but to which the Committee attached great importance) "was a grant for the term of his life only,—and that the petitioner James, Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, has not established any title to the Dukedom of Montrose, created in 1488."

Such is a brief summary or historical outline of the Montrose claim up to the present moment. It cannot, however, be appreciated without some more special details, which I will give you as succinctly as possible.

The facts adduced in evidence before the Committee of Privileges and the arguments based upon them for and against the claim may be divided into, I. Primary—those which determine the history and govern the law of the case; and, II. Secondary—those which are in themselves immaterial and superfluous in the presence of the dominant and ruling facts previously established.

I. Primary Facts and Arguments.

The main fact in dispute between the claimant and the crown before the Committee of Privileges was (it must be repeated) this,—Did the Act Rescissory, 17th October, 1488, or did it not, take effect upon the dukedom? Every other consideration (it was admitted) was immaterial. The claimant contended that the Act neither could nor did affect the patent, on grounds which I shall proceed to specify. To go into these grounds minutely would occupy too much of the space which your courtesy allows me. The controversy may be said to turn upon the question whether the Act Rescissory did or did not cut down a dignity granted within the same period and under identical circumstances with the dukedom, viz., the Earldom of Glencairn. I shall, therefore, lay especial stress upon that point; and I will merely indicate in the first instance, with as much conciseness as possible, the other points of the argument, simply premising that the claimant conceives that the evidence produced on those points would have been of itself sufficient, by peerage law and precedent, to establish his claim, even if there had been no such identical case as that of Glencairn.

The leading pleas of the claimant against the construction attributed to the Act Rescissory were as follows:—

I. All legal principle is against it.—I. The Act must be construed according to its grammatical meaning (the entire document being taken together and not piecemeal), and not according to the presumed intention of those who passed it. Words, for example, must not be struck out of, or imported into it, in order to give effect to such presumed intention.—II. It is qualified in its language, being only directed against such grants of the late king as "might be prejudicial" to the existing régime; and the grant of the dukedom must have been proved to have been "prejudicial" by legal application of the Act, before the Act could take effect on the dignity; whereas it cannot be contended that the grant of a dignity, the reward of loyalty, is "prejudicial" to the crown, and JAMES IV. himself testifies (in the regent) that the duke had been as loyal to himself as to his father.—III. The duke was in no way the "cause of the slaughter" of the king's father, and it is against such accessories only, and in punishment of such accession, that the Act Rescissory was directed; and on this ground the Scottish maxim that "a law, though expressed in the most general terms, ought not to be extended to any case to which the reason inductive of the law is in no degree applicable," saves the patent from the operation of the Act Rescissory.—IV. The grants of JAMES III. were granted by a king in full possession of his regal power and prerogative to the moment of his death, as proved by the evidence of JAMES IV. and the very parliament which passed the Act Rescissory, and by the dates of JAMES IV.'s acts and charters, all calculated from the day of his father's death as the commencement of his own sovereignty, and adduced by the claimant in reply to the objection (sustained by Lord St. Leonards), that JAMES III. was considered as having ceased to reign from the commencement of the rebellion, that is, from the 2nd February, 1487-8, four months before his death, and eight before the Act Rescissory, and "therefore" (in Lord St. Leonards' words) the parliament treated the king in the Act Rescissory "as a person who made these grants without having the authority to do so,"—this being "beyond all possibility of doubt" the "principle acted upon," and which fixes the true construction of the grants of JAMES III. and of the Act Rescissory.—V. Further, the Act Rescissory being a penal one, inflicting deprivations

* It is to be observed here, that the second clause of the resolution just given, being a report upon a grant under which the claimant had not advanced any claim in the petition which formed the exclusive subject of Her Majesty's reference to the House and of the report of the House to Her Majesty, is, by peerage law and precedent, as if it had not been inserted. It was inserted at the last moment, at the instance of Lord St. Leonards, after the resolution, as originally drawn up, had been moved by the Lord Chancellor Cranworth.

on loyal subjects, must be construed strictly, in favour of justice and mercy, and especially in the privileged matter of honours.—vi. And, finally, the question between the Act Rescissory and the Montrose patent must be decided on the rationes (and especially the three last rationes) laid down in the decision of the House of Lords in England (the precedent being relevant according to peerage law) on the claim to the Dukedom of Norfolk in 1425—that honour having been granted by RICHARD II. in 1399, and struck at by an Act Rescissory passed by HENRY IV. and his parliament that same year—the circumstances of successful rebellion being precisely parallel with those attending the Dukedom of Montrose; the decision being, that, 1. As the right to create honours belongs solely to the crown, and not to parliament; 2. As neither the duke nor his heirs were specially mentioned in the Act; 3. As no special parliamentary revocation or nullification of the creation by RICHARD II. had taken place, either as respected the grantee or his heirs; and 4. As notwithstanding the general revocation and nullification of the patent by the Act Rescissory, other persons who had been created earls and raised to dignities under the parliament struck at by it had continued to enjoy those dignities subsequently thereto, unaffected by it (viz., the Earls of Worcester and Westmoreland, answering to the Earls of Glencairn and other grantees of JAMES III. in the present case), therefore the Dukedom of Norfolk still survived untouched by the Act Rescissory.—Briefly, as aforesaid, all these pleas were overruled by the Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards, and life was given to the Act Rescissory by reading its words so as to give effect to the presumed intention of those who passed it.

2. JAMES IV. and the leaders of the parliament which passed the Act Rescissory distinctly, and with the utmost formality, and in a manner from which they could not recede, recognised David, Duke of Montrose, as such, subsequently to the Act Rescissory, and before the second grant above and hereafter to be mentioned,—thereby testifying that the Act had not affected the dignity.—The claimant produced evidence proving that, after the battle of Stirling, in which JAMES III. fell, JAMES IV., actuated probably by remorse, executed a full pardon and remission to the duke under the privy seal of all displeasure entertained by himself against him for the assistance he had given his father; but placed it in the hands of one of his most powerful adherents, Andrew, Lord Gray, as a means of extorting from the duke a resignation, in that nobleman's favour, of the hereditary sheriffdom of Forfarshire. The duke, after some hesitation, and after making a formal legal protest, reciting the facts of compulsion under which he acted,* executed a procuratory or proxy, dated the 1st November, 1488, and thus subsequently to the Act Rescissory of the 17th October, under his ducal signature and his ducal seal, empowering Lord Home, another of the leaders of the late rebellion, to perform the resignation in his name into the hands of the king. The ceremony took place on the 6th November, at Hailes Castle, the fortress of the Earl of Bothwell, a third of the recently rebel nobles, where the king held his court for the time. The procuratory was produced; its seal, in particular, was duly scrutinized, and the validity of the document ascertained; and Lord Home then resigned the office in the duke's name (as duke) to JAMES IV. in person, and the king granted it to Lord Gray as the new feudal tenant. The transaction was recorded at Lord Gray's request in a formal notarial instrument of resignation and donation (produced, with the procuratory, from the Gray muniment room), drawn up by Andrew Macbrek, the king's chaplain and protonotary, who had witnessed the whole transaction and narrates it as just stated—including the facts of the production of the procuratory, the scrutiny of the seal, its recognition as a due and sufficient warrant for the resignation, the resignation itself to the king, and the subsequent gift to Lord Gray.—everything passing in the king's presence and with his cognizance, and in the presence of the assembled court—Lord Bothwell, Home, and others present, being leaders of the parliament which a few days before passed the Act Rescissory; and yet the title of duke is without the least scruple or hesitation given and applied to the resigner by all concerned, his enemies, and by the king himself, in his absence.† The claimant insisted that, a contract having been established between the king and the duke, and the duke having fulfilled his share in that contract, the duke was entitled to the full recognition by the king of his rights as duke, which recognition, he contended, was not withheld—such royal recognition involving, by Scottish law and usage, complete removal of every shadow of displeasure on the king's part, and rehabilitation even against the Act Rescissory, had such attached; while, independently of and beyond this, the notarial instrument of resignation and donation, together with the procuratory on which it proceeded, and which were the two leading documents and sole warrants for the transfer of the sheriffdom from the Lindsays to the Grays and for all that followed, and in which any illegality would have been fatal, proved that, by the testimony of JAMES IV. himself and the lords who figured in the transaction the dignity of Duke of Montrose had not been annulled by the Act Rescissory, passed by themselves on the 17th October previously.—But the noble and learned lords who addressed the Committee overruled the whole of this evidence on the ground that in the charter of the sheriffdom, the precept of seizin, and instrument of seizin that followed to Lord Gray—mere formal documents, executed out of the king's presence by the clerks of chancery—the resigner is styled "Earl of Crawford,"—and this, notwithstanding the claimant's previous remonstrance in argument, that in cases of such discrepancy the words of the charter must, especially by peerage law and practice, be controlled and corrected by the warrant, which was unquestionably the instrument of resignation and donation in the present instance; and further, that the question here was not that of the feudal right to the sheriffdom, but "which of the five writs constituting the series passed under the eye and with the personal cognizance of the sovereign, which can alone, by peerage law and practice, furnish the evidence required as to the king's personal recognition of the dignity,"—the only two deeds of importance in this point of view being the procuratory and the instrument of resignation and donation in question. The Lord Chancellor denied that the instrument of resignation and donation, drawn up by the king's notary, was "drawn up by the crown," and urged it as "not very likely that when the crown had got the sheriffdom surrendered, the crown would be very particular as to the title by which the party chose to designate himself who made the surrender,"—and both the Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards held that when the crown itself had to act—that is, in the subsequent charter and other papers executed in chancery, and out of the presence of the king and the duke—"the crown" (in Lord St. Leonards' words) "called him by his proper title of Earl of Crawford, and in effect rejected his title as Duke of Montrose."—I have given this statement rather more fully than I intended, lest it should be considered that I had not done justice to the reasoning of the noble and learned lords in rejecting this evidence.

Followed by the notary's attestation, "Presens interful, eaque omnia et singula sic fieri vidi, scivi, et audiui, ac in notam cepi," &c. MacBrek, the notary, was the King's chaplain and almoner, and protonotary, chancellor of the bishopric of Dunblane, a distinguished public official, and high in the confidence of the successful party in 1488, and especially of the Earl of Bothwell, at whose castle of Hailes the transaction took place.

* The protest was a private instrument, and can give no evidence as to the duke's legal style; but, having been adopted and urged against the claimant by the crown and the noble and learned lords who advised the Committee, the claimant is entitled to the benefit of the facts established by it in his favour, rightly and correctly stated and represented.

† The Duke's signature to the procuratory is as follows:—"D. Doik off Montrose." The seal bears the ducal arms and crest, with the inscription, "S. David, Ducis de Montro. . . .

3. The Duke of Montrose drew the revenues granted along with the dukedom, under the patent 18th May, 1488, during the interval between the passing of the Act Rescissory, 17th October, 1488, and the grant of the second creation, 18th September, 1489, this receipt being of right, not of allowance or favour; his receipt of these revenues during the interval in question further proving that the Act Rescissory had not affected the patent.—The receipt of these revenues was admitted, but no weight was allowed to the circumstance.

4. The Earldom of Glencairn, created within the same period and in pari casu in all respects with the Dukedom of Montrose, survived, unaffected by the Act Rescissory.—The claimant urged that, if such was the case, a fortiori the dukedom must stand untouched. I shall speak of the Glencairn case presently, after completing the general outline of the argument to which I here limit myself.

5. All the other grants of JAMES III. during the proscribed period which can now be discovered survived the Act Rescissory, and descended to the heirs according to the limitations, some of them being confirmed in the ordinary feudal manner applicable only (as by technical proof) to valid and unquestioned grants, and others surviving without confirmation,—the argument being, that all this proved the Act Rescissory to have been effete and a dead letter from the commencement, and thus absolutely null and void by the Scottish rule of Desuetude.—The survival of some of these grants was admitted by the crown, but represented as “cases of trifling moment, in which it was not thought worth while to divest the parties of their estates;” and the opposition, after exhausting Scotland in the search, failed to produce one single instance (for the Glencairn patent cannot be considered so, for reasons which will be shown) of the Act Rescissory itself taking effect, and only produced two cases, admittedly illegal, in which property granted by JAMES III. was seized and re-granted by JAMES IV., several months before the date of the Act, and which, as such, they apologised for; although Lord St. Leonards vindicated them in his address to the Committee as cases of resumption and re-grant “with the intention of the Crown, and with the knowledge of the Crown that those grants” (of JAMES III.) “would be defeated by parliament.”

6. Lastly, even if the general Act Rescissory had been effective, and had cut down the dukedom, that Act was annulled in its turn by a general Act Revocatory, passed by JAMES IV., with consent of parliament, in 1503-4, and by which he revoked “all donations, gifts, acts, statutes of Parliament or General Council, and all other things done by him in times bygone either hurtand his saul, his crown, or Holy Kirk,” under which Act Revocatory the Act Rescissory, with all its supposed consequences, necessarily fell, inasmuch as the rebels against JAMES III., were (as proved by a bull adduced) actually under sentence of excommunication by the Pope, INNOCENT VIII., as representing Holy Kirk, at the moment when they passed the Act Rescissory,—the claimant’s argument being that, if the Act Rescissory, expressed in general terms, could rescind dignities, the Act Revocatory, expressed in equally general terms, could a fortiori restore dignities, and ought to be held to do so in the case of the Dukedom of Montrose if credit is given to the earlier and obnoxious statute.—The Lord Chancellor treated this Act Revocatory as “a flourish of trumpets that meant nothing at all,” and “so loose” in its language that “it is impossible to say that grants or title deeds could possibly be in any way affected” by it, (which is precisely one of the claimant’s objections to the Act Rescissory); while Lord St. Leonards held that the phrase “Holy Kirk” only referred to a private chapel founded by JAMES IV.

II. Secondary Facts and Arguments.

These embrace the matter of the second grant of the dukedom in September, 1489, and the report to the Crown, or rather the speech of Lord Chancellor Loughborough, the report being in general terms—on the claim to the Earldom of Glencairn in 1797. Both the re-grant and the Glencairn report, in 1797, are admittedly immaterial to the question, if only the Act Rescissory did not cut down the original patent. They were considered by the Committee of Privileges as affording proof that such had been the case.

1. The Re-grant.—An Act of JAMES IV., with advice of parliament, exists on the Statute Book, dated 18th September, 1489, stating, that in consideration of the loyalty of David, Earl of Crawford and his predecessors hitherto towards the king’s predecessors and the king himself (thus proving that his loyalty to the Crown had undergone no interruption), and on account of services to be rendered in future times; and in consideration of the fact of the earl’s ancestors, the former Earls of Crawford, having held their possessions from ancient times by the title of

Earl (“titulo Comitatus”); therefore the king, with advice of his Great Council, changes the said “title of earl” into a greater and higher one, viz., that of duke—willing the grantee to enjoy the dukedom according to the form and tenor of the charter to be executed in favour of the said David, Duke of Montrose, in accordance with what has been premised—“super premissis conficiende.”* No registration of the charter thus ordered to be executed in order to give effect to the preceding grant exists; but there is in the Great Seal Register a brief and slovenly extract, seven lines and a half in length, interpolated, with erasures, and at the bottom of a page already occupied, and on that portion of it which by universal practice is left blank,—this extract purporting to describe a “Litera” (which the crown held to have been not a charter), stated to have been granted to the Earl of Crawford, creating him duke “pro toto tempore vite sue.” The claimant proved that these words constantly occur in patents preceding a limitation to heirs, and that from the language even of the extract itself (which ends with the words “cum omnibus clausulis secundum formam carte,” referring, as the claimant maintains, to the original patent of 1488, which is duly recorded in the register)† a limitation must legally be presumed to have been in the full document,—that a descent to heirs is implied in the Act on the Statute Book, which was the warrant for the charter which was to be drawn up in conformity with it (“super premissis conficiende”) and by which the charter (and a fortiori the abridged “Litera”) fell to be governed and interpreted,—and that, at all events, as the de novo grant does not proceed on a resignation of the existing dukedom (the indispensable preliminary, the narration of which was never omitted, and which cannot be presumed—all this being of strict obligation in peerages), it could not in any way affect the original patent, if not cut down by the Act Rescissory. The re-grant, the claimant contended, was virtually (there being, as premised, no resignation) a confirmation, according to feudal usage, proceeding upon a recognition and acknowledgment of the validity and subsistence of the original title; while, under any circumstances it conveyed a grant de novo of the dukedom, descendible to the duke’s heirs and to himself in that capacity.—The noble and learned lords, on the contrary, interpreted the Act, or warrant, on the Statute Book by the abridged “Litera,” (thus putting the cart before the horse, in violation of the fundamental principle of peerage law), and ruled that the re-grant was for life only, and that the duke (in Lord St. Leonards’ words) “acquiesced in the Act of 1489 . . . by accepting the re-grant limiting to him for life the same dignity,”—the argument from the non-resignation of the original dignity being overruled. It was a “mockery,” according to the noble and learned lord, “to talk of that” (the re-grant) “being a confirmation to the duke.”

2. Lord Loughborough’s speech and the Report on the Glencairn Case in 1797.—These I shall proceed to mention in sequence to the argument from the Glencairn precedent, in accordance with the programme to which I have restricted myself in this letter, and this will now occupy our more full attention.

The Ruling Glencairn Decision of 1648, binding on the House of Lords in 1853.

The dignity of Earl of Glencairn was granted by JAMES III. to Alexander, Lord Kilmaurs, by patent, on the 28th May, 1488, and thus must have perished on the 17th October that year, had the Act Rescissory affected it. The patent of 1488 is the only one in the Glencairn charter-chest, or on record. The grantee fell at the battle of Stirling, and his successors did not assume the dignity for some years,—it descended in them nevertheless, in virtue exclusively of the patent,—Cuthbert, Earl of Glencairn, grandson of the grantee, sat under it in parliament in 1504,—the patent was recognized and referred to by the Crown and the Supreme Civil Court in 1515-16,

* After praising the obedience, &c., of “David, Comes Craufurdie et Dominus Lindesay” and his ancestors, the grant proceeds as follows:—“Cum itaque predecessorum suorum, Craufurdie Comitum, digne recolenda prioritas titulo Comitatus suas dominaciones supradictas ab antiquis temporibus tenuerunt; hinc est quod . . . Rex eundem David . . . volens ampliori fulgore dignitate, et Comitatus titulum supradictum in majorem excelsioremque mutans, dictum David, . . . Ducem de Montrose, . . . sublimavit, fecit, creavit, et de novo erexit in Ducatum, Ducatusque nomine . . . volens ipsum gaudere . . . secundum formam et tenorem carte . . . dicto David, Duci de Montrose, super premissis conficiende.”

† The opposition maintained that the “Litera” was not a full and hereditary charter. If so, the “carta” here spoken of was necessarily the original patent.

1516-17,—and it was expressly decided to be the regulating and only patent of the dignity in 1648. Long contentions for precedence had taken place in the seventeenth century between the Earls of Glencairn and the Earls of Eglinton, the question turning exclusively on the point, whether the Act Rescissory had or had not cut down the patent of 1488; and in 1648 (as stated) it was finally decided, by the only competent authority, in the negative; and in obedience to that decree, bearing date the 19th January, 1648, the precedence was recognized as in Glencairn over Eglinton, and the Earl of Glencairn was ranked accordingly before the Earl of Eglinton in the sittings of parliament subsequently to the Restoration, and is so ranked in the Union Roll, called over ever since at the elections of the representative Scottish peers at Holyrood House. This decision, pronounced in foro contentiosissimo, and after eleven years' inquiry, proceeded from the Supreme Civil Court of Scotland, commonly called the Court of the Lords of Council and Session, or Court of Session, the sole legal tribunal in cases of honour, and from which there was no appeal either to king or parliament, down to the time of the Union; and the Court acted moreover, in this instance, on express reference from the Crown through the celebrated 'Decree of Ranking,' of 1606; parliament, moreover, having declined interference in this special Glencairn case (in 1641) as being incompetent. The judgment rules unchallenged and unchallengeable at the present day; and if the Act Rescissory did not destroy the Glencairn patent (so argued the claimant) it did not destroy that of Montrose.—All this evidence was overlooked or overruled by the Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards in the present claim. Finding that a (futile) attempt had been made by the parliament in 1649 (then in rebellion after the death of CHARLES I.) to overthrow the ruling decision of the Supreme Civil Court in 1648—confounding the legitimate and unquestionable jurisdiction of that Court (which they disallowed or misunderstood) with the incompetent and usurped action of the rebel parliament (parliament at no time having any jurisdiction in honours), and assigning to each an equal authority—the Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards swept away and rejected the decisions both of the one and of the other, as having been influenced (as they supposed) by political bias, so as to leave the question in debate open and still sub judice for an opinion of the House of Lords reported on a claim to the Earldom of Glencairn in 1797, and which they understood to have ruled that the patent fell under the Act Rescissory; from which opinion (treated as a judicial decision) they concluded and ruled further, that the Montrose creation had perished with that of Glencairn. The whole of this direction to the Committee was distinctly against the evidence before them, and in contempt of the authority of the Court of Session and of the Crown.

The circumstances of the report in 1797 were as follows:—The direct line of the Earls of Glencairn having failed in 1796, the heir general, Sir Adam Fergusson, claimed the earldom, founding on the patent, 28th May, 1488, alleging that it was unaffected by the Act Rescissory. The report to the Crown was expressed in general terms, simply declaring that Sir Adam had made himself out to be the heir general, "but hath not made out," i.e., in hoc statu, "the right of such heir general to the dignity of Earl of Glencairn." But some notes of the speech delivered by Chancellor Loughborough in advising the Committee of Privileges, and corrected by himself, were adduced and founded upon by the opposition in 1853. It appeared from these notes, that Lord Loughborough stated that he had "looked into the Decree pronounced" by the Supreme Civil Court on the contest for precedence in 1648, and that, although the patent of 1488 was among the documents produced, "the decree is not founded upon it,"—and that, under all the circumstances, "the creation cannot be referred to the patent, 1488." The claimant, in answer, showed by production of the Decree of 1648, itself, that Lord Loughborough's speech proceeded on absolute ignorance or misrepresentation of its contents, inasmuch as the Decree is founded on the patent, 1488, and nothing else—the fair inference being, that Lord Loughborough could only have seen some garbled extract from it—he pointed out the fact that the decree of the Court of Session in 1648 was not produced before the Committee of Privileges and is not in the Minutes of Evidence, and the Committee were thus in utter ignorance in 1797 of what had been decided in 1648, and of the documents on which the Court of Session then proceeded,—and the claimant further insisted (as previously) on the fact, that the Decree of 1648, founded on the patent, being final, proceeding from the only competent tribunal, in foro contentiosissimo and under direct reference from the Crown, and having stood in full force and validity ever since, and ruling the Glencairn and Eglinton precedence at the present moment, the question must be considered as having been settled then and for ever against the Act Rescissory, and in favour of the Glencairn patent, and nothing said or done in 1797 could affect it. The Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards, nevertheless, having (as already stated) ignored and overruled the claimant's evidence and argument to the foregoing effect, and holding that "the thing" remained "untouched by the decision of the Court of Session in 1648" (thus disallowing the authority of the Court of Session, even on reference from the Crown, in the matter)—advised the Committee that "the Glencairn decision in 1797" (so described, although appearing only from the notes referred to, not from the resolution) was a precedent "upon which" they might "rely with infinitely more satisfaction than upon what took place in the Court of Session and in parliament in the troublous times which occurred at the end of the reign of CHARLES I.," and ruled that that decision, which was "distinctly" (said Lord St. Leonards) "that the patent of 1488 was struck at and destroyed by the Act of 1488"—"binds" the house, and that Lord Loughborough was "perfectly justified in the case then before him, in putting an end to that claim." "The Glencairn case," said the Lord Chancellor, "entirely fails as a precedent, and ought not to have any influence with your lordships in the case." And "if precedents," said Lord St. Leonards, "are to occupy so large a portion of time" as this, "there is no reason why a claim of this sort should not last as many months instead of so many days." The Montrose case occupied ten days, the last being devoted to the speeches of the noble and learned lords who moved the Resolution. The Glencairn and Eglinton controversy of 1637-48 lasted, I would again remind you, eleven years!*

I may remark, in conclusion, that the Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards would, I think, have paused before committing themselves to such an enormous blunder as is involved in their treatment of the Glencairn case from first to last, if they had reflected that, in rejecting the judgment of 1648, which in reality "binds" the House of Lords not only in the Glencairn but the Montrose case,† they had to choose between the two horns of the following dilemma, viz.:—1. If the judgment does not stand, then Eglinton has precedence over Glencairn at the present moment, and the final decisions of the Supreme Civil Court of Scotland up to, and even since the Union, in peerage cases, are liable to be reopened and rescinded

* Lord St. Leonards, I may observe, adopted, and apparently without inquiry, Lord Loughborough's views as conclusive, not only on the Glencairn case, but on the question, for example, of the date of the commencement of the reign of JAMES IV., who, Lord Loughborough says, "was not held to be king from the second of February;"—"they took that day as the commencement of the new reign," &c. It is further important to recollect that the assertion that the "decision" or rather Report to the Crown in 1797 rejected the Glencairn patent, 1488, is based entirely on the notes taken of Lord Loughborough's speech as adduced by the crown, and not upon the Resolution, which, apart from those notes, would afford no grounds for such an assertion. And what the Committee thus relied on as adduced by the crown (and not put in evidence) was, by the rule they applied in rejecting the 'Minutes of Process' of the controversy in 1637-48 (as stated infra), not evidence, because coming from a private source.

† Such is the fact, if only on the rationes laid down by Lord Chancellor Brougham in moving the resolution in favour of the claimant to the Earldom of Waterford in 1832, viz.:—That a dignity or title of honour cannot be taken away (where there is no deficiency or corruption of blood) except by express words in an Act of Parliament (thus vindicating Lord Crawford's argument, in accordance with the Norfolk decision, that the dukedom could not have been annulled without specification).—That the decisions of the Irish House of Lords in peerage claims previously to the Union are binding upon the House of Lords as at present constituted, subsequently to the Union; from which it necessarily follows, that the decisions of the Scottish tribunal which was alone competent in peerage claims previously to the Union of Scotland and England, to wit, the Court of Session, are a fortiori binding on the House of Lords, as at present constituted subsequently to the Union with Scotland,—and, That Acts of parliament are to be construed not merely by the words of the Acts but by the decisions on them and the current of authorities, which may be said to have been all but imported into the words of the Acts; a ratio which equally proves the interpretation of the Act Rescissory by the Committee of Privileges in 1853 to have been unwarranted. For Lord Brougham's words, see the 'Report on the Montrose claim,' pp. 341, 372. And that the decisions of the Court of Session in claims to dignities were respected by the House of Lords, as binding on themselves, till near the close of the last century, may be seen by reference to the speeches in the Cassillis claim in 1762, printed by me in the same 'Report,' pp. 555, sqq. Lord Mansfield, for example, then stated, in reference to the case of the question of precedence between the Earls of Sutherland and Crawford in 1706, "the case was determined in the Court of Session in 1706, when there was an opposition on the same grounds, and the Court of Session had then most certainly a competent jurisdiction."

by the British House of Lords—which is against the Treaty of Union, and thus in every way an absurd and impossible supposition.—2. If the judgment of 1648 does stand, as by the Treaty of Union stand it must, then my father is Duke of Montrose.*

Such is the history of the Montrose claim up to the present moment. I have stated nothing here without full warrant. The evidence, the speeches of counsel, and the speeches of Lord Chancellor Cranworth and of Lord St. Leonards in moving the Resolution on this claim are given at large, with analyses, commentaries, and translations—the whole prefaced by an appeal to Her Majesty for justice—in my 'Report of the Montrose claim,' published in 1855.

The general result amounts to this,—that the whole of the claimant's pleas against the Act Rescissory were disregarded or overruled by the Committee of Privileges; and, while it was admitted that there had been no attainder, no resignation, and no special annulment of the Montrose patent, it was held that the general Act Rescissory—in spite of the qualification, in spite of the inductive clause being inapplicable, in spite of its being necessary to alter its words in order to make it apply, and in spite of the rationes laid down in the Norfolk judgment to the effect that no general Act could affect a dignity—had nevertheless the effect of cutting down the patent, simply because it was the intention of the parliament to make it do so, "parliament" (according to the Lord Chancellor) being "omnipotent," and competent (all consideration of justice and equity being set aside) to "destroy a peerage, or take a person's property, or do anything else,"—the ruling decision in favour of the Glencairn patent (in pari casu with the Montrose) in 1648, being altogether ignored and set aside.

It may be for others to determine whether the adverse Report of the House of Lords in 1853 proceeded, or the contrary, on misapprehension of the facts proved in evidence, and on misdirection as to the law governing the question at issue. The claimant holds the affirmative in this respect. He maintains, as before, in the face of this Report:

* In proof of what I have asserted in the text with regard to the Decree of 1649 being founded on the patent, 28th May, 1488, I may be excused for citing the following passage from it:—"And true it is that . . . Alexander, Lord Kilmaurs . . . was creat Earl of Glencairn be King JAMES THE THIRD of worthie memory upon the 28 day of May, 1488 years; be virtue of the whilk patent, Cuthbert, Earl of Glencairn . . . is designed be Decree of the Lords, the 12 March, 1604, Earl of Glencairn, . . . and sat in the parliament in 1505 as Earl, . . . Conform to the whilk Patents" (i.e. 'Literæ Patentæ,' there being no other patent in the case), "æderunt, and rights, the pursuer's hall predecessors of the House of Glencairn has bruikit" (i.e. enjoyed) "the title and dignity of Earls without question peaceably now be the space of seven or eight score years." This passage occurs as the principal and indeed the only "Reason" for the reduction of the erroneous ranking of Glencairn (through non-appearance) after Eglinton in the "Decree of Ranking" of 1606, which originated the whole contest between Glencairn and Eglinton, decided in 1648. And this "Reason" is fixed upon and recited in the futile and unwarranted Decree of Parliament (then in rebellion and at all times incompetent in honours) in 1649, with the counter allegation on behalf of Eglinton, to which weight is given in the opposite scale, that "the said Reason . . . was founded upon the said pretendit Patent granted in anno 1488; and true it is that pretendit patent was no valid ground, because the samin was revoked be King JAMES IV. and estates of Parliament in October 1488, and acknowledged to be revoked and acquiesced unto be unquihle Cuthbert, Lord Kilmaurs" (in not assuming the dignity); "notwithstanding of the whilk relevant allegiance, the foresaid Reason of Reduction was sustained and the Patent found" (that is, in the ruling Decree of 1648) "a good and valid evident, whilk in justice could not have been done."—The parliamentary Decree of 1649, utterly worthless for any other purpose, is thus valuable as showing that the valid and ruling Decree of 1648 proceeded on the Patent 1488, and as the claimant has stated, "on nothing else."

The ruling Decree of 1648, the parliamentary one of 1649, and the rankings in Parliament subsequently to the Restoration, and in the Union Roll, in obedience to the Decree of 1648, are all printed in the 'Minutes of Evidence,' and in my 'Report of the Montrose claim.'

I may add that the claimant had further proved by the original 'Minutes of Process,' or minutes of the entire proceedings between Glencairn and Eglinton and of the decisions of the Court from 1637 to 1648, preserved in the muniment room of the Earl of Eglinton, the representative of the unsuccessful competitor, and printed in the Addenda to the claimant's Supplemental Case (as also in my Report) that the pleadings were gradually narrowed and the question reduced in the course of the eleven years' discussion to the single and simple point, whether or not the Act Rescissory had cut down the Patent 28th May, 1488, which the Court finally decided in the negative,—this decision being followed by the final

That, if any of the grants of JAMES III. survived the Act Rescissory, all survived:—

That, if the Earldom of Glencairn, in particular, survived the Act Rescissory, the Dukedom of Montrose also survived:—And,

That, as it is admitted that no resignation of the Dukedom took place, and as nothing therefore could deprive the duke or his heirs of their legal right to the dignity if only the Act Rescissory did not, per se, without trial or inquiry, and without specification, cut the patent down—every other consideration and objection, misnomer, re-grant, dormancy, &c., being quite secondary and unimportant in law—then, on these grounds—the rationes in the Norfolk judgment pronounced in 1425, and the principle of strict interpretation of penal statutes (particularly in honours), falling ever to be kept in foremost view in this matter—and, above all, the standing Glencairn decision in 1648, by the only competent tribunal, acting as well by inherent right as under reference from the Crown, having settled the whole question beyond reversal in favour of the Glencairn patent, and necessarily of that of Montrose—the Committee, he submits, ought to have reported in favour of the Montrose patent of 1488 and against the Act Rescissory.

The claimant cannot tax either himself or his counsel with having contributed through any failure on their part to the misadventure of 1853. They did their utmost from the first to facilitate the inquiries of the Committee of Privileges—to put everything before them that could lighten their labours. And the Committee had one peculiar and unprecedented advantage. After disallowing the right of the Duke of Montrose (of the later creation) to oppose the claim (to which he was in every respect a stranger, his title being derived from a distinct source, the barony of Old Montrose), the Committee admitted the duke's cases as those of the Crown, and thus secured to themselves the full advantage of the ability and industry of and ruling Decree, dated that same day, the 19th January, 1648. These 'Minutes of Process' were objected to by the Crown and rejected by the Committee (as I have stated) when tendred in evidence by the claimant, as being nothing more than private minutes; but at least as much weight should have been assigned to them as to the notes of Lord Loughborough's speech, equally from a private source, and to which so much importance was attributed by the Lord Chancellor and Lord St. Leonards against the claimant. The Decree of 1649, proceeding on the patent 1488, needs, however, no such extraneous support. Its structure and rationes may be seen readily and at a glance by reference to the analysis which I have prefixed to it, as well as to the other documents in the Glencairn and Eglinton controversy in my 'Report' of the present claim.

In proof that the Court of Session decided in 1648 under reference from the Crown, and that the decision is thus binding in an English point of view, I may refer to the 'Decree of Ranking' under authority of the king and the privy council, 5th March, 1606 (printed in the 'Minutes of Evidence' and in my 'Report,') which proceeds upon a reservation to such persons as may think themselves aggrieved by it "to have recourse to the ordinar remeid of law be reduction before the Lords of Counsell and Session of this present Decree for recovery of their due place and ranks be production of mair ancient and authentic rights nor (than) has been used in the contrair of this process, summoning thereto all such persons,"—in pursuance of which reservation and direction Glencairn duly commenced the action against the Earl of Eglinton and others by a Summons, dated 16th August, 1637, a contemporary copy of which, preserved in the Eglinton muniment room, is printed in the claimant's Addenda to his Supplemental Case, and in my 'Report,' and which founds expressly upon the patent 1488, in almost the identical words which are affirmed in the Decree of 1648.

And in full proof, moreover, that, independently of any reference from the Crown, the Court of Session was invested with plenary jurisdiction in peerage cases, and exercised that jurisdiction, by inherent right, without appeal to king or parliament, previously to the Union, and specially in the year 1648—and moreover, that this ancient and unquestioned right and privilege of the Court, and the right and privilege of the subject to resort to that tribunal in prosecution of such claims, was reserved to the Court and the subject by the Treaty of Union, and have never been rescinded or modified—and that these rights and privileges have been exercised, with recognition on the part of the Crown and legislature, since the Union, and are not dormant—I may refer to a "Narrative and Inquiry, illustrating the origin and extent of the jurisdiction of the Court of Session in civil causes, including peerages, previously to the Revolution of 1688 and the Union; the rights of the Court and of the subject as affected by the Treaty of Union; and the origin, growth, and character of the intervention of the House of Lords (whether as an appellate court or as acting on reference from the Crown) in Scottish cases," prefixed by me to my 'Report' of the Montrose case, pp. LII, sqq.

his Grace's counsel in addition to the services of the Attorney-General of England, and the Lord Advocate of Scotland. The Committee had thus every opportunity of forming a just and impartial judgment. And if they made mistakes as to matters of fact as proved by evidence, and treated the ancient and accepted maxims of peerage law as obsolete, I can only account for the former misfortune by the decision having been given before the 'Minutes of Evidence' had been printed, and for the latter by the inexperience of the noble and learned lords who advised the Committee in peerage and Scottish law, as evinced by their observations throughout the pleadings and their speeches in moving the resolution; while an impatience as to time, a continually betrayed contempt of the claim, and a predisposition to accept the views of the opposition, completed the combination of influences to which the claim thus far fell a sacrifice.*

I have only further to remark that the resolution of the House of Lords on a peerage claim is not a legal judgment, final and conclusive, but a mere report to the sovereign of their opinion and advice in the matter;† and it is open to the claimant to demand a reconsideration of his claim, grounded on a more careful examination of the evidence adduced, and a more just application of the law governing the case.‡

I pause here. That my complaint of injustice—which is not the less firm and decided because I urge it by proof and remonstrance, rather than by invective—is not unwarranted, may appear from the following letter, addressed to the representative of the Lindsays of Virginia by the learned Chief Judge of the United States' Court of Claims, the Hon. J. J. Gilchrist, to whom that gentleman had sent a copy of my 'Report' of the claim:—

"Willards, 12th March, 1856.

"My dear Sir,

"You must be aware that it is impossible within the limits of a letter to make a critical analysis of the mass of matters contained in the 'Report of the Montrose Claim.' It would give

* Lord Redesdale, Chairman of Committees of the House of Lords, alone, attempted to keep the true bearing of the various facts, as appearing from the evidence, before the eyes of the Committee of Privileges during the discussion. His observations are collected together in the 'Report,' p. cxxxvi.

† "The resolutions of the House of Peers, in claims to dignities upon a reference from the Crown, are merely for the purpose of information; nor can they be considered as judgments in any sense of the word. And, though the Crown has generally acted in conformity with such resolutions, yet it is clearly not bound by them." "In cases of this kind the Lords have no jurisdiction, and do not pronounce any judgment, but only certify their opinion to the king." "The king is in no case absolutely and finally bound by the Resolutions of the House respecting claims to dignities."—Cruise on Dignities.

‡ "The king," says Cruise, "in whom the entire jurisdiction over dignities is placed, may refer the case again to the House of Peers or elsewhere; and may ultimately act according to his own discretion, in assenting or not to their resolutions; and there are some instances where the Crown has granted a second reference, upon which the Lords have come to a resolution directly contrary to their former one." See, for example, the case of the Dukedoms of Dover and Brandon, 'Report of the Montrose Claim,' pp. LXXII, sqq.

me great pleasure to study the case faithfully, and to examine it thoroughly; but the engrossing nature of my duties forbids it.

"The 'Report' affords a study of deep interest to all who are fond of historical investigations, and of tracing back to remote ages the fortunes of the distinguished families whose story is so admirably told in the 'Lives of the Lindsays.' I entirely sympathise with the feelings which prompted the eloquent language of Lord Chief Justice Crewe,—"I suppose there is no man, who hath any apprehension of gentry or nobleness, but his affection stands to the continuance of so noble a name and house, and would take hold of a twig or twine thread to uphold it." But the claim of the Earl of Crawford stands on a firmer basis than mere sentiment. Without pretending to a knowledge of English Peerage Law, which lies out of the path of legal investigation in this country, I cannot understand how the House of Lords reached the result that the patent of the 18th May, 1488, was invalid, and that the 'Act Rescissory' should be sustained. The reasoning against the 'Act Rescissory' seems to me conclusive—unless there be some mysterious art necessary to be applied in the construction and effect of an Act relating to dignities which does not obtain in construing other statutes. The 'Act Rescissory' seems to me to be as dead as the members of the parliament that enacted it. Without undertaking to enter into the argument, I conceive that the facts, firstly, that all the grants of JAMES III, survived the Act, and were not impaired by it, and secondly, that the Earldom of Glencairn, a case precisely in point, and a precedent for this, was held not to have been affected by it, furnish sufficient evidence of the claim made by the Earl of Crawford. I can understand why parvenu peers should be unwilling to see their honours overshadowed by the men of the times of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR; but I cannot so readily apprehend the reason why peers of ancient creation should so strenuously combine to resist a claim to a peerage simply because, if successful, the claimant will take precedence of them. The true theory of the British Peerage seems to me to be, that it is the connecting link between the memories and traditions of the past and the realities of the present. A just and proper conservatism is more consonant to the habits, the tastes, and the education of the English than the feverish desire for progress which characterises the Americans. We have been trained and educated in a Republic, while all the associations of the English are with a Monarchy. A form of government which people have inherited from their ancestors cannot be put off like a garment. A ready-made republic would suit the English as little as a ready-made monarchy would suit us. With this conviction, if I were a British peer, of ancient historical descent—which certainly, in relation to the individual, is the most magnificent position a man can occupy—I should gladly aid the revival of ancient honours, even though they should throw my own into the shade. I should feel that, whatever I might lose in that regard, I should gain in the increased lustre of the body to which I belonged. The selfishness of the opposition to the Earl of Crawford's claim therefore surprises me, and its extreme narrowness no less. I trust that Her Majesty will take a more enlarged view of the case than the House of Peers seem able to appreciate. My remarks and views upon this subject must be crude and imperfect, but, such as they are, they are much at your service.

"Very sincerely yours,

"J. J. GILCHRIST."

An opinion like this, so noble and just in its general sentiments, and pronounced from a point of view apart from the prejudice and passion which influence us on this side of the Atlantic, reads, I humbly submit, like the judgment of posterity."

I remain, dear Sir Bernard,

Your obliged and faithful servant,

LINDSAY.

BARONAGE OF IRELAND.

In addition to the PEERAGES of IRELAND by Creation, included in the body of this work, a MS., entitled Baronage of Ireland (Ulster's Office), gives the following lists of Barons of Ireland by Tenure, and by Writ of Summons. It would appear, however, that these Writs of Summons did not, as in England, create hereditary peerages descendible to heirs-general. The subject is very ably discussed in LYNCH's Feudal Dignities, from which we make the following extracts:—

"It seems to be now admitted that from the reign of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to the middle of the thirteenth century at least, the dignity of Baron in England was annexed to territorial possessions derived from the crown, for which the grantee was bound to render homage, fealty, and military or honorary services. To these possessions there was annexed a right of holding courts, or the civil and criminal jurisdiction as it has been called, which right sometimes passed with the seigniority as an incident without being expressly named: but more generally was specially granted by the words, 'justitiam,' 'curiam,' or 'socha' and 'sacha, infangthef and outfangthef,' &c. In such courts justice was administered by the Baron to his tenants and vassals, or those under him. Besides attending the king in his wars with the number of knights reserved by his tenure to the crown, the baron, as its vassal, was bound to attend the king's court, or 'Curia Regis.' This court, at first held at stated periods in each year, was afterwards extended to the Magnum Concilium, or Commune Concilium, to which the king summoned his barons, for their advice and consent, at such times and on such occasions as his exigencies required. When extra-feudal services were agreed on by the barons in this court, the consent of their tenants or vassals was also sought by the lords of such seigniories in the respective Courts Baron; and in the possession of one of those seigniories as a Feodum Nobile, with its incident service of attending the Curia Regis or Commune Concilium, originated the dignity of the Feudal Peerage.

"For so far the origin of those dignities in England and Ireland seems perfectly similar; but in or about the forty-ninth year of HENRY the Third, an alteration was effected in the rights of the English Baronage, by which it was established that no person should attend Parliament, or the Commune Concilium, without express writs from the king, and such writ, with a sitting in consequence, has since been held to have vested in the person so summoned, and his heirs lineally, an hereditary barony. This alteration however was not extended to Ireland.

"The effects of a writ of Summons were so well known in Ireland at the end of the seventeenth century, that at a period when the state of public affairs would not admit of the necessary time for preparing patents in due form, King JAMES the Second, wishing to confer peerages on Thomas Nugent, second son of the Earl of Westmeath, John Bourke, second son of the Earl of Clanrickarde, and Sir Alexander Fitton, addressed his special summons to them, and commanded their presence at the Parliament to be held in Dublin on the 7th May following, with others his Prelates, Magnates, and Proceres of that kingdom; but knowing that mere summons to Parliament could not in Ireland effect an hereditary peerage, and that even in England at that time the law could scarcely be considered as settled on the point, King JAMES added a clause of creation for that purpose in the following words:—'Volumeus etiam vos et heredes vestros masculos de corpore vestro legitime exeuntes Barones Nugent de Riverston in comitatu Westmidie existere.' There is but one other instance of a similar creation, namely, that of Henry Bromfiel, who was created Baron de Vessy in England by a clause inserted in the summons which HENRY the Sixth directed to him. It must be added that those three letters of summons being known to operate as creations, they were duly entered on the Chancery Rolls, while none of the other instruments of summons for that Parliament appear to have been made matter of record.

"In fact, an usage has prevailed in Ireland in this respect as in many others; and though it may now be considered as an usage peculiar to that country, yet it is really but the observance of that law or custom in favour of heirs-male which long prevailed in England, and which was introduced into Ireland with all the other feudal institutions by King HENRY the Second."

With these few introductory remarks of a very learned Peerage Lawyer, we will proceed with the MS. entitled "Baronage of Ireland," in Ulster's office:

BARONS ARE OF THREE KINDS, NAMELY,—

- (1) By Tenure (who, in regard thereof, ought to be summoned to Parliament).
- (2) By Writ of Summons.
- (3) By Creation, or Letters Patent.

Barons by Tenure were of old the king's principal tenants, or freeholders, who holding any honour, castle, or manor of the king in capite by barony (per integrum Baroniam) were called his barons majores, having their titles usually from their principal seats, or heads of their baronies, and continued to be the only barons summoned to parliament until the 49th year of King HENRY III. (1265), when that king, having overcome the rebellious barons in the battle of Evesham, called a parliament, in order to have such of them as were slain, taken prisoners, or escaped, attainted and disinherited; but the number of his faithful barons being small, he supplied their number with other persons of known worth, wisdom, and repute, who, by means thereof, were thenceforth barons by Writ, although they had no possessions that were honorary baronies (Selden, p. 715), for they were only the tenants in capite, which were no real barons, yet were often called to great councils, as barons, peers (Brady agst. Petyt, pp. 68, 82, &c.), and this continued to be the practice until King RICHARD II., in the 11th year of his reign (1388), introduced the creation of barons by Letters Patent.

A perfect list of barons by Tenure and Writ is not to be expected; the loss of the ancient records and summons to parliament renders such a list impossible to be compiled at this day. The following must suffice. The order of time cannot be observed, the barons being differently placed in different parliaments, but where the year is mentioned they appear possessed of their baronies:—

- RICHARD DE CLARE (surnamed Strongbow), EARL OF PEMBROKE, } LORD OF LEINSTER, AND CONSTABLE OF IRELAND, 1172,
By marriage with Eva, the only dau. of McMurgh, King of Leinster, whose inheritance King HENRY II., granted to him consisting of the province of Leinster, in which were contained Wexford, Kildare, Kilkenny, Ossory, and Catherlogh. He d. in May, 1177, and left an only dau. and heir, Isabel, who being married to
- WILLIAM MARESCHAL, now Marshall (Mareschal to the King), he became EARL OF PEMBROKE, } LORD OF LEINSTER, AND LORD MARSHAL OF IRELAND, 1207,
Having then a grant of the whole province of Leinster. He d. 16 March, 1219, having issue, five sons and five daus. His sons, William, Richard, Gilbert, Walter, and Anselme, all succeeded to the Earldom of Pembroke and Lordship of Leinster, the last of whom dying s. p. 21 December, 1245 (30th HENRY III.), the title of Pembroke became extinct, and the Lordship of Leinster was divided amongst the five daus., viz., (1) Maud, who being m. to Hugh le Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, had issue,
- ROGER LE BIGOD, EARL OF NORFOLK, } LORD OF CATHERLOGH AND MARSHAL OF IRELAND, 1245,
In right of his mother upon his uncle's death. He was s. by his nephew, Roger, Earl of Norfolk and Lord of Catherlogh, who dying s. p. in 1306 (35th EDWARD I.), that king gave the earldom, marshalship, and all his lands to his own eldest son by his 2nd wife,
- THOMAS PLANTAGENET DE BROTHERTON, EARL OF SUFFOLK, } LORD OF CATHERLOGH, 1306,
He d. in 1337 (12th EDWARD III.), leaving his eldest dau. and co-heir,
- MARGARET DE BROTHERTON, } LADY OF CATHERLOGH, 29 SEPTEMBER, 1397,
